This is the season of the year when merchants use the wire more than at any other time and to have the night service taken from them places them at a disadvantage; then, too, should serious accident or sickness or death take place, making it necessary to communicate with the outside world at points where there are no phones, nothing could be done till the following morning, however serious the case might be.

Let our merchants and professional men think these matters over; they are matters in which all are personally interested; it appeals to all alike as a business proposition and as a social proposition; let all talk and work to the end that a telegraph office may be established here which will give service when service is actually required.

COMMISSIONERS MEET

The County Commissioners were in session last Monday, going over road and bridge matters and listening to a report from an agent of the Pauly Jail Company. On account of the absence of State Superintendent of Highways, W. S. Keller, who is detained in North Alabama, the court did not open the bids advertised for, but decided to continue the call for bids till Oct. 11th, when Mr. Keller will be present (see legal advertisement elsewhere in this issue). The representative of the Pauly Jail Company submitted bids for renovating the jail in accordance with the requirements of Dr. Oates, State Examiner of Jails. Among the things required is a better system of sewerage, installation of hot and cold water, etc.; these things were deferred till a future meeting when action will be taken.

OPEN UP THE STREET

A NUISANCE AS IT NOW EXISTS.

The street running just to the west of the Sheriff's home—Sixth street—almost directly in front of the Court House, seems to be used as a camping and horse-swapping ground for the gypsies when here; at other times it is crowded with wagons and teams so that members of the Sheriff's family, when they wish to leave home must either wind about among mules, horses and steers or else take to the alley way. Visitors to the home of the Sheriff—or any one wishing to go south of the Sheriff's home from Main street are forced to adopt similar tactics. As we understand it this is Town property, layed off for a street, but never regularly opened. Now that the Sheriff's home is located on this street and that section of the town is rapidly building, it behooves the City Council to either open up this thoroughfare or else pass an ordinance forbidding the indiscriminate hitching of teams there. Fact is it would be well to pass a "blanket ordinance" against hitching teams along the sidewalks of the town. We saw a young man dismount last week from a horse, tie the animal to a telephone pole and go into a store, where he remained half an hour. In the meantime a dozen ladies were forced to take to the middle of the street because the horse had taken possession of the sidewalk.

Again, we saw one of Clanton's most popular matrons forced into the middle of a muddy street because several teams were hitched right plunk up on the sidewalk. The lady in question wore white silk or canvass shoes and no doubt had them ruined because of the indifference of officers or the inefficiency of the laws to protect pedestrians.

Let's be town like, even if it does come awkward to some of us. Don't force the ladies to take to the road and give the sidewalks to the mules. What says the Mayor and Council?

When you make your own clothes you want the very best quality of goods for your money, don't you?

And you want an attractive line of patterns and colors to select your own special design from, don't you?

Well, these wants of the home dressmaker are just what we had in mind when we bought our new stock of dress goods.

When you make your own clothes you can afford the best materials. The labor cost on good material or poor material is just the same.

You can get trimmings to match in our store.

WHAT CLANTON NEEDS

NOW BOTTLED UP FROM OUTSIDE WORLD.

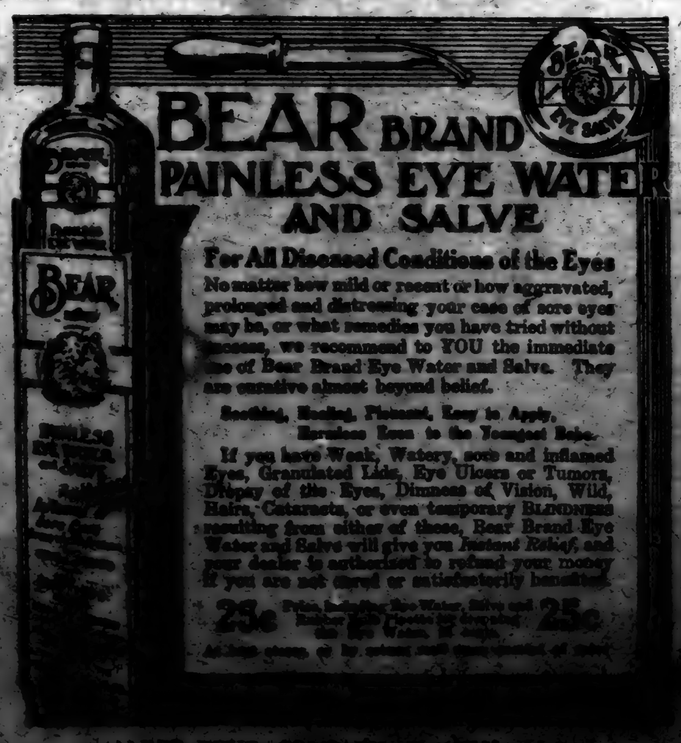
It would be a long, tedious, almost impossible, task to enumerate the many things which Clanton needs, but the recent action of the railroad makes it evident that we need one thing and need it badly. It is also almost certain that Clanton can get that one thing needful if she will go out after it. For some reasons Clantonites do not pull together; they do not seem to realize the truth of that old Roman maxim that in union there is strength. Never was a better opportunity presented to demonstrate its truth and at the same time accomplish something good for the town.

No one would be foolish enough to say that the railroad in a spirit of spite moved the night office from this place to Cooper, but the fact remains that we now have no night telegraphic communication with the outside world—we are, so to speak, "bottled up good and proper."

Last Friday orders came instructing two of the three operators here to report to Cooper on the following Sunday for duty; this order gave Mr. M. L. White, who works "trick" No. 1, preference as to whether he should go to Cooper and work eight hours a day or remain in Clanton and work twelve hours. Should he decide to go to Cooper, that would leave either Mr. Luckie or Mr. Denson here to work twelve hours, but in any event the night office will be closed so that after sunset Clanton will be cut off from the world in so far as telegraphic communication is concerned.

This makes a great difference in the commercial as well as the social life of a town. Clanton is too large and too important a place not to have a telegraph office divorced entirely from the railroad service.

Many times messages of vast importance are delayed because of the fact that the operator on duty is busy with railroad matter.



If Clanton would get together one time and pull together one time, there is little reason to doubt that the Western Union would open an up-town office of its own.

The telephone system is not the best in the world either; it is just as good as it can be considering the salary paid its employees, but the two being under the same control could easily be combined under one management to the betterment of the service and to the great advantage of Clanton as a whole.

As it now stands, we have no telegraph service at night and an extremely poor telephone service; with the two combined at a convenient point the advantages would be greatly multiplied and the inconveniences decreased.

This is the season of the year when merchants use the wire more than at any other time and to have the night service taken from them places them at a disadvantage; then, too, should serious accident or sickness or death take place, making it necessary to communicate with the outside world at points where there are no phones, nothing could be done till the following morning, however serious the case might be.

CLANTON PRESS

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE

VOL. 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1912 NO. 27

MRS. WOODROW WILSON.

Wife of the Democratic Presidential Nominee. Honorary President of the Woman's National Democratic League.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the new leader of Democracy and probable next mistress of the White House, is perhaps the most interesting woman in the United States today. This is inevitable—not because she wishes it so, for she does not—and is as firm as a rock in her conviction that being the wife of a public man does not necessitate nor call for a woman's becoming a publicity seeker. She successfully resisted all appeals of photographers and interviewers until Mr. Wilson's nomination as Democratic candidate for the presidency was an fait accompli. This modesty is easily traced to her southern ancestry and training and is characteristic also of her distinguished husband.

She was born Ellen Louise Axson, daughter of a Presbyterian divine of Rome, Ga., whose family, so far as he knows, is the only one of the name in America.

Like Mr. Wilson, she has one brother and one sister living, all in the same literary circle as the doctor and herself.

In the atmosphere of learning Mrs. Wilson could hardly be expected to be other than she is—widely read, broadminded and charitable, devoted to her home and the principles for which it stands.

She has marked ability as an artist, and it is said that a portrait painter ability was spoiled when she married the young barrister who had then given up the practice of his profession to specialize on the subject that has made him a presidential nominee.

Mrs. Wilson's three daughters—Misses Margaret Woodrow Wilson, Jessie Woodrow Wilson and Eleanor Randolph Wilson—possess the mental characteristics of their father and their mother's artistic temperament, combined in such a way as to give zest to every moment of their lives and protect them from the foibles of the world. They form, indeed, an ideal family circle, one that it would be well for every American household to emulate.

GOVERNOR WOODROW WILSON.

Democratic Nominee For President of the United States.

ABOUT IT CHILTON VOTERS?

It will be remembered that Mr. Roosevelt in his speech at Chicago as well as elsewhere, and also in private conservation, made public statements repeatedly expressed himself as favorable to woman suffrage. Now notice, please, you voters of Chilton county, the exact question is WOMAN suffrage. It's true God made woman and man called the lady, but in the common acceptance of the term these days WOMAN covers all classes of humanity, while the expression is confined to quite a limited class.

Nevertheless, Roosevelt is in favor of WOMAN suffrage. He has declared himself repeatedly.

Let's take a look at one of the BULL MOOSE platform planks for a few moments. It reads thus:

"The Progressive party, believing that no people can justly claim to be a true democracy which denies people rights on account of sex, pledges itself to the task of securing equal suffrage to men and WOMEN alike."

Another reads this way:

"The Progressive party, believing that a free people should have the power, from time to time, to adapt their fundamental laws so as to adapt it progressively to the changing needs of the people, pledges itself to provide a more simple and expeditious method of changing the FUNDAMENTAL constitution."

Now read these two planks in the Progressive platform if you please; put them alongside Mr. Roosevelt's public statement that the negro from West Virginia is the equal of any white man; remember that at the same time he made this statement he also stated that the negro of the South was not fit forself government, and that he therefore kicked him out of the Chicago Bull Moose Convention; bear in mind that he also said it was for the good of the SOUTHERN negro that he was kicked out, but as soon as he (the negro) qualified himself to vote and hold office he would be welcomed into the Progressive party; remember also that Roosevelt said he proposed to build up a party in the South, and so elevate the negro, that, in a few years he (the negro) would be able to take part in politics and attend conventions and hold office. These, mind you, are Roosevelt's public expressions, and are the promised fulfillment of the Progressive platform.

Now, lets go a little further:

Upon what does Mr. Roosevelt propose to build up a party in the SOUTH which will FIT the NEGRO for taking part in politics or which will qualify him to hold office? The answer is plain. Either upon the WHITE men of the SOUTH, whose duty it shall be to elevate the negro by association and otherwise, or else upon the NEGRO of the North, by following whose example the Southern negro shall become qualified to be assimilated and taken into the Progressive party.

He must—MUST—build his party with southern WHITE men to qualify the NEGRO. This is his avowed plan. Will the SOUTHERN WHITE men consent to become the tool of Mr. Roosevelt in elevating the NEGRO to an equality with himself? WILL HE? Mr. Roosevelt says he will, and that he proposes to use the southern white man for that purpose.

We do not believe that any thinking SOUTHERN man will consent to be used as a TOOL to foster and promote Mr. Roosevelt's ideas when it comes to assisting in the elevation of a NEGRO to a station as high as that occupied by himself. No, we don't believe one word of that, and yet Mr Roosevelt believes it so firmly that he makes his open boasts that in the near future he proposes to admit the southern negro into his party BECAUSE, by using the white man of the South, the negro will become qualified! Isn't that statement an insult to every southern white man and a rebuke to the southern followers of the great office seeker? Nevertheless, it is his words.

Once more:

The first plank of the platform quoted above states that he and his party believe in equal suffrage for MEN and WOMEN alike.

Great shades of Andy Jackson!

Not only going to give the vote to the negro man, which the white men of Alabama fought so valliantly to take away from him to the end that this might be a government of WHITE MEN, but he proposes to go even further and give votes to NEGRO WOMEN!

How can the bones of Lee, Jackson, Johnston and Morgan lay quietly in their lowly graves when such utterances are made?

What say the white men, the white women, of the South to such a proposition? Elevate the NEGRO to an equality with themselves, and then give the negro women a vote! That's the platform and to that the Progressive party is solemnly pledged. It's the words of the leader and the printed message of the leaders to the humble voters of the country. No denying it, for it's printed in their platform in bold, distinct type; it is unequivocally uttered on the stump and proclaimed in the forum as a part and parcel of the avowed determination of the Pregressive party.

Just here we might appropriately steal one of Congressman Blackmon's illustrations and see how this would work:

Mary, a coal black suffragette, is the servant of Mrs. Smith, a lady of quality and large family. There is much work to be done about the house on the morrow for Mrs. Smith expects company; the house is to be "tidied" and a swell dinner prepared. Mrs. Smith, at the close of the day reminds Mary of the work scheduled for the morrow and requests her to come a little earlier than usual in order that everything may be in readiness for the expected company.

"Laws a mercy, Mrs. Smiff," says Mary, yer sholy doesn't speck me to come here ter-morrer does yer? Why, don't yer know tomorrer's 'lection day and Mr. Rosenfeld has dun give us our suffage back ergin? I'se gwine up to dem poles as soon as ever dey is open and I'se gwine ter stay right nex to dem poles till de news cum down; its a long time since I had eny suffage and I specks to take acvantage of dis here time; nome, I can't be here termorrer, Mrs. Smiff, its 'lection day, hit is."

Comment is unnecessary; reasoning is useless.

Just one word, however: Mary does go to the polls, she stays there until the polls close and Mrs. Smith stays at home, does the house work, prepares the dinner and does NOT vote; Mary does vote, DOES she?

Girl, vote? No WOMEN

whom? the Marys, or the Mrs. Smiths? Which? Ask yourselves, not Roosevelt. You know the conditions in the South, he does not.

But, says some one, that cannot be accomplished in this state where we have the negro already eliminated. No!

Then read the other plank. He proposes also to make it EASY to change the CONSTITUTION—the fundamental law. WHY? So he can overturn our state election law and insert a clause in the NATIONAL CONSTITTTION providing not only for WOMAN suffrage but restoring to the negro man his vote. That's his plain, unequivocal statement. When once in the FEDERAL Constitution, the state law would be invalidated and future laws looking to the disfranchisement of the negro men and negro women, would be unconstitutional.

Ye Gods of ancient Greece! What does Roosevelt propose and what are our BULL MOOSE Southern men assisting him to do?

Building up a party to enfranchise the negro men and to make the negro women the equal of our mothers and sisters and daughters!

Never, never, never! SOUTHERNERS are not going to stand for that Mr. Roosevelt!

A few place hunters may follow you into this degrading scheme, and assist you to redeem your diabolical pledge against the white men and women of the South, but there will be but few, awfully few Mr. Roosevelt. You misunderstand southern men Mr. Roosevelt; you have made a promise which you cannot redeem. We will not stultify ourselves to assist you to office, nor will our SOUTHERN men become your puppets to be moved about upon the political chess board at your beck and call, in order that OUR women may be dragged down from the exalted position which they now hold and made the equal of negro women. No, you can't do that Mr. Roosevelt. We have, in this country, made woman the guardian and ornament of society and we propose to revere her as such. Neither you, or your party, Mr. Roosevelt, can bring her down with your schemes to enfranchise the negro, nor can you elevate the negro to the lofty pedastal upon which, with love, respect and reverance, we have placed our mothers, wives, sisters and daughters.

You have gone too far in your claims of "progressiveness;" you cannot progress in that direction with the consent, or votes of the men of the South.

SHAME upon you Mr. Roosevelt, for ever thinking that you could.

ATTORNEYS CURRY AND SMITH ON THE PRESS.

WHAT THEY THINK CONCERNING THE CASE AGAINST MR. EDWARD MARTIN.

Editor Press:—While the undersigned do not believe that the public press is the forum in which to try cases that are pending in the courts, we feel that we would be remiss in our duty to our client as well as our duty as citizens who believe in a full and fair administration of the law, to withhold our condemnation of the methods resorted to by the friends of Mr. C. W. Cox, whose unfortunate death, all regret, to poison the minds of the people of this county against Mr. Ed Martin who [illegible] necessary to [illegible] in order to [illegible] upon the [illegible] of Chilton county [illegible] and having the same published in The Press, were inspired by no other motive than to attempt to prejudice the public mind against Martin. The publishing of that opinion could have no other possible effect. In the first place the giving of such an opinion was contrary to time honored rules of professional ethics, and would not be sustained by either the Bar or the Judiciary of Alabama. It was destined to engender public sentiment against the defendant, and thereby deprive him of that Constitutional right of a fair and impartial trial which the constitutional laws of Alabama guarantee to her citizens.

The opinions of a Judge, so far as the law in a case is concerned, may be correct, but his conclusions as to the evidence, may not be any more safe or sound than the conclusions of any other intelligent man. We simply ask in behalf of Martin that public opinion be suspended until a jury of twelve honest and intelligent citizens render their verdict on the facts after hearing the evidence. Knowing the citizens of this county as we do, we are confident that they will join with us in protesting against such unfair methods.

Respectfully,
THOS. A. CURRY,
A. C. SMITH.

MY LADY OF DOUBT

BY RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "Love Under Fire," "My Lady of the North," etc.

Illustrations by HENRY THIEDE.

COPYRIGHT, A. C. McCLURG & CO., 1911

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose.

CHAPTER VIII.

Tangling Threads.

My surprise at this unexpected reference to the Lady of the Blended Rose, almost prevented utterance. What could this partisan ranger know of the girl? How could he even have identified her from my vague reference?

"Why do you say that?" I asked eagerly. "I did not mention the lady's name."

"There was no cause for you to do so," and the grim mouth smiled. "No one else in Philadelphia would have turned the trick so neatly; besides the fact that your opponent was Grant would have revealed the identity of the girl."

"You know them both then?"

"Fairly well; he was a boy in these parts, an' I have shod his riding horse many a time. A headstrong, domineering, spoiled lad he was, and quarrelsome."

"But Mistress Mortimer," I interrupted, "is her family also from this neighborhood?"

"To the northeast of here, near Locust Grove; the properties of the two families adjoin each other, an' I have heard there is distant kinship between them, although if that be true all that was good in the strain must have descended to the one branch, an' all the evil to the other. Day and night could be no different. Colonel Mortimer is a genial, pleasant gentleman, an' a loyal friend, although we are in arms against each other. To tell the truth I half believe his heart is with the Colonies, although he cast his fortunes with the King. He even has a son in the Continental Army."

"On Lee's staff," I interrupted. "The daughter told me he was a twin brother."

"Yes, an' as great a rogue as the girl, with the same laughing blue eyes."

"And Mistress Claire," I questioned, "on which side is she?"

"Can you ask that after having met her as a Lady of the Blended Rose? Pshaw, man, I could almost give you a list of the loyalist dames who make sport for the British garrison, an' Mistress Claire is not least in rank or beauty among them. What else could you expect of a young girl when her father wears the green an' white, while her lover has made a reputation hereabout with his hireling raiders?"

"You mean Grant?"

"Certainly; they have been engaged from childhood, though God pity the poor girl if they ever marry. His work in the Jerseys has been almost as merciless as that of 'Red' Fagin, an' it is even whispered about they ride together at times. I doubt if she knows the whole truth about him, though she can scarcely deem him an angel even at that. Surely you never supposed her on our side?"

"She helped me," I insisted, "knowing who I was, and even said she wished my cause well."

"The inconsistency of a woman; perhaps the two had had some misunderstanding, an' she was glad enough to outwit the fellow."

"No, I was not that, I am sure; I could read truth in her eyes."

"In Claire's eyes!" he laughed outright. "Oh, I know the innocent blue of them, and warn you not to trust such blindly. Other men have thought the same, an' found out they read wrongly when the end came—ay! many of them. When she was but a slip of a lass I found out her eyes played merry tricks, an' yet I love her as though she were my own daughter. An' she's a good girl in spite of all the mischief in her."

"And she is true a loyalist?"

"If not, I know no better. The rebel blood is all in the boy so far as I can learn, yet I will not answer for what Mistress Claire might do."

We fell silent, my memory with the girl endeavoring to recall her every words, the expression of her face, as she was not in my heart to believe she had deceived me.

I had almost forgotten where I was, as well as the presence of my companion, when he suddenly arose to his feet, and, pushing aside the wooden window shutter, looked out. A glance of his keen eyes was sufficient.

"Get back into your box, Major," he exclaimed quickly. "Pull the papers over you."

I was upon my feet, conscious of the distant sound of horses' hoofs.

"What is it? The enemy?"

"Rangers; fifty of them, I judge, an' they'll never pass here without rummaging around. Quick now, under cover."

"But what about yourself?"

"Don't worry about me; those fellows haven't any evidence against me—yet. They're after you."

I was through the intervening door with a bound and an instant later had burrowed under the crumpled papers. The shifting of the sun had left this corner of the repair shop in shadov but I was scarcely outstretched in my hastily improvised hiding place, when I heard the blacksmith calmly open his outer door, where he stood smoking, clad in leathern apron, awaiting the approaching horsemen. They swept about the corner of the smithy almost at the same moment, pulling up their tired horses at sight of him. From amid the thud of hoofs, and the rattle of accoutrements, a voice spoke sharply:

"So you're here, Farrell, you old rebel hypocrite. Well, what are you hiding now?"

"I was not aware that I had anything to hide, Captain Grant," was the dignified response. "This is my shop, an' where I should be."

"Oh, hell! We all know you well enough, you old fox, and we'll catch you red-handed yet, and hang you. But we're not hunting after your kind today. Did you see anything of a fellow in scarlet jacket along here last night, or this morning?"

I failed to catch Farrell's answer, but the voice of the officer was sufficiently loud to reach me.

"A rebel spy; the sneaking rascal must have swam the Delaware. We'll look about your shop just the same before we ride on. Mason, take a half-dozen men with you, and rake the place over."

I heard the sound of their boots on the floor, and burrowed lower in my box. Two or three entered the old shop, and began to probe about among the debris. One kicked the box in which I lay, and thrust a bayonet down through the loose papers, barely missing my shoulder. With teeth clinched I remained breathless, but the fellow seemed satisfied, and moved on, after searching the dark corner beyond. At last I heard them all go out, mumbling to each other, and ventured to sit up again, and draw a fresh breath. They had left the door ajar, and I had a glimpse through the crack. Farrell was leaning carelessly in the outer doorway, smoking, his short legs wide apart, his expression one of total indifference. A big fellow stepped past him, and saluted some one just out of sight.

"Nobody in there, sir," he reported.

"All right, Mason," and Grant came into view on a rangy sorrel. "Get your men back into saddle; we'll move on."

"Think he went this way?" asked the blacksmith carelessly.

"How the hell do I know!" savagely. "He must have started this way, but likely he took the north road. We'll get the chap before night, unless he runs into Delavan's fellows out yonder. See here, Farrell," holding in his horse, "we'll be back here about dark, and will want something to eat."

"You will be welcome to all you find."

"You impudent rebel, you see that you are here when we come. I know you, you night rider, and will bring you to book yet. Forward men—trot! Close up the rank there, sergeant; we'll take the road to the left."

I watched them go past, the dust-covered green uniforms slipping by the crack of the door, as the men urged their horses faster. Farrell never moved, the blue tobacco smoke curling above his head, and I stole across the littered storeroom to a cobwebbed window, from which I could watch the column of riders go down the hill. They finally disappeared in the edge of a wood, and I turned around to find the blacksmith laughing silently over my cowering form.

"Gone, sure enough, Major Grant," the man said, "and a mighty unpleasant lot of lowns you'd find them if you met them today, and go along with an escort. It will be in the same direction you'll have to travel, an' you might have trouble by daylight. No objections to a fight, have you?"

"None whatever."

I passed an hour with my host, and then rose from the table, and buckled on my sword. I was ready for the road. The blacksmith stood in the doorway, and watched me saddle my horse, but never quite ready to tackle the job. Afraid I shall have to disappoint him again tonight."

"You will not wait for him?"

"Hardly. You heard what he said about Delavan? That was the very news I wanted to learn. Now I think both those lads will meet me much sooner than they expect."

He stepped forward into the open doorway, and blew three shrill blasts on a silver whistle. The echo had scarcely died away, when, out from a thick clump of trees perhaps half a mile distant, a horse shot forth, racing toward us. As the reckless rider drew up suddenly, I saw him to be a barefooted, freckle-faced boy of perhaps sixteen, his eyes bright with excitement.

"So it's you on duty, Ben," said Farrell quietly, glancing from the boy to his horse. "Well, you're in for a ride. Have the men at Lone Tree by sundown; all of them. See Duval first, an' tell him for me this is a big thing. Now off with you!"

The boy, grinning happily, swung his horse around, and, jabbing his sides with bare heels, rode madly away directly south across the vacant land. Within five minutes he had vanished down a sharp incline. Farrell was still staring after him, when I asked:

"What is it?"

"A little bit of private war," he said grimly. "If you'll go with me tonight, Major, I'll show you some guerilla fighting. You heard what Grant said about Delavan. We've been waiting five days for him to head back toward Philadelphia. He has twenty wagons, an' a foraging party of less than fifty men somewhere out Medford way," with sweep of hand to the northeast. "If he an' Grant get together the two commands will outnumber us, but we'll have the advantage of surprise, of a swift attack in the dark. In my judgment that is what Grant was sent out for—to guard Delavan's wagons. His spy hunting was a personal affair. My advice to you, Lawrence, is to lie quiet here today, and go along with an escort. It will be in the same direction you'll have to travel, an' you might have trouble by daylight. No objections to a fight, have you?"

"None whatever."

I passed an hour with my host, and then rose from the table, and buckled on my sword. I was ready for the road. The blacksmith stood in the doorway, and watched me saddle my horse, but never quite ready to tackle the job. Afraid I shall have to disappoint him again tonight."

CHAPTER IX.

With Minute Men.

I must have slept very heavily, the sleep of utter exhaustion, for I awoke with my mind clear and body rested. The door of the shop remained wide open, and Farrell sat there, his eyes upon the road without, an open book upon his knees. As I moved slightly he instantly turned his face toward me.

"I began to fear I should have to arouse you, Major," he said, coming within. "You have slept soundly for six hours, an' we must be off presently. First, however, we will have a bite to eat."

He began to prepare the meal, while I bathed my face.

"I was very tired," I explained, "but now am ready for any service. What has occurred since I lay down?"

"Very little; Duval stopped a moment to report, an' two of my couriers rode past this way. We are going to have a goodly sized gathering tonight, an' from all I hear will need every rifle. Grant's purpose is, as I supposed, to guard the forage train into Philadelphia. He expects to meet them somewhere between Fellowship and Mount Laurel, an' the chances are we shall have to fight both detachments. But fall to, man, an' we can discuss all this as we eat."

He talked freely enough while we remained there, but conversation veered to the book he had been reading, and I learned little of his plans, except that he relied upon surprise, and swiftness of movement to overcome the decided advantage of numbers. After we mounted and rode away, scarcely a word was exchanged between us. Just before dusk we overtook a dozen horsemen in the breaks of a creek bottom, roughly dressed fellows, heavily armed, riding in the same direction as ourselves, and, after the exchange of a word or two, the whole party of us jogged along together. Others straggled in, singly, or by small groups, as darkness closed about, until we formed quite a respectable company. It was rather a silent, weird procession, scarcely a word being spoken, and no sound heard, other than the dull reverberation of washed hoofs on the soft turf. To me, glancing back from where I held position beside Farrell, they seemed like spectral figures, with no rattle of accoutrements, no glimmer of steel, no semblance of substance. Yet they kept horsemen rode down a gully into a broad creek bottom, and then advanced through a fringe of trees to the edge of the stream. There was a young moon in the sky yielding a spectral light, barely making those faces nearest me visible. At the summit of the clay bank, shadowed by the forest growth encircling them, were the others who had gathered at this war rendezvous, the majority dismounted, holding their horses in readiness for action. As we rode in among them neighbors clasped hands silently, but the words exchanged were few. Farrell forced his horse through the press toward where a tall figure sat stiff in the saddle, and my own horse followed unguided.

"A goodly turn-out, Duval," he commented briefly. "What was the number before we came?"

"Forty-seven rifles," the Lieutenant's voice nasal, and high pitched. "The men from Orchard and Springdale are not in yet. How many arrived with you?"

"Twenty; ample for our purpose, even if the others fail us. This is Major Lawrence of the Maryland Line."

I shook his long, thin hand, marking the iron grip of the fingers.

"We'll introduce you to some typical Jersey fighting tonight, Major," he said genially. "We have a style all our own."

"I had supposed I had witnessed all styles."

"We'll see; the difference is that every man among us has some outrage to revenge. Our quarrel is a personal one against thieves and murderers. What is the program, Farrell?"

"To intercept Delavan's raiders. They will be along the main road within the hour from all reports. He has a wagon train loaded with stuff gathered up between Medford an' Mount Holly, together with a considerable drove of cattle and some horses."

"And what force?"

"About fifty men originally, but reinforced this afternoon with as many more to help guard the train into Philadelphia."

"Mounted?"

"The reinforcements were, but the original foragers were afoot; they were Hessians; the others Grant's company of Queen's Rangers."

"Glory be to God!" exclaimed a voice near at hand. "Did ye hear that, lads? It's Dutchmen and Tories we're against tonight. Be Gorry! I wouldn't have missed the chance of this shindy fer the best farm in Camden."

There was a low growl from the cluster of men, and an ominous movement of bodies pressing closer. Duval laughed mirthlessly.

"The bloodhound takes the scent," he said grimly. "God help those poor devils when we cut the leash, Farrell. Where do you propose meeting them?"

"Across there in the bluffs," pointing, "where the road turns in between the high clay banks. We'll leave our horses here, an' cross on foot. Is that the right plan, boys?"

There was a murmur of acquiescence, a few questions, and then the silence of approval. It was evident these minute men were under small discipline, and their officers led only by force of character. Without orders the horses were led away, tied securely in the black depths of the woods, and the men came straggling back, rifles in hand, grouping themselves along the edge of the stream. There was no attempt at military formation, but Duval straightened them out so as to count the number present.

"Sixty-nine, all told," he announced briefly. "All right, boys, come on, and keep your powder out of the water."

It was firm bottom, but the water rose above the waist, with sufficient current so we had to brace against it in mid-stream. We trailed dropping up the eastern bank, coming out upon a well-traveled road. A hundred feet beyond was the cleft through the clay, and there Farrell halted us, dividing the men into two parties. Under his orders they disappeared like magic, the silent night engulfing them completely. The three of us, Duval, Farrell, and myself, alone remained in the deserted road.

"Duval," said the blacksmith quietly, "you an' the Major feel your way along to the top, an' discover what is happening. I'll stay here, an' take care of the boys."

The road was a gradual rise, the clay packed hard under foot, but from the summit we could look away for some distance over a level country, dimly revealed under the new moon. There was nothing in sight, and no sound disturbed the solitude. We sat down on a bunch of turf, rifles in hand, to wait patiently, our eyes scanning the distance.

Yellow Writing Paper Easy on Eyes.

Oculists have often called attention to the fact that the eyes are easily fatigued by the reflection from white paper, especially when the surface is under a strong light. Since green is known to be the color most restful to the eyes, it is a common practice to use wall papers and draperies of that color in libraries and private studies. For writing paper, however, green is an unsatisfactory color. It imparts a reddish appearance to the writing, and makes it hard to read.

Yellow writing paper is not open to the same objection. In strong daylight it is softer than pure white paper, and in artificial light is not the dark, black letters on a yellowish background show clear and distinct. Many [illegible] use yellow paper in writing long and difficult [illegible] and many writers have Nothing more discouraging than a constant backache.

Lame when you awake. Pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work, or to rest.

That backache indicates bad kidneys and calls for some good kidney remedy.

None so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills.

NOMINATION CERTIFICATES

Brown Sends Out List to Probate Judges—Many Candidates In the Field.

Montgomery.—A certificate of nomination, setting forth the numerous candidates who have qualified for congressional and state offices in the November election, has been sent out to all the probate judges of the state by Secretary of State Cyrus B. Brown.

Secretary of State Brown's notification contains the names of the candidates of the various political parties of the state. Democrats, republicans, progressives and socialists are represented on the certificate of nomination, there being only a few offices for which there are not two or more candidates.

For state offices the certificate shows that Charles Henderson is opposed for president of the railroad commission by John T. McEniry, a republican, and L. R. Carter, a socialist.

John H. Wallace, state game and fish commissioner, is opposed for reelection by Charles T. Lunsford, a republican, and Warren D. Kilby, a socialist.

Judges T. C. McClellan and A. D. Sayre are each opposed for re-election on the supreme court bench, the former by Alex C. Birch, a republican, and the latter by Jere C. Murphy, a republican.

Four congressmen have no opposition, as shown by the certificate of nomination, Congressman S. H. Dent, in the Second district, H. D. Clayton in the Third, J. Thomas Heflin in the Fifth and Oscar Underwood in the Ninth district.

George W. Taylor is opposed for congressman from the First district by W. M. Doyle, a socialist; Congressman Fred L. Blackmon is opposed for re-election from the Fourth district by A. P. Longshore, a progressive, and by W. H. Sturdivant, a republican; Congressman Hobson is opposed in the Sixth district by Charles P. Lunsford, a republican; Congressman John L. Burnett is opposed in the Seventh district by Sumter Cogswell, a progressive, and John J. Stephens, a republican, and Congressman William Richardson is opposed in the Eighth district by William E. Hotchkiss, a republican, and W. L. Conner, a socialist.

For congressman at large, Dr. John W. Abercrombie will have two opposing candidates against him, Asa E. Stratton, a republican, and J. C. Maxwell, a progressive.

Judge Hugh D. Merrill has no opposition for re-election as judge of the Seventh judicial circuit.

For electors for President and vice president, every one of the democratic nominees have opposition, the progressive, republican and socialist parties each having candidates in the field.

Birmingham.—Thomas A. Duncan, better known as Teck A. Duncan, who was charged with the murder of Felix J. Ellard and who was tried and convicted and given a life sentence in the penitentiary, and whose case was appealed, appeared before Solicitor Heflin, withdrew the appeal and was taken before Judge Frank Cahalan of the criminal court and announced his withdrawal of the appeal and was sentenced to life in the penitentiary.

Montgomery.—Figures compiled by Dr. W. W. Dinsmore, state supervisor of the Rockefeller commission for the eradication of hookworm disease, show that from January 1 to September 30, of the present year, there were 8,685 cases of hookworm disease treated in the state. The work has been carried on in 22 counties of the state, according to Dr. Dinsmore's report, with excellent results in all of the counties.

Montgomery.—Montgomery Greeks are ready to return to their fatherland and take up arms against Turkey. It is understood several Montgomery Greeks will take passage on steamers from New York during the next two weeks. Others will be ready soon to swear allegiance to the historic country which is now ready to fight for its people and their religion.

Marion.—Perry county jail was cleared of its prisoners and the doors sprung on their hinges to give it a good airing. The recent term of court disposing of all prisoners.

Birmingham.—The Kaul Lumber company plant at Tuscaloosa, which has been under construction over one year, and which represents an investment of over $1,000,000, will be operating in less than three weeks. Announcement to this effect was made by John L. Kaul, president of that company, while in this city. The plant is located at Tuscaloosa and its establishment there caused the greatest satisfaction. Mr. Kaul has caused to be erected there one of the most modern plants in this section and a model among lumber plants.

Tuscaloosa.—The West Alabama fair opened here with a large crowd present.

Athens.—The fourth annual fair of the Limestone County Fair Association opened October 2.

Montgomery.—More than 1,250,000 fertilizer tags have been destroyed by the department of agriculture and industries within the past few days. The tags were issued for the use of the department during the past fiscal year, which ended September 30, and a total of 1,30,000 bags were unsold.

Tuscaloosa.—City Engineer Nichol is now preparing plans for a modern storm sewer system for the city of Tuscaloosa which will be adequate for the future needs of the city, and within a few days the commission will open bids for 8,000 feet of sewer in East End and other extensions in West End.

Sylacauga.—On account of an insufficiency of water the big Comer cotton mill will not be located adjoining the present one in Sylacauga, but will be built on the Wallace place, east of the city. The building will be 450 by 150 feet and four stories high. Both the Central of Georgia and the Louisville and Nashville railroads will lay switch tracks to the mill.

Florence.—Several thousand people attending the Colbert county fair were horrified at the fair grounds in Tuscumbia when two men, one H. C. petty, an aeronaut, and the other an innocent bystander, were dashed to the ground and instantly killed. Claud Howland, who had been standing near the balloon as it was being filled with gas, got his foot caught in the ropes and was carried up with the balloon with his head dangling towards the earth. When the balloon had reached a great height the aeronaut cut the ropes, the parachute failed to open and both Petty and Howland came to the ground at a rapid rate striking with a sickening thud. Howland struck first, the aeronaut landing on top of him.

THE CHILDREN'S HEALTH

In observing the physical characteristics of her children, the careful mother soon learns that health is dependent on the regularity of the bowels. When the bowels become clogged with the stomach's refuse, loss of appetite, restlessness, irritability, and similar evidences of disorder are soon apparent. Keep the bowels regular and a healthy, happy child is assured.

At the first sign of constipation the mother should administer a mild laxative to carry off the congested waste from the stomach that is fermenting and forcing poisonous gases into the system. A simple compound of laxative herbs with pepsin is highly recommended as being very mild, yet positive, in its action, a teaspoonful at bedtime usually serving to bring an easy, thorough, natural movement next morning. This compound is known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and is sold by druggists everywhere for 50c a bottle. A larger bottle, put up especially for the family medicine chest, costs one dollar.

The use of salts and violent purgatives and cathartics should be avoided. They are too harsh and drastic, tending to upset the entire system. Write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 West St., Monticello, Ill., for a trial bottle of his Syrup Pepsin, if you have never used it. He will be glad to send it without any expense to you. Adv.

THE RIGHT SOAP FOR BABY'S SKIN

In the care of baby's skin and hair, Cuticura Soap is the mother's favorite. Not only is it unrivaled in purity and refreshing fragrance, but its gentle emollient properties are usually sufficient to allay minor irritations, remove redness, roughness and chafing, soothe sensitive conditions, and promote skin and hair health generally. Assisted by Cuticura Ointment, it is most valuable in the treatment of eczemas, rashes and other itching, burning infantile eruptions. Cuticura Soap wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of ordinary soap and making its use most economical.

WOMEN AS NATURAL ENEMIES

Writer Advances Some Good Reasons Why This Unfortunate Condition Must Exist.

"The average woman now begins that study of society which will merge ultimately with the marriage campaign. She makes many discoveries which she admits frankly to herself. She comes to many conclusions," says Inez Haynes Gillmore in Harper's Bazar, "which sink unnoticed into her subconscious mind if marriage, for instance, is her natural career, then men are her natural prey.

"But unfortunately there are never enough men in her world to go round; and of those from whom she may hope to choose some are much more desirable than others. Naturally she prefers the desirable ones—i. e., the 'eligibles.' But—and here she runs against her first obstacle—every other single woman in her circle has come to the same conclusion. From the instant she realizes this she must declare war on every other member of her sex.

"Men must often wonder at that minute and merciless examination to which, on a first meeting, every woman submits every other woman. Men must often marvel at the power of quick observation which women always develop in these circumstances. This is only the swift interrogation with which a warrior surveys the arms of his opponent. Women are forever discovering new and complex weapons in the possession of rivals. And, perhaps, the most terrifying element in the situation is psychological—her sense of bafflment, in that she cannot judge of women for men any more than they can judge of men for her. Every other woman becomes her enemy. To succeed in her world she must play a lone hand and a cut-throat game."

Vegetable Fiber for Shoes.

A Haverhill (Mass.) shoeman has obtained patents giving him the right to make vamps and tops of vegetable fiber which he has invented and perfected to be used in the manufacture of shoes. A few cases of shoes have been made of this material, which appears to be a good substitute for leather. The fiber is said to be particularly adaptable for warm weather wear because, being of a woven material, air can penetrate the vamp and top. The inventor also claims that a shoe made of this material is waterproof.

Women

From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Mrs. Estella Gillispie

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. Estella Gillispie, R.F.D. Getting Along Fine at School.

Now that school has been "going" several weeks parents are beginning to inquire of their young hopefuls as to their progress. The other day a mother out on Harrison boulevard, while eating luncheon with her six-year-old, asked:

"And how are you getting along in school, Dorothy?"

"Oh," replied Dorothy between mouthfuls of bread and milk, "just fine! I and Frances Smith are the smartest and best dressed girls in the school."—Kansas City Star.

Sailing Ships in Demand.

In consequence of the better outlook for sailing ships, values have gone up considerably during the last year or two. For instance, a four-masted sailing ship of 2,750 tons register, which was sold in January last year for $32,500, is at present in the market for sale, and the owners have refused a definite offer of $45,000; they are asking $50,000.

The action of the Town Council in the selection of officers seems to have given entire satisfaction. Now all pull together and we will have the very best town in the state.

The fatal accident to Stephenson at Birmingham Monday will not learn the flying men any sense. God made men to walk on the ground, buzzards and birds to fly in the air and fish to swim in the sea.

God was onto the job when he created men, birds and fish; aviators will be unable to teach Him anything nor will they learn themselves.

Would the Town Council object to a suggestion? We believe it's for the good of all concerned. At your next meeting, City Fathers, pass a "move on" ordinance and have it enforced to keep the sidewalks from becoming congested with men in conversation, thereby blocking the way from ladies and children. Pass an "anti-spit" ordinance—and have it enforced, to keep tobacco "chawers" and others from disfiguring the sidewalks upon which ladies have to walk, with their filthy expectorations.

Men congregate, on Sundays particularly, at convenient places and chew tobacco, squirting their ambeer about in puddles till 'twould actually make a dog sick at the stomach.

Pass an ordinance and enforce it, prohibiting the promiscuous littering of the sidewalks with peanut hulls, apple and banana skins.

Enact an ordinance prohibiting, after March 15th, 1913, the keeping of hogs within the corporate limits.

This will give those now with hogs ample time to kill them during cold weather or otherwise dispose of them, and it will serve notice upon them for a sufficient length of time to let them know that the Town of Clanton proposes from henceforth to be a Town of people—human beings, rather than a pig sty.

We know what the PEOPLE say, but what says the Council?

Our republican and progressive friends are continually shouting "let the people rule," and it is a good thing to do; but, do they mean what they say when they utter that oft repeated "let the people rule?" Lets see for a moment. Hon. Fred L. Blackmon was nominated by the democrats for Congress in a primary in which more than fifteen thousand voters participated. He received every vote cast in that primary for the nomination. Six counties participated in the primary. Keep that in mind. Rev. Mr. Sturdivant was nominated by the republicans at a hotel meeting held in the Alabama hotel at Anniston where not over eight men were present. Keep that in mind please.

Judge Longshore was nominated in Montgomery (at the Exchange Hotel, we believe) by the progressives at which meeting there were present not more than twenty men residing within the congressional district which he seeks to represent. He was not even nominated within his own district.

LET THE PEOPLE RULE; yes, that's what we say!

Blackmon nominated by 15000 voters within his own district, expressing their choice at the ballot box.

Sturdivant nominated in a hotel, without an expression from the people, by eight or ten politicians.

Longshore nominated in Montgomery by a few old stagers who have lost cast with their own party and are trying to swing around the circle on Teddy Roosevelt's coat tail.

Yes, LET THE PEOPLE RULE!

Years ago Rev. H. T. Johnson, believing that he was a born lecturer and that he would amass a great fortune upon the platform, wrote a most excellent address for delivery. He did not deliver it but once—that once taught him that he was not a lecturer and that no fortune awaited him. The subject of the address was: "If yer wants possum ax fer it." We commend that subject to the business men of Clanton; if yer wants better mail facilities, better depot accommodations, ax fer dem.

It will be rather disagreeable waiting for late trains when the cold nights come and the depot waiting room is closed tight. Shiver in the cold when just a word or two would secure a nice warm waiting room?

If our people will but "get busy" they can secure much better mail facilities, better passenger accommodations, better telegraphic arrangements. We believe they will get busy, don't you?

The railroad will certainly give us nothing unless we ask for it. That isn't like a railroad. "Ask and ye shall receive" is a good maxim for Clantonites to act upon just now.

Many Montgomerians learned with regret of the death of Mr. J. A. Mitchell of Verbena. The end came Tuesday morning in Verbena While Mr. Mitchell's home was in Verbena, he was almost a citizen of Montgomery. He had a number of relatives in this city among several prominent families and he has been a regular visitor to Montgomery for fifty years.

Mr. Mitchell was a Confederate soldier who served with honor and distinction. He enlisted in 1861 in the Confederate army and he served throughout the war until 1865.

STEPHEN B. AYRES.

Corresponding Secretary of the Woman's National Democratic League.

The Women's National Democratic league, of which Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wives of the leading Democratic candidates, are honorary president and honorary vice president respectively and Mrs. John S. Crosby is president, has opened headquarters at 1123 Broadway, New York city, in charge of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Stephen B. Ayres, wife of Congressman Ayres of New York.

The work being accomplished daily by Mrs. Ayres and her corps of stenographers and aids is not for the campaign moment only, but foundation building for the future of Democracy. It is the first strictly woman's national political movement to be organized in the United States and, as such, appeals to thinking women everywhere.

"It has not declared for or against the question of equal suffrage nor should it be expected to do so any more than it would discuss the questions of religion," said Mrs. Ayres from her post as "live wire" of the league. "We are simply good Democrats banded together for 'the greatest good to the greatest number of American housewives, who today are required to pay more in this country for American goods than they would have to pay for the same goods in a foreign land."

She is especially interested in the tariff on articles in constant feminine use and has developed into quite a speaker at the "housewives'" meetings of the ways committee of the national Democratic committee.

Having exhausted his supply of adjectives in denouncing Taft, Roosevelt is now leading a campaign of denunciation of every one who does not agree with himself.

Farmers have pulled against the short end of the yoke long enough. Wilson and Marshall promise to see that the pulling is made more nearly even.

A PROCLAMATION.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 28, 1912

Whereas, the Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1911, has ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1912;

And, Whereas, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment, is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

Now, therefore, I, Emmett O'Neal, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1912, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

H. B 194] "AN ACT

To submit to the qualified voters of the State, at the general election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November, 1912, for their consideration, an amendment to the Constitution of the State, so as to authorize and empower the Legislature from time to time by general or local laws to fix, regulate and alter the costs, charges of courts, fees, commissions, allowances or salaries to be charged or received by any countyofficer of Jefferson county, including the method or basis of their compensation.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of Alabama:

Section 1- That the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama is hereby proposed to be submitted to the qualified voters of Alabama for their consideration, as hereinafter set forth, viz: The Legislature of Alabama may hereafter, from time to time, by general or local laws, fix, regulate and alter the costs, charges of courts, fees, commissions, allowances or salaries to be charged or received by any county officer of Jefferson county, including the method and basis of their compensation.

Sec. 2. It shall be the duty of the Governor to give notice by proclamation to be published in one newspaper in each county in the State at least eight successive weeks next preceding the general election in November, 1912, of the election on the amendment proposed by this act to be submitted to the qualified voters of the State for their consideration together with the proposed amendment.

Sec. 3. That at the general election in November, 1912, an election shall be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State upon the proposed amendment. Upon the ballots used at such election shall be printed the following, viz: Amendment to Constitution, authorizing the Legislature, by general or local laws, from time to time, to fix, regulate and alter the costs, charges of courts, fees, commissions, allowances and salaries to be charged or received by any county officer of Jefferson county, including the method and basis of their compensation. Following the proposed amendment on the ballot shall be printed the word, "Yes," and immediately under that shall be printed the word, "No." The choice of the electors shall be indicated by a cross mark by him opposite the word expressing his desire.

Sec. 4. The officers of such general election shall open a poll for the vote of the qualified electors upon the proposed amendment. The election shall be held in all things in accordance with the law governing general elections. In the election upon such proposed amendment the votes cast thereat shall be canvassed, tabulated and the returns thereof be made to the Secretary of State and counted in the same manner as in elections for representatives in the Legislature, and if it shall thereupon appear that a majority of the qualified electors who voted upon the proposed amendment voted in favor of the same, such amendment shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution of Alabama. The result of such election shall be made known by the proclamation of the Governor.

Approved February 28, 1911."

MEAN SWEEP FOR WILSON

Democratic Gains In Vermont and Maine Impressive.

OTHER PARTIES IN PLIGHT.

Third Termers to Poll Their Entire Strength From the Rapidly Thinning Republican Ranks — Indications Are That Taft Will Carry but Two States, Roosevelt None.

That the results of the state elections in Vermont and Maine mean a tremendous Democratic victory in November is freely admitted by all except the bitterest partisans. Political experts have done much analyzing, and some claim to have reached novel conclusions. But these facts stand out:

On Monday, Sept. 9, 1912, the Republican and third term parties combined elected William T. Haines governor of Maine over Frederick W. Plaisted, the present Democratic incumbent, by 3,023 plurality; in 1908, a presidential year, a Republican was elected governor by 7,653 plurality; in 1904 the plurality was 25,800, and in 1900 it was 34,132. In other words, in twelve years the Democrats have cut down the Republican plurality in state elections by 31,109.

In this period the Democratic vote has increased from 39,000 to 68,000, whereas the Republican vote has decreased from 74,000 to 71,000. The Democratic vote of this year exceeds that of September, 1908, by 1,000, but the Republican vote is about 2,000 less than that party cast four years ago.

The split in the Republican ranks following the election of William T. Haines, is pronounced. If the division in Maine in November is as it was in the recent Vermont election six-tenths of the Republican vote will go for Taft, three-tenths for Roosevelt and one-tenth for the Democrats. It is significant that the latter party has to date suffered no losses, as compared with the vote in previous years, from the third term movement. On the contrary, it has gained. The result in Maine may be expected to be something like this: Wilson, 74,000; Taft, 42,600; Roosevelt, 21,300.

The returns from the recent Vermont election show in round figures that the joint Republican and third party vote was 8 per cent short of the Republican vote four years ago, while the Democratic vote in that state shows a gain of 25 per cent over that of 1908. It is of special interest to speculate what will happen next November throughout the nation if the Republican and Democratic vote for the national tickets happens to be affected as the gubernatorial vote this month in Vermont has been affected. The New York Post has done some interesting figuring along this line, and as a net result it is shown that under the contingencies mentioned President Taft would carry only two states in November, Rhode Island and Vermont, all the others going for Governor Wilson. The conclusions reached by the Post follow:

To compute this result we should have to deduct 8 per cent from the vote cast for Taft four years ago and apportion the remaining vote in the ratio of 62 to 38 between Taft and Roosevelt, and we should have to add 35 per cent to Bryan's vote in 1908 and give the "demnition total" to Woodrow Wilson—in other words, give Taft 57 per cent and Roosevelt 35 per cent of Taft's vote four years ago and give Wilson 125 per cent of Bryan's vote four years ago.

The result in round numbers would be as follows, so far as regards Taft and Wilson:

COAL TRAIN WRECK

Traffic was considerably delayed this morning by the derailing of fifeen cars of coal between Strasburg and Thorsby.

The north and south bound passenger trains met at the scene of the wreck and transferred passengers. No casualities except the derailing of the cars and the consequent delay. A loose wheel was the cause of the accident.

END OF COTTON SEASON AT HAND

CROP REPORTED 30 PER CENT OFF— COOL NIGHTS CAUSE DETERIORATION.

FIELDS RAPIDLY PICKED

Cotton Is Made and Farmers All Over State Are Hurrying to Market.

Montgomery.—With frost reported in North Alabama, and with cool nights throughout the State, the beginning of the end of the cotton season is near. The crop is practically made in every part of the state, and little will affect it hereafter except excessive rains and frost.

Another proof that the crop of 1912 is formed is the fact that reports received are in very little degree different from the reports of the preceding week. There is reported deterioration in the South, due to heavy rains and cool nights, and a slight improvement in the north, but the difference is little, in any section. The crop, everywhere, is reported short, thirty per cent and more.

Cotton is beginning to move, too, and rapidly. In North Alabama counties, especially, the fields are rapidly being deprived of their crop by the pickers, and every center of cotton traffic is busy with the handling of the products. Nowhere, according to the reports, is the cotton being held, farmers, satisfied with the price offered them, are selling their cotton.

Interesting, and typical of the crop condition in many parts of the State, is the report from Hale county.

In part, it says:

"The fields are all white, and surface observers might be fooled by the appearance; but all the cotton is made, and after the first pickings, there seems to be no more cotton. The farmers are hurrying to get the crop out of the fields, and labor is very scarce.

"The State Entomologist writes that the weevil has already crossed half way over Greene county, the county adjoining Hale county on the west, and at the present rate, the farmers of this county may expect a visit this fall from the pest. But thus far no authentic reports of the presence of the weevil in Hale has been reported."

DEGRAFFENREID APPOINTED.

Will Succeed Simpson on Supreme Bench—Knox Declines the Job.

Montgomery. — Judge Edward de Graffenreid, associate justice of the court of appeals, has been appointed by Governor O'Neal associate justice of the supreme court in place of John B. Knox of Anniston, who declined the appointment.

The appointment of Judge de Graffenreid to the supreme court to succeed the late Associate Justice Robert T. Simpson, was made by the executive upon his return from Birmingham. Upon his arrival here he learned that Mr. Knox had declined the appointment and he immediately tendered the office to Judge de Graffenreid, who accepted.

Champion Corn Grower a Girl.

Montgomery.—The champion corn grower of Alabama's 1912 season seems to have developed in Pauline May, a young girl, who lives near Notasulga, in Macon county. Sending to the state department of agriculture her record as a participant in the state corn growing contest she declared that she produced 114 bushels and 51 pounds of corn on one acre.

Special Session Imperative.

Montgomery.—That a special session of the legislature is imperative in order that all contingent appropriations may be repealed, and that all appropriations in force for current expenses may be so adjusted as to bring them on a parity with the receipts of the government, is the opinion of State Treasurer John Purifoy.

BOLL WEEVIL SPREADING.

Has Advanced 73 Miles in South Alabama This Season.

Mobile.—The boll weevil has spread 73 miles in south Alabama this season and its migration has not yet ended. For the next three weeks it will be on the move, and the extent of its migration will be the greatest ever known in a single season. Now it is 20 miles further than the previous record.

This is the statement of J. A. Dew, assistant state entomologist, who was in Mobile, having just returned from a lengthy stay in the boll weevil infested territory of Alabama. He found the weevil two miles beyond Florala, and predicts that before frost the entire area of Covington county will be covered by the pest.

Mr. Dew says that the weevil has spread faster in west Alabama than in south Alabama. Last season the line was at Brewton; in Escambia south, Flat Top in Wilcox county, Repton in Conecuh county

BAPTIST BRETHREN HOLD MEET.

Montgomery Association Was Formed Thirty-one Years Ago—25 Churches in Body.

Montgomery. — The Montgomery Baptist Association convened with the First Baptist church of this city October 8 and 9. The churches comprising this association formerly belonged to the Alabama Association which was organized ninety-three years ago, but because of the large territory covered by the Alabama Association it was deemed wise to divide it, and the Montgomery Association was formed in 1881.

The session just closed is the thirty-first. During its existence it has had but four moderators, Rev. H. C. Taul, Rev. B. A. Jackson, Rev. T. L. Jones and Mr. George G. Miles. Mr. Miles was elected moderator first in 1898 and held the office continuously until the date of his death, April of this year.

The promotion of the welfare of the churches connected with the association, and the spread of the gospel, especially through the region occupied by them were the principal topics of discussion.

The association is purely a voluntary body; no church is compelled to join it. Churches are admitted on application, if found to conform in character, doctrine and practice to the principles stated in the constitution; and they are at liberty to withdraw from the association whenever, in their judgment, heir welfare requires it. It has no ecclesiastical authority, and its official acts are strictly limited to the objects and methods prescribed in the constitution.

The churches comprising the Montgomery Association are as follows: Autauga, Line, Bethany, Chilsolm, Consada, Deatsville, Mt. Hebron, Mt. Lebanon, Pike Road, Prattville, Ramer, Wetumpka, Bethel, Bethesda, Drewer Memorial, Hayneville, Letohatchie, Mt. Zion and Pine Level, and with the following churches located in the city of Montgomery: Clayton Street, First Church, Highland Avenue, Second Church, Seventh Avenue and Southside church.

In the death of G. G. Miles it fell to the lot of W. B. Davidson, chairman of the Executive Committee, to call the association to order.

In addition to the large number of delegates from the churches present, a considerable representation of the various boards and institutions of the denomination were in attendance.

O'Neal Discusses Extra Session.

Birmingham.—Before returning to Montgomery Governor O'Neal made a statement in reference to the extraordinafy session of the legislature which many people consider necessary. "It may become necessary," he said "to call the legislature together. However, until that time does come I will not issue he call. In other words, I will postpone action just as long as I possibly can. I cannot see the wisdom in putting the state to additional expense unless it is absolutely necessary that that expense be incurred."

Socialist Nominated For Office.

Montgomery.—W. M. Doyle of Mobile, has been nominated by the Socialists of the First Congressional District of Alabama as a candidate for Congress from that district, according to an announcement filed with secretary of State Cyrus B. Brown.

$1,073,286.16 FROM CONVICTS.

Last Quarter Shows Yield of $321,197.72—Year's Gain $16,456.93.

Montgomery.—A check for $321,197.72 was sent to the State treasury by J. G. Oakley, president of the State Convict Board, as the amount of gross earnings of the convict department for the final quarter of the fiscal year, which ended September 30.

A statement compiled from the books of the department show earnings for the fiscal year amounting to $1,073,296.16, against $1,056,839.23 for the year preceeding. The comparative figures reveal the fact that the year just closed has been one of the most successful in the history of the department.

One hundred convicts for the hire of which about $30,000 would have accrued to the State, were used by the State on the No. 4 farm on Lower Wetumpka Road, and were employed by private concerns at no time of the year.

The investment of convict labor on the farm will be profitable. Chairman Oakley thinks. Although the profit will not show in this year's report, it will be revealed in the next, when returns from the corn and cotton raised on No. 4 farm are derived, he says.

About 50,000 bushels of corn and 300 or 400 bales of cotton will be produced through the work of the 100 prisoners. The receipts for the two years, by quarters, are:

Fiscal year 1910-1911: first quarter, $361,213.86; second, $[illegible]; third, $351,180.35; fourth, $[illegible]; total, $1,056,839.23.

Fiscal year 1911-1912: first quarter, $370,630.14; second, $[illegible]; third, $[illegible]; fourth, $[illegible]; total, $1,073,296.16.

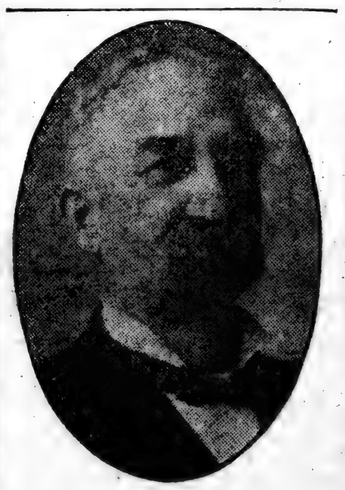
GOOD ROADS MEET IN BIRMINGHAM



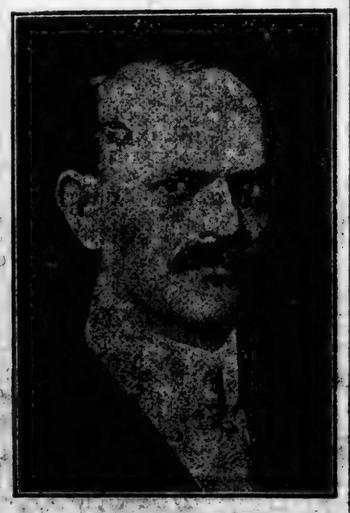
ANNUAL GATHERING OF THE ASSOCIATION HELD OCTOBER 8, 9 AND 10.

MANY DELEGATES PRESENT

Practical Talks on Road Building and Stereopticon Views By Government Experts Features.

Birmingham. — After having been welcomed by a delegation of one hundred prominent business men of this city, the Alabama Good Roads Association began its first session of a three-day meet in the City Hall, October 8.

Delegates were present from Mobile, Montgomery, Marion, Gadsden, Selma,



JOHN CRAFT,

President Alabama Good Roads Association.

Brewton, Thorsby, Attalla, Anniston and practically every village, town and city in the state. It was estimated there were 2,000 in attedance.

The meeting this year was one of the most important in the history of the association. Much of the formality of conventions was done away with, and discussions were of a round table nature. The chief matter for discussion was that of working convicts on the public roads. Among a number of papers on this general subject was that of L. A. Whitehead, "Convicts on the Tennessee-to-the-Gulf Highway and Other State

J. A. ROUNTREE,

Secretary Alabama Good Roads Association.

Roads." A movement was started to make August 14-16, inclusive, permanent Good Roads Day in Alabama. This year 40 counties observed the days and an effort will be made to have the legislature pass a law designating the three days as legal holidays for the purpose of working roads.

The first day's session of the convention was given over to organization and the reading of the reports of the officials and delegates.

The second day's session was devoted to practical talks on road building by engineers.

The third day's session was held as Good Roads Day at the Alabama State Fair, and several congressmen from the state who had been invited to attend, addressed the crowds at the fair.

On the afternoon of the 10th the delegates were entertained with a car ride and barbecue.

Night sessions were held during the convention and stereopticon views and addresses by government experts were featured.

N. K. Milner, of Hawthorne, president of the Sea-to-the-Gulf highway, made a splendid report to the association on the work done on the building of this highway.

STATE BREVITIES.

Attalla—Mathew G. Whitehead, a pioneer of [illegible]

Mixed Metaphors.

"You didn't really show that you were bored?"

"No; I hope I am too well drilled."

Regular practicing physicians recommend and prescribe OXIDINE for Malaria, because it is a proven remedy by years of experience. Keep a bottle in the medicine chest and administer at first sign of Chills and Fever. Adv.

Very Much So.

"James tells me he has a very light work with that hairdresser."

"So it is. He bleaches blonde heads."

One Problem Settled.

Mrs. Stronghead had just thrown a paving stone through a drug store window, merely to prove that she was entitled to a vote (says Judge), and had been marched off to jail. "Thank heaven," said Stronghead. "That settles the where-shall-we-spend-the-summer problem, anyhow."

End of a Famous Vessel.

The Fox, the vessel in which the late Sir Leopold McClintock made his discovery of the fate of Sir John Franklin and his companions, has been wrecked on the Greenland coast. In recent years she has been employed by the Danish Greenland authorities on coastal trips.

The Greatest Woman.

Who was or is the greatest woman in all history? Two hundred teachers answered the question and with enthusiasm and unanimity the judges awarded the prize to the one who made this reply: "The wife of the farmer of moderate means who does her own cooking, washing, ironing, sewing, brings up a family of boys and girls to be useful members of society, and finds time for intellectual improvement."

New Stage in Inebriety.

Mr. Borden has been telling an anecdote concerning two "brither Scots" who used to foregather in a "dry" district, each bringing with him a portable spring of comfort in the shape of a bottle of whisky.

One of them was asked one day by a "third party" whether the other, Jack Anderson, did not get a little drunk sometimes.

"Drunk?" was the reply. "Man, the last time I was wi' him Jock was that drunk I couldna see him."—London Mail.

Marie Divided the Candy.

When the uncle of a couple of Brooklyn youngsters last called at the household whereof they form a part he brought with him some pieces of candy, which were given to the little girl to divide with her brother.

Later the uncle summoned this child to the living room and asked:

"Marie, when you divided those five pieces of candy with your brother, did you give him two and a half pieces?"

"No, sir," said Marie. "I saw they weren't going to come out even, so I ate one before I began to divide."—Lippincott's Magazine.

IT'S THE FOOD.
The True Way to Correct Nervous Troubles.

Nervous troubles are more often caused by improper food and indigestion than most people imagine. Even doctors sometimes overlook this fact. A man says:

"Until two years ago waffles and butter with meat and gravy were the main features of my breakfast. Finally dyspepsia came on and I found myself in a bad condition, worse in the morning than any other time. I would have a full, sick feeling in my stomach, with pains in my heart, sides and head.

"At times I would have no appetite, for days, then I would feel ravenous, never satisfied when I did eat and so nervous I felt like shrieking at the top of my voice. I lost flesh badly and hardly knew which way to turn until one day I bought a box of Grape-Nuts food to see if I could eat that. I tried it without telling the doctor, and liked it fine; made me feel as if I had something to eat that was satisfying and still I didn't have that heaviness that I had felt after eating any other food.

"I hadn't drank any coffee then in five weeks. I kept on with the Grape-Nuts and in a month and a half I had gained 18 pounds, could eat almost anything I wanted, didn't feel badly after eating and my nervousness was all gone. It is delightful to be well again."

DEPOT ACCOMMODATIONS.

A LITTLE EFFORT NECESSARY, THAT'S ALL—WHO WILL HELP?

We called attention recently to the removal of the night operators to Coopers, which consequently bottled up Clanton from sunset till breakfast. At the time it looked as if our merchants were going to get in behin the movement and do something, but, as usual, it was allowed to die of its own weight.

We now have another proposition to suggest, which, we believe, will take but a little effort to bring into reality.

The early morning train, going South, reaches here before anyone connected with the railroad is required to be at the depot; the late train, going North, comes after the employees have left, consequently the traveling public must of necessity pay cash fares on these trains and sit in the cold while awaiting their arrival. Passengers on either ot these trains who alight here must find their way the best they can as no one is at the depot to direct them. This is an inconvenience to conductors, the traveling public and our town.

If our people would get together and make the request, the Press believes, the railroad officials could be induced to put an extra man here. In fact we have it upon fairly good authority that upon proper request the road will institute a nine hour service with two men, putting one to work at five in the morning, early enough to sell tickets for the morning train and to have a fire by which passengers can warm; this operator can work till two in the afternoon. The second operator goes on at two and works till eleven at night, late enough for the night train.

Mail matters would be greatly facilitated by this arrangement also.

Who'll help?

Dear Dr.:—I can't see why anyone should go to Birmingham to consult an oculist, when Dr. Higgins, one of the very finest, is in Clanton, and handy to everybody. I am a Rural Letter Carrier and know the value of a fine double lense pair of glasses. I value a clear vision more than I do money.

VETOED THE SOUTH

UNFRIENDLY ACT OF MR. TAFT.

It will be recalled by our readers that near the close of the last Congress Mr. Taft, exercising his right to veto, put his stamp of disapproval upon the Act of Congress conferring upon certain individuals the right to dam Coosa river and utilize the great power to be obtained thereform for commercial purposes. This act of Mr. Taft cost the people of Chilton county millions of dollars and secured to them no return whatever. It showed plainly that Mr. Taft is the tool, the willing tool, of the "large interests," for no one except the "large interests" opposed the proposition. Already, Clanton, and Chilton county, have an earnest of what would have been done had Mr. Taft not vetoed that bill. Thousands, yea, millions of dollars are now being spent in and around Clanton to dam one part of Coosa river for which permission from the government had been previously obtained. The passage of the Act permitting another dam to be built would have secured millions more for this section.

What was Mr. Taft's avowed reason for his veto? "The preservation of our natural resources!" Bosh and nonsense of the purest ray serene!

Preservation of what? Natural resources! How? If the one dam already in course of construction does not destroy the "natural advantages" of Coosa river, how in the name of common sense will the erection of another dam several miles away destroy it? The old river, at the point sought to be damed, is not navigable anyway; the government has never sought to make it so, and probably never will seek to do so. How then is he seeking to preserve our natural resources? Fact is that by erecting the dam the river could more readily be made navigable than by refusing permission to dam it. Then, too, it would have brought untold millions of money and hundreds of settlers into our county; it would have provided us with cheaper motor and light power and given us advantages which but few people enjoy.

How has he preserved our natural resources by his veto? The power company which sought the right to dam the river would have supplied for hundreds of years power which will now cost millions of feet of timber to furnish, for we must now use steam power, to make which fire, water and wood, or coal, must be consumed, whereas, the harnessing of Coosa river would have supplied this power without the consumption of one foot of timber or the use of one ounce of coal.

Pres[illegible] esources! No, ta[illegible] sts, burning u[illegible] itting an unnavigable river to remain stagnant and useless.

Yes, this was Mr. Taft, the republican candidate for president, who made this thrust at the South, at Alabama, and at Chilton county particularly.

Preserving natural resources, Mr. Taft, get your old time primer, look up the word preserve and learn its definition!

HURRAH, WE'VE GOT A COUNCIL

A RECORD START. CAN THEY KEEP IT UP?

There was some terrific shifting of town officers when the new council took charge last Monday night. But about the strangest thing of all was the fact that every member of the council was present! Now, what do you think of that? Honestly, what do you think of a session of the Town Council at which each and every member is present? Who said there was nothing new under the sun? Old Solomon said that thousands of years ago, but he had forgotten then that Clanton was to be organized into a municipality with five councilmen and that some day they would all five meet in one session to transact the business of the town—to discharge the duties for which they were elected. However, there were great things on the slate for Monday night—almost enough to have brought out a full meeting of the old council. There was a Chief of Police to be elected, a Town Clerk to be chosen and numerous and sundry other things to receive attention. Who, then, being a member of the council would have slept while all these things were going on? Narry a sleep would the average councilman have undertaken during such moments. But, this is a new council; they have made an excellent start and till they, too, fall down in attendance, let no man criticise.

FALLON ELECTED CHIEF.

Perhaps the most important matter receiving the attention of the council, at least the matter in which most interest centered, was the selection of a Chief of Police. Mr. Frank Fallon, who has been serving the past few months as Night Marshal, was elevated to this position, and Mr. Lee Hayes, former Chief, made Night Marshal. The two will divide time, each serving half a day and half a night.

MR. N. A. KICKER, TOWN CLERK.

Another important matter, and one in which considerable interest was manifested was the selection of the Town Clerk. There was but one ballot, and after this was cast Mr. N. A. Kicker was declared elected Town Clerk to succeed Mr. J. E. Robinson, Jr.

Now, with a new administration, new Mayor, new Councilmen, new Chief, new Clerk, Clanton may be expected to bound forth—that is the expectation that each person is expected to expect; what the actualities will be no prophet, no, not one in Israel, can predict. But we can all expect and assist to bring about good results. With a long pull, a strong pull and a pull altogether many things can be accomplished.

Gray Brothers—The Home Stock Men

Wilson Stands For a Principle—Will You Stand By Him?

Woodrow Wilson is a vastly different order of man than you find among the ranks of many good men i[illegible] practical political life.

Woodrow Wilson is not among the great majority of politicians and business men, otherwise estimable characters, who believe that the end justifies the means, who are honest in a commercial or political sense.

The candidate of the progressive voters of the country not only does not believe in the doctrine of "anything to win," but he insists on plain old fashioned honesty in every detail of his campaign.

Woodrow Wilson proposes to win on the merits of his candidacy and platform or not at all.

"Clean hands or no fight" is Wilson's ultimatum to his supporters throughout the country.

No Tainted Money For Wilson.

Not a dollar of questionable money will be spent to elect Woodrow Wilson.

The Democratic National Committee is heart and soul in accord with the candidate's views.

And the corrupting influences, with no political faith, casting about to win a foothold in the new government with bribes of ill-gotten gains, have despaired of reaching Wilson or his campaigners.

They have gone to the enemy, whoever that enemy may be. It is a matter of common knowledge that the "Interests" are using all their political funds to defeat Wilson.

This makes it your fight.

What the American People Need to Know

The people have constantly made the mistake of believing that this is a money-ridden nation.

Such is only the case insofar as the People fail to get together and so permit the few to control the dishonest representatives they, by mistake, elect to office.

The actual money power of the People is still greater than that of the Interests.

The Progressive People of the country, if they get together, can buy and sell the Corrupting Influences and destroy their financial power.

So Woodrow Wilson and his managers believe that not only is it the only clean method but the most practical method for the Progressive People of the country to supply the Woodrow Wilson Campaign Fund.

The People to Fight With THEIR Dollars

This year a popular president is to be elected with the People's money.

The Woodrow Wilson Campaign Fund is to be collected from the rank and file of the Progressive Voters of the country.

The bills of the Democratic National Committee are to be paid, not with the thousands of the Interests, but with the individual dollars of the earnest, eager voters who desire clean, efficient government and who are willing to help Wilson as he wants to be helped.

Money thus needed is not spent in improper ways or in any manner similar to the way in which the funds of the Interests are disbursed.

But we have to tell the voters of the country about Woodrow Wilson. We have to tell them what he has done. We have to tell them what he stands for. We have to point out to them the important planks in his platform. All this means that to hold up our end we will be obliged to spend as much money as those who oppose us.

This means that every man or woman who believes in Wilson should be willing to contribute to his cause.

Let the supporters of Wilson help us to spread the Wilson gospel to the four winds.

Let the Progressive Voters battle this year with their pocketbooks as well as their ballots.

We Solicit Popular Subscriptions—Can You Give From $1 to $20?

Of course, you can—and you are glad to support the cause in this way.

Practically every voter can afford to give $1 to aid the Wilson Campaign. A great many can give $2. A great many can give $5. And there are lots and lots of progressive voters who will be eager to donate from $10 to $20.

These are the kind of contributions we want.

And we will be proud to receive from thousands, who can only afford $1, their $1 contributions. We want to hear from every man who has a dollar to give.

This year the man with the dollar must defeat the goverament traducer who spends his thousands.

Get Club Subscriptions

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE

CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1912 — NO. 28

STATEMENT OF SENATOR LAFOLLETTE

Mr. LaFollette has been a prominent figure in American politics. He has been a life-long Republican, and is now holding the position of United States Senator elected as a Republican. Listen what he says of Roosevelt, and if what he says is true, and it must undoubtedly be, as Senator LaFollette is in position to know, he should not receive the vote of a single American citizen. They are as follows:

"Bryan at Baltimore, foregoing all chance of his own nomination, marshaling all his forces, braving Tammany and the trusts to rescue his party from their domination, carrying the conviction for the adoption of the most progressive Democratic platform yet offered and the nomination of the most progressive Democratic candidate available, was a towering figure of moral power and patriotic devotion to civic righteousness.

"Roosevelt at Chicago, backed by money derived from the stock watering operations of the Steel Trust and Harvester Trust, organizing what are now confessed to have been "fake" contests as to nearly 200 delegates in order to control the Republican convention and secure his own nomination, refusing to aid in making a progressive platform, bound to have the nomination or destroy the Republican party, was a most striking example of misdirected power and unworthy ambition.

"Roosevelt had as great opportunity to serve the progressive cause at Chicago as Bryan had at Baltimore. But Roosevelt was serving the man, not the cause. He wanted one thing—he wanted the nomination. And yet he did not have enough votes to nominate himself upon any honest basis. He did have enough delegates in that convention ultimately to have nominated a real progressive and adopted a strong progressive platform. He could even have nominated Hadley on such a platform and progressive Republicans could have supported Hadley in much the same spirit as hundreds of thousands of them will now support Wilson. But Roosevelt would not consider Hadley. He would have no one but himself. At the first suggestion of Hadley he ordered the third party manuvers, lest he loose his followers. If he had the evidence to prove that Taft could not be honestly and fairly nominated, why did he not direct his lieutenants to present that evidence to the national committee, and then to the convention and to the country, so clearly that the convention would not have dared to nominate Taft and that Taft could not, in honor, have accepted the nomination if made?

"The reason is obvious. An analysis of the testimony will, I am convinced, show that neither Taft nor Roosevelt had a majority of honestly or regularly elected delegates. This the managers upon both sides well understood. Each candidate was trying to seat a sufficient number of fraudulently credentialed delegates, added to those regularly chosen to support him, to secure control of the convention and "Steam Roll" the nomination. It was a proceeding with which each was acquainted and which each had sanctioned in prior conventions.

"This explains the [illegible] conduct of Roosevelt in refusing to aid Taft's regularally elected delegates in the minority without inevitably subjecting his own spuriously credentialed delegates to an examination so critical as to expose the falsity of his own contentions that he had an honestly elected majority of the delegates. He therefore deliberately chose to claim everything, to cry fraud, to bully the national committee and the convention, and sought to create a condition which would make impossible a calm investigation of cases upon merit, and to carry the convention by storm.

"That this is the true psychology of the Roosevelt proceedings becomes perfectly plain. He was there to force his own nomination or to smash the convention. He was not there to preserve the integrity of the Republican party and make it the instrument for the promotion of progressive principles and the restoration of Government to the people. Otherwise he would have directed his floor managers to contest every inch of the ground for a progressive platform before the committee on resolutions in the open convention. But Mr. Roosevelt was not governed by a suggestion of that spirit of high patriotic and unselfish purpose of which Bryan furnished such a magnificent example one week later in the Democratic convention at Baltimore. Instead he filled the public ear with sound and fury. He ruthlessly sacrificed everything to the one idea of his being the one candidate. He gagged his followers in the convention without putting upon record any facts upon which the public could base a definite, intelligent judgment regarding the validity of Taft's nomination. He submitted no suggestion as to a platform of progressive principles. He clamored loudly for purging the convention roll of "Tainted" delegates, without purging his own candidacy of his tainted contests and his tainted trust support. He offered no reason for a third party, excepting his own overmastering craving for a third term."

This is what Senator LaFollette says of the Colonel. Senator LaFollette is a Republican and is one of the greatest statesmen of his day. While Roosevelt was playing in the hands of the trusts and corporations years ago, LaFollette was facing the storm of reactionaries and conservatives, fighting to make the Republican party a progressive party, because he saw that it was capable of putting the principles into practice. He knew that this, as all other third party movements, would never be capable of giving the people the relief that they so much needed. I think that I can help Senator LaFollette out a little with these words:

I'm twice as great as Washington,
Im twice as great as Grant;
Because third terms they didn't get
They needn't think I can't.

I'm twice as great as Jefferson
And Madison combined;
I'm twice as great of all the lot
Of Presidents, I find.

I'm greater than my country,
And its customs and its laws,
Its poor old constitution,
And its precedential flaws.

I'm tiwce as great as any man
Above or 'neath the sod—
In fact, I'm half inclined to think
I'm most as great as God.

E. E. CALLAWAY.

FRIEND TO THE FARMER

Congressman Blackmon Contrasted With Taft.

In bold contrast with the work of Mr. Taft in vetoing the Coosa river bill stands the work of Congressman Blackmon, whose record we herewith present, in order to their relations to the farmers are concerned. Taft wishes to "conserve" everything that will help or uplift the money kings and the mighty trusts; Congressman Blackmon wishes to help the toiling masses of his constituents whom he so faithfully represents. He is essentially a "farmer's congressman;" while he has much other work to his credit—work of a solid, substantial nature—the bulk of his congressional labors during the last session were devoted to the interests of the farmer and laborer—to "the man with the hoe."

Mr. Blackmon did not content himself with sending out seeds and pamphlets, as do many congressmen—he wanted a more practical basis upon which to rest his claims for re-election as a public servant of the people. He was not at all negligent in the matter of sending out seeds, but he did many, many other things; his greatest praise comes from the fact that when the farmers of the South were aroused he rushed into the breach and saved the day for them; it was almost a single handed battle, and valiantly did he fight for the farmers.

Briefly: When the Lever bill was introduced in the House creating the agricultural demonstration stations and the work of agricultural demonstration and turning all this work over to the few "land grant" colleges Mr. Blackmon saved the day for the farmers by defeating this pernicious bill.

The bill would have abolished the work now held by Mr. W. H. Conway and put an end to the efficient, effective work done and being done by him. It would have cut his salary and the salary of every other demonstration agent into the hands of the "land grant" colleges; it would have taken from the farmers the right and privilege of seeing within their own counties the fruits of scientific farming or the opportunity for learning the advantages of improved methods of agriculture. No one can, or will doubt, the great work done by Mr. Conway and his associates, in lifting us from a twenty bushel set of farmers to an association of farmers who produce one hundred bushels. That work could not, would not have been done effectively, by "land grant colleges."

At the time this bill was introduced Mr. Blackmon had an engagement to speak elsewhere, but fearing that something might be included in the "Lever bill," which would endanger the success and happiness of the farmers of his district he cancelled his engagement and remained in Washington to safeguard their interests; and it was well that he did; when the bill was called up abolishing the demonstration agencies and placing the work with the "land grant" colleges Mr. Blackmon immediately arose and introduced an amendment providing that nothing in the Lever bill should be construed to mean that the demonstration work now being carried on nor the office of demonstration agents now in operation should be abolished, nor should it in any way interfere with the work now being conducted by the demonstration agents or take away any part of their salary. This work of Mr. Blackmon should appeal directly and most forcibly to the farmers of our section. It matters not what their past political creed, they should accord him a unanimous endorsement for the signal work which he has accomplished in their behalf.

Farmers are not, as a rule, forgetful or ungrateful—we do not believe that in this instance they will be so.

Without permission, we take the liberty to refer any "doubting Thomas" to Mr. W. H. Conway, our efficient demonstration agent, as to what the results would have been to the farmers of this country had the Lever bill not been blocked by Congressman Blackmon. Ask him—he will tell you.

Sheriff Jones bagged five violators of the prohibition law last Saturday; all came from the neighborhood of Lomax and Verbena.

Town Marshal Lavender [illegible] taking in the Confederate [illegible] and Verbena is behind this week.

MR. EDWARDS' REPLY

at present, and as you have not hereto fore denied those who differ with you, space in your paper to express an honest conviction, I will ask that you give me enough of your space to express my political views.

(The Press has never denied the right of free speech to any one, even though they may differ materially with our views; all we ask is that mud slinging and abuse be avoided.—Note by the Editor.)

I am a republican from the bottom to the top; I have voted the republican ticket every chance I have had for the past sixteen years.

The republicans in Chilton county have a few times nominated men who tried to be "Jack of all parties," and I voted against them, believing that it is not best to permit any one man to exercise too much power even in local politics. I knew they would sometime go off after something else and try to ruin the party that honored them.

Now, fellow republicans, don't be deceived by such men and led by them to the slaughter pen.

Listen to what they say; the following is a clipping from the Union Banner, to-wit:" The Progressive, Bull Moose, party cannot win in November, but it can help and will help to defeat the old party and Woodrow Wilson will succeed President Taft in the White House."

Now is that not plain enough? And the Union-Banner is the Progressive organ in this county!

If you don't know what the Banner is I will tell you. It was once a populist paper, then a democratic paper, then a republican paper; now it is a progressive paper, and God only knows what it will be next.

What went with the money Teddy got to defeat the republican party and elect the democrats? If the Chilton county leaders did not get their part they were not treated right.

We don't think they would have organized a new party to defeat their own ticket unless they had been well paid for it. Then, too, we know some men in Chilton county get the money, even if they do have to bust h— out of their own business to do it. It's time to watch!

Every republican who votes the progressive ticket will help do just what the Union-Banner says the progressive party will do.

Any man who claims to be a republican and votes for any other ticket than the republican ticket is not a republican but a traitor.

My letter is getting too long, Mr. Editor, and yet I have not yet half finished.

I notice the progressives invite all to their speakings; if they will agree to divide time we will be there.

Respectfully,
G. W. Edwards.

TO THE FARMERS OF CHILTON

See Where Your Interests Lie.

Referring to the article in last week's issue concerning Mr. Taft's veto of the Coosa river bill we wish to call the attention of our farmer friends to another matter connected with that veto, —a thing in which they are vitally and financially interested.

Not only did he veto that bill at the behest, and in the interest of the great railroad systems, the coal operators and other giant monopolies, but he did it to the everlasting detriment of the farmers of the country, and of this [illegible] sources" is not only untenable but undefendable. He destroys millions of feet of timber and thhousands of tons of coal to preserve a muddy, unnavigable little stream which the government will never undertake to make navigable till the moon turns to blood and elephants roost in Sycamore trees.

But what did he do for the farmers of this section, you ask?

The company which sought the privilege of erecting a dam over the river has a scientific, yet common sense method of obtaining by means of electricity which they proposed to generate, a substance from the surrounding atmosphere called "CYANAMID," which is now conceded to be the cheapest and yet the very best fertilizer known to the scientic world; it is gathered from the atmosphere at such small expense that it can be sold to farmers at a nominal cost. This "CYANAMID" would have reduced the fertilizer bill of the average farmer from eighty to ninety per cent each year, and would, at the same time, have supplied him with a fertilizer much more productive and lasting than that bought from any commercial fertilizer house. It is peculiarly adapted to our soil; rich in nitrogen, it brings forth abundantly.

The product would have been manufactured right at our doors, and would have furnished employment for hundreds of young men who are now idle or poorly paid; it would have given to the planter a composition for his acreage which would have surpassed three-fold any composition now sold for fertilizer purposes; it would have enriched the farms of this section well night beyond the limits of imagination; it would have doubled, yea, trebled, the yield of the ordinary farm.

This is what Mr. Taft did in his veto of the Coosa river bill, besides the many other things which that veto brought about.

There are but two other factories of "CYANAMID" in the world, one in far off Norway, where the people are growing richer every day by its use, and one in New York where the northern farmer is taking advantage of his opportunities and enriching his worn-out land with the product drawn from the atmosphere with but little cost. Both factories have pronounced the manufacture of Cyanamid a marvelous success. We are deprived of it because Mr. Taft wished to "conserve our natural resources." Took away with one sweep of the pen the right of our southern farmers to double their yield and to enrich their lands in order that the railroads and coal barons might enjoy the fruits of the giant trusts which they have built.

Yes, President Taft is preserving our natural resources—with a vim!

He's preserving the southern farmer to labor for the great interests; he's preserving the boys of the corn and cotton fields to grow up the slaves of the "commercial interests"—if you call that preservation he's a dandy at preservation—for the rich against the poor, for the mighty against the weak.

Think over these things Mr. Farmer, and see if we have not told you the unvarnished truth.

Vote for Taft with his "preservation" theories all against the south?

Vote for Roosevelt with his negro woman voter in the south?

No, never, Never, NEVER!

MINOR HAPPENINGS IN ALABAMA CITIES, TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

DEGENERACY ON INCREASE

This is the Statement of Superintendent of Bryce Hospital for Insane at Tuscaloosa.

Montgomery.—Degeneracy is increasing in Alabama because of the life of modern civilization, according to Dr. George A. Searcy, superintendent of the Bryce hospital for insane at Tuscaloosa. Dr. Searcy's theory is that degeneracy is being caused by the complexity of modern living. He declares that the number of insane patients at the Bryce hospital is continually increasing.

Eight hundred of the 2,200 patients in the white institution at Tuscaloosa and the negro hospital at Mount Vernon were confined within the past year. It is understood Dr. Searcy will write a treatise on the question or will include a number of suggestions in his annual report to the state.

Birmingham.—The annual convention of the Southern Ice exchange will be held here November 12, 13 and 14 of this year and hundreds of ice men from the south are expected to attend. Many interesting speeches will be made at the convention by southern men, among them being W. J. Rushton, John Sparrow and William Diehl of Birmingham. The local ice men are laying elaborate plans for the entertainment of the delegates and have already arranged for the old time barbecue, a theatre party a banquet, an automobile trip and an industrial excursion and sight seeing trip throughout the city.

Ozark.—Dan Eason, a prominent citizen living near the line of Dale and Barbour about Clio, was caught in his gin and cut to pieces. He was turning out his 12th bale when he raised the breast and was caught in the saws which drew his whole body up, cutting his arms, breast, face and sawing into his brain. He lived only a few minutes after the accident.

Jacksonville.—Calhoun county is to have an educational fair November 21, 22 and 23 at Jacksonville. This is the first county fair of importance in Alabama of an educational nature. Five hundred dollars is to be raised for premiums and expenses. The chamber of commerce co-operating with the state normal school voted to hold the fair, donated $100 toward starting the subscription.

Eufaula.—The question of holding a street fair here this fall was definitely determined when the new city council by a unanimous vote granted the Commercial club of the city the privilege of the public streets for the use of the shows. The exact date has not been determined upon, but it is generally understood that the latter part of next month will be designated.

Greensboro.—At a meeting of the Commissioners court of Hale county to consider the bids for the construction of the model section of state aid road, the commissioners found that only one bid had been submitted. The commissioners, after consideration of the matter in many lights, voted to reject this bid and to advertise for other bids. The new bids will be opened at a meeting of the court October 25.

Montgomery.—Deafness is twice as prevalent in Alabama as blindness, according to statistics deducted from statements of Dr. J. H. Johnson, president of the state school for the deaf and dumb at Talladega. Three hundred pupils attend the school and there are twice as many deaf persons as blind ones.

Talladega.—State Examiner Wilkerson and Examiner Sedburry have both completed their examination of the books and accounts of this county, and have given the officials a "clean bill of health."

Gadsden.—John B. Adams, assistant jail inspector, was in Gadsden and inspected the Etowah county jail. He found the grounds about the building reeking with foul dirt, and it is possible that the jail may be condemned on this account.

Huntsville.—The remodeling of the Southern railroad passenger depot began. The work is being done by contractors and about $12,000 will be expended.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED

Historic Selma Did Itself Proud in Providing Entertainment For Veterans and Visitors.

Selma.—Historic Selma, the central city of Alabama entertained for the first time in its history the Veterans of the Confederate Army, members of the Alabama Division, the occasion being the annual reunion and dates October 16 and 17.

Edmond W. Pettus made the address of welcome in behalf of the local camp and other patriotic organizations of the city.

The reunion was opened at the court house at noon, October 16, the parade taking place at 11 a. m., October 17.

The Sons of Veterans met at 10 a. m., October 16, at the Y. M. C. A. hall.

On the night of October 16 an informal reception was given at the Central City Club.

The historic old battle flag of the 20th Alabama Regiment of the Confederate Army was one of the flags shown during the reunion. This flag was presented to the regiment by the women of Selma at the beginning of the war and waved over many battlefields in the four years of conflict.

Selma perhaps entertained the largest crowds in its history. The entire citizenship formed itself into a committee of entertainment and there was nothing left undone to add to the comfort and pleasure of the Veterans, Sons of veterans and visitors.

Montgomery.—After being hunted forty years on a charge of murdering John A. Berry, a white man near Jackson's Lake, December 18, 1871, Freeman Long, a negro, was arrested at Palmetto, Georgia, and brought to Montgomery by J. G. Jackson, Sheriff of Elmore County, where he must stand trial for the crime with which he is charged.

Birmingham.—Cullman County's agricultural exhibit at the State fair in Birmingham was awarded the prize, $800, with Montgomery County second, $500; Baldwin County, third $300; Madison County fourth, $150. and Marion County fifth, $100.

Dothan.—Judge Thomas G. Jones. Jones, of the Federal District Court, will hold a session of the court here beginning November 8, at which time the criminal docket will be taken up. The civil docket will come up November 27. An order was issued to the Federal Marshal to draw a venire for the grand jury, which will be organized the first day of the court's sitting.

Montgomery.—The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals for the fifth circuit will meet here October 21, and the judges will sit until a length docket is disposed of. Owing to repairs being made at the county court house, only one court room is available. The city civil court will be in session there during the latter part of the month.

Rogersville.—A fine barn, owned by Otis Fuqua was burned and Jim Fuqua, a negro boy, was arrested charged with setting it afire. The barn was built sixty years ago by the grandfather of the present owner, of hewed logs, and was one of the finest in the county. The loss was a heavy one, as Mr. Fuqua had in the barn two mules, two bales of cotton, four hogs, vehicles and hay.

Decatur.—E. H. Allison, E. P. Jennings, Colonel Kahr, Mr. Gilliespie and a number of other citizens of the Decaturs are interested in a gold mine in Cleburne county, near the Georgia line.

Montgomery—Use of the Alabama river in transporting lumber and cotton this year would partly solve the car shortage problem in Alabama, according to G. O. Willis of the United States engineers' office. He believes the river can be used almost the whole year if the boats draw three feet of water. Heretofore steamers have been loaded to a four or five foot stage and have been unable to pass certain points in the river, according to the engineer. Mr. Willis thinks that much of the railroad congestion can be relieved if boats between Wetumpka and Mobile are placed on the river.

Cullman.—The appointment of Robert B. Thompson to the postmastership of Cullman has been practically confirmed in the fact that Mr. Thompson has been requested to furnish the postoffice department with his official bond.

Montgomery.—The discovery of America was not officially recognized in Montgomery, October 12, although the last legislature made Columbus Day a legal holiday. Only 10 stores observed Columbus Day as a legal holiday.

Gadsden.—The county commissioners named R. H. Lister, son of Tom Lister, as Etowah's representative at the medical department of the University of Alabama. He will receive the scholarship allotted to this county.

Mobile.—The school commission reported to [illegible] that city [illegible] to the people of Mobile [illegible]

SAW NO CAUSE FOR WORRY

Small Boy Pretty Well Satisfied That the Future Was Not Likely to Be a Hard One.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says:

A Lakewood woman was recently reading to her little boy the story of a young lad whose father was taken ill and died, after which he set himself diligently to work to support himself and mother. When she had finished the story she said:

"Dear Billy, if your papa were to die would you work to support your dear mamma?"

"Naw!" said Billy, unexpectedly.

"But why not?"

"Ain't we got a good house to live in?"

"Yes, dearie—but we can't eat the house, you know."

"Ain't there a lot o' stuff in the pantry?"

"Yes, but that won't last forever."

"It'll last till you git another husband, won't it? You're a pretty good looker, ma!"

Mamma gave up right there.

HEAD FULL OF DANDRUFF

1802 Reynolds & 34th St., Savannah, Ga.—"My head began to get sore and all around the edges got white with the disease until I was quite scared. I thought all my hair would drop out. It came out by handfuls, and my head itched so I nearly scratched the skin off. It was full of dandruff which showed plainly in my hair. I also had trouble with my hand. It peeled every time I put it in water, and it was so badly disfigured that everybody noticed it and asked me what it was. It was red, and burned awfully.

"My mother tried several things but they were unsuccessful, and it seemed as if nothing did it any good until I started to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. It had lasted about four weeks, but then it started getting well and my hair stopped falling completely. Now it is cured. My hair is now nice and thick and is growing to a nice length. I also used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for my hand and completely cured it." (Signed) Miss Hattie M. Jones, Nov. 8, 1911.

SHE COULD ANSWER FOR HIM

Little Comfort for Candidate in Reason Assigned by Wife for Her Being Confident.

Mr. Williams, one of five candidates for the office of sheriff in one of the northern counties of Wisconsin, was making a house-to-house canvass of rural districts soliciting votes. Coming t othe house of Farmer Thompson, he was met at the door by the good housewife, and the following dialogue ensued:

"Is Mr. Thompson at home?"

"No, he has gone to town."

"I am very sorry, as I would have liked to talk to him."

"Is there anything I can tell him for you?"

"My name is Williams, candidate for sheriff, and I wanted to exact a promise from him to vote for me at the coming election."

"Oh, that will be all right. I know he will promise, for he has already promised four other candidates the same thing."—Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

Explains the Undertaker's Grouch.

"Who is that fellow sitting humped up and muttering to himself out there on the horse block?"

"Aw, that's Ezra Toombs, the undertaker," replied the landlord of the Skeedee tavern. "He's feeling sore over the way his business has been going of late. You see, the doctor gave Judge Feebles two weeks to live; that was six weeks ago, and the judge is up and around now and figgerin' on marryin' again. Every time Ezra meets the doctor he asks him, 'How about it, hey?' and they have a row. And now he's sittin' out there watching a tramp painter gilding the weather vane of the church across the street. Ezra says, by Heck, he's about ready to move away, things is so dead here."—Kansas City Star.

Protected Both Ways.

Two conservative ladies of old-fashioned notions were traveling in the west and, becoming interested in a young girl on the train, finally asked why she was making so long a journey alone. They were greatly shocked at her blithe explanation:

"Well, you see, my mother and stepfather live at one end of the journey, and my father and stepmother live at the other. They send me to each other twice a year, so there isn't a bit of danger with four parents all on the lookout!"

What's the Use?

Church—Do you think the world is growing better?

Gotham—I'm afraid not. I read today that a cornet that can be played by a roll of perforated paper, like a piano player, is a recent invention, and I see Evelyn Thaw's pictures are coming back in the papers.

A Woman's Way.

"What sort of woman is she?"

"Why, she's the sort of woman that finds delight in reading all the stuff that's printed about the new babies of the idle rich."

Submits Tamely.

"Is Scriblet what you would call a struggling author?"

"No, indeed. When an editor puts him out he doesn't offer the slightest resistance."

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. MORAL FOR THE MONEY-MAD

Hope of Becoming Millionaires About on a Par With the Washerwoman's Delusion.

Prof. Warren M. Beidler of Bethel, Pa., in a recent address made the striking assertion that the American people, money-mad, taught their children how to earn a living, but not how to live.

"There is no viler, and there is no vainer ambition," said Professor Beidler to a reporter, "than that of the American boy to become a millionaire. What percentage of our boys do become millionaires? It would take a good many decimals to work that out, believe me!

"The boys who sets his heart on a million fares like the washerwoman who set her heart on a cross-eyed aeronaut.

"'I hear you married that cross-eyed aeronaut last week?" said a friend.

"'Yes, I did,' replied the washerwoman, as she rocked back and forth over her tub. "Yes, I married him, and I gave him $500 out of my buildin' association to start an airship factory.'

"'That so?' said the friend. 'Where is he now?'

"'I don't know,' said the washerwoman. 'I'm waitin' for him to come back from his honeymoon.'"

Wise Young Man.

That was a very wise Cambridge student of whom the London story tellers were talking some time ago. One of his college friends finding himself without funds, went to this Solomon of students to borrow. He found him in bed. Seizing him by the shoulder, he shook him.

"I say," he said, "are you asleep?"

"Why do you ask?" queried the other, sleepily.

"I want to borrow a sovereign."

"Yes," said the other, turning over and closing his eyes. "I'm asleep."

Takes Ugliness Philosophically.

A man whose face is heavily pitted through a case of smallpox in his infancy, has been able to extract amusement from his appearance. Once he gave an explanation of it by saying that he had fallen down a shot tower.

Asked how he was able to shave himself, he answered:

"With a belt punch."

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

A clean campaign, devoid of mud-slinging, is more desirable than any office at stake. After all we be brethren.

The election is but a few days off. Wilson is gaining ground every day, Taft is losing ground each day and Teddy is barely holding his own. Hurrah for the Wilson boys! A campaign financed by the people, for the people, is bound to succeed.

The Press is going to print from time to time sections from the laws of Clanton to the end that these laws may be lodged in the minds of our readers. Most of them are violated because the violators do not know the law. The City Code should be recodified and promulgated anyway. It's been fifteen years since the old Code was printed.

Isn't it a God-send that Schrank never attempted the life of Roosevelt when he followed him through the South? When would we have ever heard the last of it had it happened upon southern soil? Deplorable as it was it was a blessing that it did not happen south of the imaginary line called after two well known gentlemen by the names of Mason and Dixon.

The dastardly attempt upon the life of ex-President Roosevelt, which occurred in Milwaukee last Monday evening, is to be deeply and genuinely regretted by all classes regardless of political affiliations.

It is a sad commentary upon our free government when a man cannot aspire to high political office without incurring the enmity of some crank who undertakes to regulate matters with a pistol. The Giteaus, Booths and Czolgoses are not all dead yet, much to the discredit of our country.

Section 60, page 30 of the Code of Clanton laws reads:

Any person who shall tie or fasten any horse or other animal in such a manner as to permit it to stand upon the sidewalk, or ride or drive any horse or other animal upon any sidewalk, except for the immediate delivery of goods, (what a poor clause) and then only by a special permission of the committee on streets, shall be fined not less than one dollar nor more than one hundred dollars."

Mr. Chief of Police, this section is violated every day of the week, including Sundays.

Section 75, page 32, Chapter 7 of the Code of Clanton laws reads:

"No person shall keep on his premises any nuisance to the annoyance of his neighbors or injurious to the public health. Any person so annoyed may complain to the Mayor or Marshal, who shall require an abatement of the nuisance within twenty-four hours, under a penalty, on conviction, of not exceeding ten dollars for every day that such nuisance exists after notice given by the Marshal, or other officer, to remove or abate said nuisance; and upon failure of the owner or occupant after notice to abate said nuisance, the same may be abated at the expense of said owner or occupant."

Get busy, Mr. Marshall. The law is plain, unequivocal. Tell them all now that PIG [illegible] nuisance-property for sale.

es in a city. Abate them, Mr. Marshal, that's what you are elected to do.

THORSBY NEWS

Rev. Richards and wife left Monday night for their new field of labor in the North. Although we regret very much to lose them, we wish them much success in their new work.

The officers of the town seized several gallons of whiskey last Saturday night.

One of the prayer meetings of the town seems to be dying out since their spiritual leader left.

Mrs. S. H. Herbert is still in the sanitarium in Birmingham, but we are glad to say she is slowly improving after her long and serious illness.

A few nights ago three young men were arrested in Thorsby; one for disorderly conduct while drunk and the other two for selling whiskey. We are glad the officers took them to Clanton to be tried; Mayor Bice is too easy on them. Six months hard labor for the county is what they need.

Good Meals Prepared Best on

Cole's Hot Blast Range

Your kitchen work made easy if you use a satisfactory range.

The small amount of fuel you use in preparing meals on Cole's Hot Blast Range should be of interest to you.

The Hot Blast Combustion burns the gases in soft coal. The flame from the burning gases is carried to the back lids and the entire top is thus evenly heated instead of only the two front lids. It also means that the temperature of the oven is kept at a given point without poking the fire or replenishing the fuel.

We are hearing from the users of Cole's Hot Blast Ranges. They say Cole's Range does all we claim for it. This affords us much satisfaction and we take pride in recommending this truly unequaled range.

Hadn't you better come in and let us show you the many features, (14 special and patented) which cannot be had on any other range?

Sec. 3. That at the general election in November, 1912, an election shall be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State upon the proposed amendment. Upon the ballots used at such election shall be printed the following, viz: Amendment to Constitution, authorizing the Legislature, by general or local laws, from time to time, to fix, regulate and alter the costs, charges of courts, fees, commissions, allowances and salaries to be charged or received by any county officer of Jefferson county, including the method and basis of their compensation. Following the proposed amendment on the ballot shall be printed the word, "Yes," and immediately under that shall be printed the word, "No." The choice of the electors shall be indicated by a cross mark by him opposite the word expressing his desire.

Sec. 4. The officers of such general election shall open a poll for the vote of the qualified electors upon the proposed amendment. The election shall be held in all things in accordance with the law governing general elections. In the election upon such proposed amendment the votes cast thereat shall be canvassed, tabulated and the returns thereof be made to the Secretary of State and counted in the same manner as in elections for representatives in the Legislature, and if it shall thereupon appear that a majority of the qualified electors who voted upon the proposed amendment voted in favor of the same, such amendment shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution of Alabama. The result of such election shall be made known by the proclamation of the Governor.

EFFORT MADE TO ASSASSINATE COLONEL THEODORE ROOSEVELT

Reports Regarding Wound Say It Is Not Serious.

MANUSCRIPT ROLL IMPEDES THE BULLET

Notes Found On Assassin's Person Show He Is Demented On Subject of Third Term.

Milwaukee. — Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was shot in the right breast by an assassin as he entered an automobile in front of the Hotel Gilpatrick to start for an auditorium, where he was to speak. He insisted on going to the hall, there quieted the crowd that heard he had been shot and made his speech, though apparently weak and then was taken to an emergency hospital.

The bullet struck a roll of manuscript of his speech and this probably saved his life. After an hour's questioning, the assassin gave his name as John Schrenk of 370 East Tenth street, New York. From notes found in the prisoner's clothes, it is evident he is demented on the subject of Colonel Roosevelt running for a third term.

Colonel Roosevelt barely moved as the shot was fired. Before the crowd knew what had happened Martin, who is six feet tall and a former football player, had landed squarely on the assassin's shoulders and had borne him to the ground. He threw his right arm about the man's neck with a deathlike grip and with his left arm seized the hand that held the revolver. In another second he had disarmed him.

Colonel Roosevelt's life probably was saved by a manuscript of the speech which he delivered. The bullet struck the manuscript which retarded its force as it passed through into the flesh. His assailant was prevented from firing a second shot by Albert H. Martin, one of Colonel Roosevelt's two secretaries. Colonel Roosevelt had just stepped into an automobile when the would-be assassin pushed his way through the crowd in the street and fired. Martin, who was standing in the car with the Colonel, leaped onto the man's shoulders and bore him to the ground.

Captain A. O. Girard of Milwaukee, who was on the front seat, jumped almost at the same time, and in an instant the man was overpowered and disarmed.

A wild cry of "lynch him" went up. Colonel Roosevelt shouted to the people and told them to spare the man, who then was taken into the hotel and held there until he was removed to the police station.

In spite of the entreaties of postponement, Colonel Roosevelt insisted upon delivering his address.

"I will make this speech or die, one or the other," he said.

Henry F. Cochems, one of the Wisconsin progressive leaders, told the great crowd assembled in the auditorium that Colonel Roosevelt had been shot and asked the people to be calm. The crowd was thrown almost into a panic by the announcement, but Colonel Roosevelt himself calmed the people by rising and delivering his address.

The Physicians' Statement.

Chicago.—At progressive headquarters here the following message was received from Milwaukee, sent by the surgeons attending Colonel Roosevelt.

"Conel Roosevelt is suffering from a superficial flesh wound in the right breast. There is no evidence of injury to the lung. The bullet is probably somewhere in the chest wall. There is only one wound and no sign of injury to the lung. The bleeding is insignificant. The wound has been sterilized externally with gauze by Dr. R. G. Fayle, the consulting surgeon of the emergency hospital. The bullet passed through Colonel Roosevelt's army overcoat and other clothing and through a manuscript and spectacle case in his breast pocket, and its course was nearly spent before it penetrated the chest. The appearance of the wound also showed evidence of a much spent bullet.

"Colonel Roosevelt is not suffering from the shock and is in no pain. His condition is so good that the surgeons did not object to his continuing his journey to Chicago in his private car. In Chicago he will be placed under surgical care.

"The X-Ray photograph has been finished and the Colonel is feeling fine. He is seeing the newspaper men and presently will go to his car to start for Chicago.

Resume of Work Done by the Alabama Good Roads Association From Oct. 1911 to Oct. 1912.

By J. A. ROUNTREE, Secretary.

I am standing before you today, in our sixteenth annual convention. It is the sixteenth time that I have stood before you in annual convention as your secretary trying to tell you of the full happenings of the year just past.

The year just past has been the most successful in the history of the Alabama Good Roads Association in arousing interest in the cause of good roads. More public meetings have been held; more county and local good roads associations have been organized and more miles of roads have been constructed in Alabama during the year 1912 than ever in the history of the association, or the State of Alabama. Through the splendid missionary work that has been done by this association, the people have become more aroused than ever on the subject of good roads. They are eager for good roads in every part of the state and they are determined that good roads shall be built. Today, there are forty county good roads associations in Alabama, together with four District Highway organizations.

Since the last meeting of the association, plans are on foot to organize every county in the State and to revivify those organizations that have already been organized. During the past twelve months, speeches have been delivered and good roads rallies held in over sixty counties in the State. Nine counties in Alabama have held a good roads bond election, and the people in seven of the counties have overwhelmingly indorsed the same. In one of the counties, the election was lost by two votes, while in the other county the majority against bonds was less than one hundred.

There are four counties where bond campaigns are now pending, and several other counties are arranging for bond elections. In all these campaigns, the Alabama Good Roads Association has used its influences, furnished speakers and literature in them, and done everything possible to advance the cause of good roads. The agitation for good roads in a number of counties in the State has grown so interesting and in earnest that the people have bid for them by making donations to have roads located in their respective precincts and counties. Under the State Aid Appropriation Act, which the Alabama Good Roads Association secured, fifty-two counties in the State have taken advantage of that law and secured the appropriation of $2,000 to build roads in their counties. Only fifteen counties in the State have failed to avail themselves of this appropriation, but it is believed that before January the first, the last limit, that every county in the State will have availed itself of this opportunity. This goes to show the great interest that has been aroused for good roads, and the people are more determined than ever that a great system of highways in Alabama shall be built.

Good Roads Days.

Early in January, your secretary conceived the idea of establishing three days to be known as Good Roads Days, and to request the people and property owners in the sixty-seven counties in Alabama to turn out on these days and work the roads. Letters were written to the Probate Judges, commissioners, good roads organizations and good roads advocates asking their opinion. Their replies were most encouraging, giving their hearty indorsment of the suggestion. The Executive Committee of the Alabama Good Roads Association was called and a resolution adopted indorsing the suggestion to estabish Good Roads Days in Alabama, and selected August 14th, 15th and 16th. The co-operation of County Officials and the people generally was appealed to through the press of the State and by circular and personal letters. Much to the gratification of your Executive Officials, the people in over forty counties in the State observed these days, and over fifty thousand people worked the roads on the same day. In the counties where Good Roads Days were observed, the people were delighted and are anxious that the days be made permanent. From the success that has been made of these days, it will be wise of the Association to pass resolutions permanently adopting them, also to ask the Legislature at its next session, to pass a law legalizing these days, and to require every man of road age to work the roads on these days, and also to call upon the property owners to assist in this good work.

Bond Issue.

At the last annual meeting of the Association, in Selma, October 27, 1911, a resolution was adopted calling upon the people to agitate and discuss the question of changing the constitution of Alabama to issue fifty million dollars worth of bonds to build good roads. This question has been agitated through the press and by public speakers all over the State, and from letters that have been received by your secretary, as well as the indorsement of over fifty newspapers in Alabama, good seed has been sown, and there are advocates of this measure in every part of the State, so that the work of education by the association along advanced lines is progressing and being indorsed by the people.

At the last annual meeting of the Association, a resolution was indorsed to make an effort to increase the membership of the Association. Your secretary, in accordance with this resolution, mailed a number of invitations to prominent citizens, and twenty-five patriotic Alabamians joined the Association. The difficulty of securing members of the Association is that men will join by being asked personally to do so, but will not join by simply receiving a circular letter. The Association should take steps to secure more life and regular members of the organization, so as to furnish funds for the promotion and advancement of the cause of good roads in Alabama. A strong Finance Committee should be created with power to call upon the public spirited citizens and corporations and ask them to become contributing members to help to advance the great work of the Association.

The work of the Alabama Good Roads Association has been more or less circumscribed by the meagerness of its funds. Twenty-two patriotic citizens of Alabama have qualified as Life Members of this Association by paying the membership fee of $10. This has been the fund that this association has received to pay stenographer, printing, stamps, telegrams and incidentals in carrying on the work of the association. Your secretary has written and sent out during the past twelve months over 4,000 letters, 2,000 pamphlets and 10,000 copies of speeches delivered in congress on good roads—these speeches were franked through the mails to the people of Alabama and were mailed from headquarters of the Association. The expense of this correspondence and work has been defrayed from the funds above referred to and an itemized statement of the receipts and disbursements are open to inspection by the members of the Association. No officer or member of this body has received any compensation for services toward the upbuilding of the Association and the cause of good roads. The Association is hampered in its usefulness by the need of funds to carry on its work. Every week, there is a demand made on the secretary's office for literature—such as speeches and pamphlets on good roads to distribute among the voters of the State. The Association should provide a fund to carry on this educational campaign by sending out literature and organizers so that every county in the State shall have a permanent working organization and delegates be selected from these bodies to the annual meeting.

The Association has grown in importance, influence and power, and is deserving of every citizen interested in the State's advancement (and advancement is largely synonymous with the condition of its system of roads), is urged to help forward this movement by becoming a Life Member or regular member of the State Association, and an active worker for good roads in his own county precinct and town.

My LADY of DOUBT

By RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "Love Under Fire," "My Lady of the North," etc.

SYNOPSIS.

Walter Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started during a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's men and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the home of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and meets the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men.

"Who are those fellows back there?" I questioned at last, made nervous by the silence.

"The boys in the gulch? Jersey militiamen," he explained shortly. "You see there's some of us that don't get away all the time, because of the women and children, and the farm work. Besides, regular soldiering don't just appeal to our sort. So we do our fighting round home in our own way. However, the most of us manage to have a hand in the real thing once in a while even at that. We were over at Germantown, and then at Brandywine. Farrell's got a commission, but the rest of us are taking our chances. It's neighbor against neighbor. Whatever we've got left has been held at the point of the rifle. We're doing our share in the war, an' Washington knows it. There there to the east 'Red' Fagin, Tom Man Kelly, an' their gangs of Pine Robbers, are making the fields red; sometimes they get down this far among the farms, but mostly, we're fighting foragers out of Philadelphia, and they're not much better. Half the wars in this country have been fought, and mercy isn't very common on either side. Those lads yonder are pretty soldiers to look at, but they're wolves to fight, and hungry ones."

"They are called on whenever Farrell wishes?"

"Well, yes; those come who can. They're not always the same bunch. You see Farrell covers quite a bit of country, with a lieutenant in each section who is in touch with the neighboring there. I belong in Camden, and don't go outside very often, but there is a sort of organization all the way between here and New York. Whenever there is a big fight on, the most of us get into it somehow. Washington counts on us in a pinch, but mostly we're raiding or cutting off British supplies. Say, Major, isn't that those wagons coming?"

He pointed into the east, in which direction the road ran, barely revealed by the faint light of the moon for perhaps a hundred yards. I looked eagerly, and could dimly distinguish a dense shadow on the summit of a distant rise of land. The shadow moved, however, and as we both stared in unison, there came to our ears the faint crack of a whip. We drew further back against the bank, pausing to make sure there was no deception. One by one we could perceive the vague shadows topping the rise and disappearing. I counted ten, convinced they were covered wagons, when then the night wind brought to us the creaking of wheels, and the sound of a man's voice. Duval's hand touched my arm, and to the signal we crept back beyond the crest, and then crawled down to where Farrell had assembled his men. He was awaiting us in the middle of the road, his short stout figure almost laughable in the dim shadow.

"Well, are they coming?"

"Just over the crest," replied Duval promptly. "I counted fifteen wagons." "Quite a convoy, an' worth fighting for. Take the left, Duval; Major, stay with me."

We drew aside under the protection of the ridge, from where we could see down to the top of the ridge. Only a moment was there silence, the night all about us lying low in their fear, breathless and intent. Then we heard horses' hoofs and the murmur of approaching voices.

We could see them quite clearly, as they topped the crest, the moonlight revealing men and horses so distinctly we could even guess at their uniform. Three in advance rode slowly, four others down into the black shadows, then in their saddles, voices murmuring, seemingly unconscious of any danger. It was easy to comprehend their state of mind. Delavan had been gone for a week, permitted to ride the countryside unmolested. Indeed, his command had naturally grown careless, never suspecting their every move had been watched by our mounted scouts. Now, guarded by a small troop, they believed themselves sufficiently strong for any enemy; that no force the scattered enemy could gather would venture an attack. By daylight they would be within sight of the Philadelphia outposts, and serenely confident in their numbers, the night would therefore become a mere bore. I heard Farrell chuckle grimly to himself as he observed the careless approach of those advance riders.

They were the Queen's Rangers, the white facings of their coats conspicuous, their guns swung at the shoulder in reckless confidence. A slim young lieutenant appeared to be in command.

Ten wagons passed without a movement or sound from the men lying concealed almost within arm's reach of the unconscious guards. Farrell never stirred, and I scarcely ventured to breathe. Then there came a squadron of Rangers, an officer riding alone in front, the black shadow of another section of the wagon train looming over the ridge behind them. The horsemen passed us, the officer turning in his saddle with an order to close up their ranks. I recognized Grant's voice, and then, sharp as a blow, rang out Farrell's whistle at my very ear.

There was a leap of flame from both sides the road, lighting up that gash in the clay bank as though it was an inferno, the red and yellow glow cleaving the night asunder, with ear-splitting roar. I was on my feet, my rifle spitting, yet hardly conscious of any act, stunned by the suddenness of the reports, confused by those black figures leaping forward through the weird glare. I saw and heard, and yet it was all a confused medley, in which I bore active part while scarcely realizing its significance. It was a fierce hand-to-hand melee so swiftly fought as to be over with almost in a minute, and yet so desperate the narrow roadway was strewn with bodies. Frightened horses whirled and ran; wagons were overturned; hemmed in against the high walls, Germans and British made one mad effort to extricate themselves; the advance guard came spurring back, pushing blindly into the ruck, the boyish voice of their young lieutenant sounding above the uproar. But our men were between the two, a compact body, each borderman fighting independently, but knowing the game. I heard no word of command, no shout of direction from either Farrel or Duval, yet we ripped them asunder with sweeping rifle butts, and, almost before I could catch a second breath, the few who remained on their feet were helplessly trapped. Farrell saw it was all over, and his whistle sounded again, stilling the uproar. Up to that moment he was beside me; with the echoing of the shrill blast he had disappeared.

It was Duval who emerged from the wreck of the train, demanding surrender.

"Who commands here?" he shouted. "Speak up quick."

There was hesitancy, and then out of the black mass huddled against the bank I recognized Grant's voice.

"I suppose I do; has any one seen Captain Delavan?"

"He fell at the first fire, sir," answered some one sullenly.

Grant stepped forth into the moonlight, and I could see his face, hard

"It Is a Pleasure to Meet With You Again, Especially Under Such Happy Circumstances. Do You Surrender?"

and determined, as he stepped forward to confront the dark figures.

"Who are you?" he demanded.

"Camden minute men. Do you surrender?"

He took a long breath, glancing about at the dark shadows. Some one held a lighted torch, the red flame casting a sudden gleam over the surrounding faces. It was clear that further resistance was useless, yet Grant temporized.

"Are you in command?"

"No," said Duval; "but I represent the commander."

"I deal with the one responsible in this affair and demand terms. Who is your leader?"

Duval smiled, turning his head inquiringly.

"I don't think you have much choice," he commented dryly. "However, perhaps you are not too proud to talk to a regular who outranks you—I present Major Lawrence, of the Continental Line."

Surprised as I was by being thus suddenly thrust forward into supreme authority, I as instantly understood the purpose, and stepped to the front. Grant stared at my face in the gleam of the smoking torch, almost as though he looked upon a ghost.

"You!"

"Certainly, Captain. It is a pleasure to meet with you again, especially under such happy circumstances. But my men are becoming impatient. Do you surrender?"

"Under what terms?" he parleyed.

"None, but we are not savages. You will be treated as prisoners of war."

His hatred of me made him obstinate, but the utter helplessness of their position was too apparent to be ignored. A Hessian muttered something in German, and Grant dropped the point of his sword with an oath.

"Good," I said promptly. "Lieutenant, have your men disarm the prisoners."

There was no resistance, and the militiamen herded them against the bank, encircled by a heavy guard. Duval singled out the officers from among the others, and brought them forward to where I stood. There were but three—Grant and two Hessians. I looked at them keenly, recalling the slight figure of the young lieutenant with the boy's voice. Could the lad have been shot, or what had become of him?

"Are you three all that are left?" I questioned bluntly. "Who commanded the vanguard?"

The two Hessians looked at each other stupidly, and I asked the question again before Grant saw fit to reply. His manner was excessively insolent.

"That is more than I know. We joined after dark, and I did not miss Delavan's officers."

"He was vat you call—vorgo, a volunteer lieutenant," added one of the Germans hastily. "We Mount Holly the most rank, and—"

"Who was he?"

CHAPTER X.

A Capture.

What was the matter with the fellow? Could he have sent for me merely to ask that question, insisting on privacy? There must surely be some hidden purpose behind this. Yet if so, there was no betrayal in the man's face. His eyes had an angry gleam in them, and his words were shot at me in deadly earnest.

"The lieutenant?" I repeated, not prepared for a direct reply. "Why, I hardly know—curiosity largely."

He stared at me in manifest unbelief.

"What do you expect to gain by lying?" he exclaimed sullenly. "You saw him, no doubt, or you would not have asked what you did."

"Certainly I saw him," more deeply puzzled than before at his insistence. "That was what aroused my interest. He seemed such a mere lad as he rode past, and later I heard his voice, the voice of a boy."

"Was that all?"

"All! What else could you suppose? It was dark, only a little gleam

"If You Interfere in My Personal Affairs Again I Am Going to Kill You."

of moon revealed outlines. I couldn't distinguish the face, but when he failed to appear after the fight I remembered him, and was afraid he had been hurt. Now I want to know what you mean. Who was the lad?"

He had seated himself on the stump, and was leaning forward, his face hidden from the light of the fire.

"Well, go on then," he returned finally. "If that's all you saw of him it's all right."

"No, it's not all right," I insisted, aroused by his peculiar actions. "What is all this mystery about? You told me you didn't know the man."

"I said I hadn't seen him, that we joined Delavan after dark," he corrected sharply. "But you needn't try to interview me, Major Lawrence," stiffening with anger, "for I haven't anything to say to a spy and leader of guerillas."

"You requested this interview; however, if you are satisfied I am, and you can return to your men. Shall I call the guard?"

He hesitated a moment, but whatever it was which had first inspired him to question me, was too strong to be thrown aside.

"Did—did Mistress Mortimer help you escape from Philadelphia?" he asked bluntly.

"That is entirely my affair. Why don't you ask the lady herself?"

"See here, damn you!" he burst out. "I haven't seen the lady. When I got back to the dining room she was gone, and then I was ordered out here. But you know you were being sought after, and I cannot imagine who else told you."

"You do not exhibit very great faith in the lady—the daughter of a loyalist."

He drew a quick breath, suddenly aware that he had gone too far.

"It is your sneaking spy methods, not the girl. She is innocent enough, but I suspect you dragged the truth out of her. Now see here!" and his voice took on the tone of a bully. "You are in power just now, but you won't always be. You can't hold me prisoner; not with these ragamuffins. They'll turn us loose as soon as they loot those wagons. I know how they work in the Jerseys. But first I intend to tell you something it will be worth your while to remember. Claire Mortimer is going to be my wife—my wife. War is one thing, but if you interfere in my personal affairs again, I am going to kill you."

"Indeed," smilingly. "Is Mistress Mortimer aware of the honor you are according her?"

"She is aware of the engagement, if that is what you mean. It has been understood since my childhood."

Eggs Clotworthy Ate.

Harry Clotworthy, who is an expert on military affairs, entered the dining room of the National Press club one morning and carried with him a ravenous appetite. Having eaten one breakfast, which consisted largely of eggs, he ordered another breakfast, which consisted even more largely of eggs. After his repast he went to the writing room to get off some letters. Half an hour later the steward of the club found the colored waiter loafing about the entrance of the writing room and asked him what he meant by being absent from his post.

"I got a good excuse," exclaimed the waiter, exhibiting the check for the egg breakfast. "Mr. Clotworthy done eat $2 worth of eggs and I ain't goin' to let him git away from here without payin' for them, high as eggs is now."

Daddy's Whack-Whack.

On the occasion of her last visit to a certain Baltimore household a young matron of that city found a little friend in tears.

"What's the matter with little Marie?" she asked, endeavoring to console the weeping child.

"Daddy has just given me whack-whack," the youngster replied between sobs.

"Thoughtless daddy!" exclaimed the young woman, repressing a smile. "And where did he whack-whack little Marie?"

"On the back of my tummy," was the answer.

"GOOD STUFF."

A Confirmed Coffee Drinker Takes to Postum.

A housewife was recently surprised when cook served Postum instead of coffee. She says:

"For the last five or six years I have been troubled with nervousness, indigestion and heart trouble. I couldn't get any benefit from the doctor's medicine so finally he ordered me to stop drinking coffee, which I did.

"I drank hot water while taking the doctor's medicine, with some improvement, then went back to coffee with the same old trouble as before.

"A new servant girl told me about Postum—said her folks used it and liked it in place of coffee. We got a package but I told her I did not believe my husband would like it, as he was a great coffee drinker.

"To my surprise he called for a third cup, said it was 'good stuff' and wanted to know what it was. We have used Postum ever since and both feel better than we have in years.

"My husband used to have bad spells with his stomach and would be sick three or four days, during which time he could not eat or drink anything. But since he gave up coffee and took to Postum, he has had no more trouble, and we now fully believe it was all caused by coffee.

"I have not had any return of my former troubles since drinking Postum, and feel better and can do more work than in the last ten years. We tell everyone about it—some say they tried it and did not like it. I tell them it makes all the difference—it is how it's made. It should be made according to directions—then it is delicious."

GO HOME, COLONEL!

Wholesome Suggestions for the Office-Seeking Third-Term Ex-President.

Here's your hat, Colonel.

The South isn't in your "ring."

It's high time you were hurrying home, says the Atlanta Journal.

On your former visits to our state and section, you have found that considerate welcome to which you were officially entitled. Southerners are by nature a mannerly folk and they have always met you with the graciousness due a President, or a former President of the United States; but, when you twist their hospitable greeting into an omen of political support, you become rather presumptious as a guest, and, certainly very foolish as a politician.

You seem, indeed, to have mistaken the South for an African game trail, where the natives will flock to dance for your sport and gaze spell-bound on your strange trappings. In a guise of sanctity you come to convert what you derisively call the Solid South; but be not deceived, doughty Colonel, for the eyes of this section have pierced your missionary makeup and they see you as the political adventurer you really are.

You may shout "Armageddon" and sing "Onward Christian Soldiers" until the young-eyed cherubs pass with disgust, but you will never find the South a missionary field for a man of your doctrines and your record. The Southern people have longer memories than you imagine.

They have not forgotten your efforts of their humor and good-will in the days when you cared nothing for Southern votes.

They have not forgotten of how you wrote of Jefferson Davis—whose memory is revered in this section at least—as a traitor and a criminal.

Who that is Southern born could ever forget your vicious slander of Robert E. Lee, the knightliest spirit of America's epic war?

You have trampled brutally on the annals and ideals of the South's Confederacy, and yet you come among the son's of the men who died for that cause and try to flatter them into following your selfish adventure.

This is a New South, but it is the child of the Old; and while its sympathies today are as broad as the Union, its heart is none the less warm or reverent to the memory of its sires. It nurses no rancor or sectionalism. Had you fought against the fathers, Colonel Roosevelt, as did thousands of brave men, that could never been held against you; but, when in the time of peaceful returning friendship you went out of your way to slander them, you then barred forever yourself from our political consideration.

GO HOME, COLONEL ROOSEVELT. Go home and regale yourself on those pages in which you belittled and falsified the lives of the Southern leaders.

If you imply that the pharisaic people have formally accepted you as a penitent, you are grossly deceived. You have straddled this issue in both the North and the South, fraternizing with the negro there and execrating him here.

Do you think we are so stupid as not to see through this two-faced and impudent game?

Did you not bid might-and-main for the support of the negro delegates at Chicago?

Would you ever have pretended this sudden change of heart, had you succeeded in capturing the machinery of that party as you violently strove to do?

Why was it, Colonel, that you never awoke to the corrupting influence of the colored delegates from the South until you found that they would no longer serve but would embarass your political schemes?

The whole country knows that no Republican ever went further or stooped lower than you for the same negro delegates when you needed them to run your particular machine.

Certainly, the Southern people know that never since the days of Reconstruction was there a Republican president who antagonized their sentiment in this regard so flagrantly as you.

You doggedly retained the negro Crum as collector of the port at Charleston over the protests and apoeals of the white citizenship of that community.

In utter disregard of not only the feelings of the South, but also the decencies of your office, you dined Booker Washington at the White House, receiving him in the most intimate terms of social as well as political equality.

You closed the postoffice at Indianola, Miss., and told the people that if they would not accept your negro postmaster they should be deprived of the mail service.

And, only a few months ago, did you not stand before a gathering of national note and, with your arms around two negro politicians from the north, proclaimed them "the equal of every white man within the sound of your voice."

GO HOME, COLONEL, GO HOME and apologize as best you can to the colored brethren whom you consider "equals" in the North; but, as for the South, what you have done speaks so loudly that we cannot hear what you say.

Republican politics have never been popular in this section, but, if it came to a choice between yours and Mr. Taft's we should infinitely prefer the latter; for he has shown himself at least sincere and has proved himself an honorable partisan in appointing federal office-holders; he has been most considerate of our people's interest, while you, Colonel, were seemingly bent upon Africanizing the South Atlantic coast.

The truth is that in all essential matters of government your policies and the South's convictions, your purposes and the South's interests are radically opposed.

You stand for a perpetuation of the high protective tariff.

We believe with Woodrow Wilson that there should be tariff revision, steadily and unhesitatingly downward."

You are urging, as you have always done, a centralization of federal power at the sacrifice of the state's rights.

We believe in preserving the integrity of the States in order that this republic may endure and its people be free.

You stand for a government by rulers in place of laws and you consider yourself the "indispensable" man.

The South believes in constitutional government and its Democratic blood rebels at the idea of the dictatorship you would establish.

We might condone, though never accept, your reactionary views on the tariff, as due to your intimacy with the trusts and your dependence on Special Interests for campaign contributions. We might palliate your greed for federal power and your treason to the third-term precedent as the outbreaks of a fiery ambition but the South cannot overlook the Pecksniffan hyprocisy with which you are now seeking to cozen its votes. We judge you by what you have done rather than by what you profess.

Your promises, as your record proves, are but weathercocks that shift with every wind of expediency.

Just as you clamor for the HOWL! HOWL!! HOWL!!!

WHO HOWLS BUT THOSE WHO ARE HIT? HOWL, HOWL, HOWL.

Two articles appearing in last week's Union Banner are ludicrous in the extreme; in fact, they are farcical. One is a leading editorial, at least we take it to be such, though it appears on the front page, for it is unsigned, and the other has a little "M" attached as if the writer was ashamed of his effusion and wanted to hide behind all the progressive "Ms" in the county. Neither amounts to much except as illustrating to what extremes some people, when driven to desperation, will go in a wild delirium to save themselves. There is a funny side to it, too, for it shows what a consumate dunce one fellow can make of himself when he attempts to argue questions about which he knows absolutely nothing.

The writer of the "M" article must have a head shaped somewhat on the order of a five-cent watermelon if he thinks anyone with grey matter would for a moment take him seriously.

He goes out of the way to drag the fair name of one of Alabama's most noble women into a little county squabble, knowing that his only strong appeal is to the prejudices of the people, and thereby he hopes to arouse antagonism to the article appearing in the PRESS; he knows that he cannot otherwise overcome its truth or its force, and, like he and his clan have always done, they appeal to ignorance, prejudice and superstition.

Why not for once in a life time come out in open, manly discussion and argue a matter upon its merits, leaving the verdict to the thinking people? Why always hide behind some "Foxy" name and sling mud and filth? You catch a few votes in that way perhaps, but you loose much of your own self respect "M," and at the same time you forfeit the respect of every intelligent man in the county. Come out in the open; wash rag, table cloth or somethin'.

Now lets see about your puny little article Mr. "M." Aside from your appeal to prejudice what does it contain? Nothing whatever; absolutely worse than rot! We are surprised that you hide yourself behind some feigned or assumed name.

Your first clause, Mr. "M," brings you as one who would refuse to the negro his right to vote, while he is taxed without representation—has been for years; his poor wife has always been taxed without representation, if you call the ballot representation; if you call sitting upon juries representation.

Yes, the "fathers fought for representation," but it was a representation of intelligence they fought and for which they fought. Not negro representation, Mr. Shame on you Mr. "M." for even comparing the efforts of the white women of Alabama to accomplish suffrage with the nauseating seeking contention of the negro and his wife to be found promiscuously at the polls when judges and representatives are to be selected. Shame upon you for such an attempt.

Now, on the same day our article appeared stating Roosevelt's announced plank, and his oft-repeated assertion that he would give to the negro man and the negro woman a right to vote, appeared in the Age-Herald an article from one of Alabama's foremost women urging woman suffrage.

We admit that Mr. "M.," we give you for one fraction of a second think that this good woman by seeking woman suffrage under the Roosevelt platform?

If you have enough brains to rattle in a mustard seed Mr. "M.," you ought to know that she, and all other Alabama women, seeking the right to vote at all, are seeking it under the ALABAMA law as it now exists, excluding the negro MAN as well as the negro WOMAN.

Not for one moment would she or any other Alabama lady wish to exercise the right to vote, if by doing so she would again put upon us the horde of negroes with whom we contended for 40 years, and they would hold up their hands in holy horror and scorn any right or desire to vote, if by acquiring that right it was also conferred upon the cook, wash-woman or the nurse. You know this, Mr. "M.," as well as anyone, yet, in order to appeal to prejudice you bring out such instances and hold them up as guides.

That lady, and all other Alabama ladies who wish to vote, wish it in order that they may elevate the electorate, not degrade it, as it would be done under Roosevelt's platform—which no doubt you are supporting. Yes, they seek it under the law as it now exists in Alabama, not under the law as it WOULD exist under the progressive platform.

That platform plank would confer upon the washer-woman the same right it would give the wife, it would say to the "nurse lady" that she should have the right to kill the vote of the grown daughter; it would place the cook woman upon the same level with the sweetheart. You know Mr. "M," and yet you are supporting that platform! Come out in the open Mr. "M.," come out!

The picture in the News was far reaching in its effect; it should be even more far reaching Mr. "M." You recommend it to the PRESS—let us return the compliment and suggest that you also take another look at it. It has a lesson for every one—you not excepted.

No! you say, Mr. Roosevelt is not attempting to degrade our women but simply to give them that to which they are entitled". Well! well, well! So you admit that he is seeking to confer upon WOMEN the right to vote? Yes, you admit it in your weakling way and you also admit the word WOMEN included NEGRO women; the class for whom Mr. Roosevelt is striving Remember back, Mr. "M;" don't you recall when the WHITE republicans of Alabama undertook to organize a lily white party, Mr. Roosevelt stepped in and overturned your plans? You remember that don't you Mr. "M?" You also remember Mr. "M" when he insulted every white man in the South by inviting Booker Washington to his table at the White House, and when he appointed that negro Crum to public office in Charleston and when he forced the white people of Mississippi to accept a negro postmaster or have the office closed? You remember all that don't you Mr. "M?" Well, that's just what Mr. Roosevelt is "attempting" to do now Mr. "M." You've got to admit it Mr. "M" because he says so himself and his party platform says so Mr. "M" and as you are supporting that platform and Mr. Roosevelt Mr. "M" you, too, must be for giving votes to negro women Mr. "M" The fact is you so state when you say that Mr. Roosevelt is attempting to give them "that to which they are entitled;" and you strengthen it when you cry, "no taxation without representation," Mr. "M."

Now wouldn't that be a beautiful scene? Wouldn't it Mr. "M."

Here goes up to the polls, under the law which Mr. Roosevelt says he will enact, a bedraggled dressed lady of negroid development and splendid intellect; she wishes to vote for decency, sobriety and virtue; just behind her, and elbowing her way through the column of ladies assembled at the polls, comes along a gang of negro men and negro women, crying aloud for "representation," for a right to vote AGAINST decency, sobriety and virtue!

But why argue this question? You have admitted its truthfulness and its strength.

But, see how artful Mr. "M" is! Like his man Roosevelt, the moment he sees himself in a corner he tries to distract attention from his own awful plight by calling attention to someone else.

He says he believes in Woman's suffrage, but it is not a vital question! Yet he, with great gusto, quotes a charming Birmingham lady in the first part of his article to show that it is vital, very vital.

How "M" squirms and flinches!

Yes, Mr. "M" it is a most vital question to us of the South. If Roosevelt should under any chain of circumstances re-enter the White House, it would be the most important question of the age; tariff, canals, regulation of trusts and all would pale into insignificance as compared with the determination of Roosevelt to give the negro woman a right to vote. You know Mr. "M" it is a very vital question—an all important question; so important in fact that we wish to keep it permanently before the white men of this county to the end that they may keep the negro man and the negro woman from exercising the right of suffrage. Yes it is very important Mr. "M;" more important to the virtue loving white women of the South than any question they have been called upon to face since the days of the civil strife, for which they freely gave their fathers, husbands sons and sweethearts. Its awfully important Mr. "M" to everyone except those who want to see the negro enfranchised and made the political equal of the white man, who wish to see the ballot given to the negro woman to make her the political mistress of our fair women of the South.

Now you conclude by saying the PRESS is attempting to avoid prominent, vital issues in this campaign. Come out in the open again Mr. "M;" don't dodge like a hit mule. Stick to your argument.

"Why don't the PRESS take up the defenseless extravagance of the democratic administration," you ask?

Well, first because there has been no defenseless extravagance; that's one reason, and second, because if there has been extravagance, it has not been what you term democratic extravagance.

Bore a hole in your head Mr. "M" so the light can reach your brain. (The best place to bore would be where your Bull Moose horns are due to come out; that might save you a case of hollow horn).

Time and time again, this paper has called attention to the fact that the moneys of this county, and all other counties in the state, are administered by the Court of County Commissioners. Under the law, the County Treasurer is forbidden to pay out money except upon the order of this Court. Mr. "M" knows that; he has "legal learning" enough to know that, yet he would attempt to deceive the people into believing that the PROBATE JUDGE has the disbursement of the funds of the county. He can not spend one cent of the county money and Mr. "M" knows it; he does not even have a vote as to how, when or where it shall be spent and Mr. "M" knows that. The Court of County Commissioners is composed of [illegible] gentlemen, [illegible] and confidence of every voter in this county; the voters of this county have shown this by electing them to office. They are high toned, honorable gentlemen, every one of them.

No man would have the temerity or the audacity to say that one of them would take a bribe, filch a cent or vote for the expenditure of the county money for an unworthy cause. They have been placed in positions of honor and they have acted well. Three of them are RERUBLICANS, perhaps now PROGRESSIVES, but elected by REPUBLICAN votes. Not one of them is a subscriber to the PRESS, yet the PRESS has never said ought against any of them and would not for the sake of winning every office in Chilton county charge any one of them with a dishonorable act.

Mr. "M" however, goes out of his way to charge them with extravagance, for he knows that if there has been extravagance it was committed by the Court of County Commissioners—three of whom were elected by his party. But the PRESS does not believe that the Commissioners have been guilty of extravagance; they are too careful in the administration of the affairs of the county to be charged by Mr. "M" or any one else with that. They are careful, painstaking gentlemen who would not be guilty of such charges as are brought by Mr. "M."

But, for the moment let us suppose that there has been extravagance, what of it?

Can Mr. "M" justly or truthfully charge it to the Sheriff of the county? He has nothing to do with the expending of county funds. It would be the height of folly—even too foolish for Mr. "M"—to say that he is chargeable with extravagance.

Can it by any possibility be charged to the State Senator?

He has nothing whatever to do with county affairs more than any other individual; to say that he was guilty of extravagance in the handling of county funds would be as foolish as to say that the present constable or coroner is guilty of misappropriation of funds belonging to the Greek government.

Can it be charged to ONE lone democratic county Commissioner? Surely not! He has but one vote in the administration of affairs—there are three others of opposite political faith who have three votes. If any extravagance has been committed by him it was with the aid and consent of at least two other Commissioners—who are republicans or progressives—for without two more votes, making a majority of the Commissioners—no money could have been appropriated and no extravagance committed.

Can it be charged to the Probate Judge? Mr. "M" knows much better than to say it. He knows the Probate Judge has no vote whatever in the appropriation of money; he knows that he MUST, whether willing or unwilling, do the bidding of the Commissioners Court.

Mr. "M," you have convicted yourself on both counts; you know you are guilty and yet you are unwilling to come out and admit it.

The State Examiner was here a few weeks ago; he failed to find any extravagance chargeable to any one of the democratic officers or to any one of the republican-progressive officers.

Finally the Treasurer, under the law, has the right to refuse payment of any warrant which he knows is illegally or fraudulently drawn or issued.

ELECTION OFFICERS.

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men.

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

"Oh, I see; a family arrangement. Well, Grant, this is all very interesting, but I am unable to conceive what I have to do with it. I met Mistress Mortimer by accident, and then was fortunate enough to dance with her once. 'Tis scarcely likely we shall ever meet again. The daughter of a colonel of Queen's Rangers is not apt to come again into contact with an officer of the Maryland Line. I don't know why you should single me out in this matter. I don't even know the lady's brother."

"Her brother?"

"Yes, the family renegade; the twin brother on Lee's staff."

I could not perceive the expression of the man's face, but he was a long while answering.

"Oh, yes. She told you about him?"

"It was mentioned. Would I know the boy from any resemblance to his sister?"

"Y—yes, at least I should suppose so. You must have become very intimate for her to have told you that. You see it—it is a family secret."

"Nothing for Tories to boast over, I should imagine. However, it came up naturally enough while we spoke of the sufferings of the American army during the winter. It is a sad thing the way this war has divided families. Has Mistress Claire any Colonial sentiments?"

"How the devil do I know! She would not be likely to air them before me. I don't know what fool trick you played on her last night, but she's on the right side just the same."

"I think so, too."

His manner was so disagreeable that I instantly determined to have an end. I had more important work before me than quarreling with this fellow, and, somehow, his claimed intimacy with Mistress Mortimer grated upon me strangely.

"If that is all you requested an interview for, Captain Grant," I said coldly, "I'll trouble you to return to your men."

Irritated that I had even condescended to question him, I turned back up the road to where the men were yet busy about the wagons, spoke a few words to Duval, he explaining to me the best route toward the river crossing at Burlington, and then swung into the saddle and sent the black forward to the crest of the ridge.

I permitted the animal to go his own gait, and for a mile or more he kept up a hot gallop, finally tiring to a trot. So far as I could judge from the few stars visible we were traveling almost due north. However, I was certainly getting farther away from the British lines, and could swing to the left at daylight. It made little difference where I struck the Delaware; every mile north added to my safety.

My horse had fallen into a long, swinging lope, bearing us forward rapidly. The moon had disappeared, but the sky was glittering with stars, and I could distinguish the main features of the country traversed. I was on the summit of a slight ridge, but the road swerved to the right, leading down into a broad valley. There were no signs of habitations, until we rounded the edge of a small grove, and came suddenly upon a little village of a dozen houses on either side the highway. These were wrapped in darkness, apparently deserted, shapeless appearing structures, although I thought one had the appearance of a tavern, and another seemed a store. There was a well in front of this last, and water sparkled in a log trough beside it. My horse stopped, burying his nostrils in the water, and, seizing made aware of my own thirst, I swung down from the saddle. My hands were upon the well sweep, when, without warning, I was gripped from behind, and dragged backward into the road. I made desperate efforts to break away, but two men held me, one with knee pressed into my chest, the other uplifting the butt of a pistol over my head. There was not a word spoken, but I could see they were in uniform, although the fellow kneeling on me had the features and long hair of an Indian. My horse started to bolt, but his rein was gripped, and then a third figure, mounted, rode into the range of my vision.

"Search him for weapons, Tonepah," said a boyish voice briefly. "There are pistols in the saddle holsters, but he may have others. Then tie him up as quick as you can."

There was no mistaking my captors—the young dragoon lieutenant, and the three who had escaped with him. But why had they ridden in this direction? What object could they have in thus attacking me? They afforded me little opportunity for solving these problems. Had I been a bale of tobacco I could not have been treated with less ceremony, the white man unclasping my belt, while the Indian, with a grunt, flung me over on my face, and began binding hands and feet. I kicked him once, sending him tumbling backward, but he only came back silently, with more cruel twist of the rope, while the boy laughed, bending over his horse's neck.

"Hoist him up on the black, lads," he said shortly, reining back out of the way. "Delavan's horse, isn't it? Yes, tie his feet underneath, and one of you keep a hand on the reins. Peter, you and Cass ride with him. I want Tonepah with me. All ready? We'll take the east road."

Some one struck the horse, and he plunged forward, swerving sharply to the right in response to the strong hand on his bit. I swayed in the saddle, but the bonds held, and we went loping forward into the night.

CHAPTER XI.

Introducing Peter.

It was a new country to me that we traversed, a rolling country, but not thickly settled, although the road appeared to be a well-beaten track. The gloom, coupled with the rapidity of our movements, prevented me from seeing anything other than those dim objects close at hand, yet we were evidently traveling almost straight east. I endeavored to enter into conversation with the two fellows riding on either side of me, but neither one so much as turned his head in response to my voice, and I soon tired of the attempt. The night told me little of who they might be, although they were both in the uniform of the Queen's Rangers, the one called Peter on my right a round, squat figure, and bald-headed, his bare scalp shining oddly when once he removed his cocked hat; the other was an older man, with gray chin beard, and glittering display of teeth.

The movements of my horse caused the ropes to lacerate my wrists and ankles, the pain increasing so that once or twice I cried out. The fellows guarding me did not even turn their heads, but the lieutenant drew up his horse so as to block us.

"What is the trouble? Are you hurt?"

"These ropes are tearing into the flesh," I groaned. "I'd be just as safe if they were loosened a bit."

I saw him lean forward, shading his face with one hand, as he stared toward me through the darkness. I thought he drew a quick breath as from surprise, and there was a moment's hesitancy.

"Let out the ropes a trifle, Peter," came the final order.

The little bald-headed man went at it without a word, the lieutenant reining back his horse slightly, and drawing his hat lower over his eyes. In the silence one of the horses neighed, and the boy seemed to straighten in his saddle, glancing suspiciously about.

"Ride ahead slowly, Tonepah," he ordered. "I'll catch up with you." He turned back toward me. "Who are you, anyway?"

Surprised at the unexpected question, my first thought was to conceal my identity. These were King's men, and I was in ordinary clothes—the rough homespun furnished by Farrell. If, by any chance, I was not the party they had expected to waylay, I might be released without search.

"Who am I?" I answered. "Do you mean you have done all this without knowing whom you hold prisoner?"

"It seems so," coolly. "But now I straightened up bareheaded, the faint star-gleam on my face. The lieutenant remained quiet, but Peter broke his sphinx-like silence.

"'T ain't him, is it?"

"No; he must have taken the other road after all," with a slight laugh. "We've been on a wild-goose chase. However, it's too late now to catch the fellow on this trip."

Peter rubbed his bald pate, his eyes on me.

"An' what'll we do with this lad?" he answered drawlingly. "Turn him loose?"

"Bring him along. We'll find out tomorrow who he is, and what his business may be. Men are not riding these roads at midnight without some purpose."

He wheeled his horse, and, with a touch of the spur, disappeared in the darkness ahead. Peter clambered back into the saddle, and gripped my rein.

"Come on," he said disgustedly, kicking the black in the side. "It's a ways yet afore yer lie down."

We rode steadily, and at a good pace. Occasionally the older man swore solemnly, but Peter never uttered a sound, not even turning his head at my attempts to draw him into conversation. The situation mystified me, but it became more and more evident that I should have to wait until morning before learning the truth. Neither Peter nor the Indian seemed to belong to the class with which the army was recruited. Peter appeared more like a well-trained servant, and his riding was atrocious. And the lieutenant! There came back to me the haunting memory that he had joined Delavan as a volunteer—the Dragoon uniform sufficient proof that he was neither of the original foraging party of Hessians, nor of Grant's detachment of Rangers. Yet these others wore green and white, and must, therefore, have been in Grant's command. How did the four manage to escape from our attack, evidently animated by one purpose? Why was Grant so anxious to learn if I had seen the lieutenant, and whether we had a party out seeking him? Not one of these questions could I answer; not one could I even guess at with any degree of satisfaction.

We were coming out of the low, swamp lands into a more thickly settled, and cultivated region. Rail and stone fences could be seen on either side the road, and we passed swiftly by a number of farmhouses, some simple log structures, although one or two were more pretentious.

It may have been two miles further along, when the lieutenant, and his Indian companion, wheeled suddenly to the right, and, without slackening speed, rode through an open gate, and up a graveled roadway, circling through a grove of trees to the front door of a great square mansion. It was dark and silent, a wide porch in front supported by huge pillars, a broad flight of steps leading from the driveway. The Indian ran up these, leaving the lieutenant holding his horse, while we drew up some yards to the rear. I heard the boom of the iron knocker, followed by a gleam of light through a lower window. Then a negro's voice spoke, and the front door opened, disclosing two figures, one with sputtering candle in hand. The two exchanged a dozen words before the lieutenant asked impatiently:

"Is it all right Tonepah?"

The taciturn Indian made no attempt at speech, but gave an expressive gesture, and the young officer turned in his saddle.

"Take the prisoner to the lower room, Peter," he ordered curtly. "I'll decide tomorrow if he can be of any use to us."

The two fellows loosened the rope about my ankles, and Peter waddling ahead, the graybeard gripping my arm, we climbed the steps, and entered the hall. A tall, slim negro, evidently a house-servant from his sleek appearance, eyeing me curiously, handed the little fellow a second lighted candle, and the three of us went tramping along the wide hall, past the circling stairs, until we came to a door at the rear. This the black hugs open, without a word, and I was led down into the basement. The flickering candle yielded but glimpses of great rooms, beautifully decorated, and, almost before I realized what was occurring, [illegible]

Steamboat Memories.

London Opinion, commenting on the recent celebration of the centenary of the steamboat, remarks that it is interesting to note that the British admiralty of that period rejected the invention with the declaration that "a paddle wheel steamboat could be of no use in navigation," and that a Dr. Lardner, a pundit of that day, who proved "that no steam vessel could ever cross the Atlantic, lived long enough to bolt to America in a steamer along with another man's wife!"

A DOCTOR'S TRIALS.
He Sometimes Gets Sick Like Other People.

Even doing good to people is hard work if you have too much of it to do.

An overworked Ohio doctor tells his experience:

"About three years ago as the result of doing two men's work, attending a large practice and looking after the details of another business, my health broke down completely, and I was little better than a physical wreck.

"I suffered from indigestion and constipation, loss of weight and appetite, bloating and pain after meals, loss of memory and lack of nerve force for continued mental application.

"I became irritable, easily angered and despondent without cause. The heart's action became irregular and weak, with frequent attacks of palpitation during the first hour or two after retiring.

"Some Grape-Nuts and cut bananas came for my lunch one day and pleased me particularly with the result. I got more satisfaction from this than from anything I had eaten for months, and on further investigation and use, adopted Grape-Nuts for my morning and evening meals, serving usually with cream and a sprinkle of salt or sugar.

"My improvement was rapid and permanent, in weight as well as in physical and mental endurance. In a word, I am filled with the joy of living again, and continue the daily use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast and often for the evening meal.

PUBLISHERS HOLD MEETING

Cost Problem Was Main Topic of Discussion at Convention in Montgomery.

Montgomery.—Co-operation among printers and publishers of Alabama was the chief topic discussed at the first annual convention of those engaged in these pursuits in this state, which was held in Montgomery, October 22 and 23. The convention was in the nature of a "cost conference," and the problems facing the newspapers and printing houses was studied. The call for the convention was signed by fifteen persons who are identified with the printing and publishing business in Alabama and nearly all of these were present and a goodly number of those invited to participate in the meeting were here.

The call stated that present selling prices are based on a scale of a decade ago, while the costs in all departments have materially increased. A plan for ascertaining present costs and regulating an equitable selling price, was formulated at the convention. The call for the convention was signed by the following persons: Robert W. Ewing, temporary chairman, Birmingham; L. H. Nunnellee, Centreville; H. C. Crenshaw, Montgomery; R. L. Brown, Oneonta; John C. Henley, Jr., Birmingham; Oliver Rutherford, Eutaw; W. DR. CALDWELL'S GUIDE TO GOOD HEALTH

The natural tendency of people in this busy age to demand of the digestive organs more than nature intended they should perform, frequently results in throwing the entire digestive system into disorder. When the stomach fails to freely digest and distribute that which is eaten, the bowels become clogged with a mass of waste and refuse which ferments and generates poisonous gases that are gradually forced into the blood, causing distress and often serious illness.

Dr. W. B. Caldwell says that if the bowels are kept regular there will be much less sickness, and prescribes a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is most effective in relieving any congestion of matter in the bowels. This compound can be bought in any drug store under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and costs only 50 cents a bottle. It is mild in its action, pleasant to the taste and positive in effect, a dose at night bringing relief next morning, naturally and without griping or other discomfort. A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in the house will save many times its cost in doctor bills. Your name and address on a postal to Dr. W. B. ITCHING, BURNING ECZEMA

317 S. Wolfe St., Baltimore, Md.—"My trouble was caused by a severe sprained ankle; the bruised blood not having been drawn off caused a skin affection which the doctors pronounced eczema. It first started with an itching and burning, with very dry skin. Constant scratching, especially during the night finally broke the skin, and during the day the watery fluid that came from it would dry and peel off like fish scales. My stocking would stick to my ankle as if it were glued. I also had it on my fingers.

"I was treated without getting any benefit. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment as directed and then applied the Cuticura Ointment and bound the ankle with a soft bandage, after bathing it with Cuticura Soap. They cured me in about two months." (Signed) T. W. Henderson, Dec. 2, '11.

Class List of Pies.

The gentleman with a concave front and a large watch chain alighted from the train at a junction in a western state, and rapidly made his way to the dining-room of the only hotel in the place.

"What kind of pies have you here?" he asked eagerly of the kittenish old lady who stood at his elbow.

"All four kinds," she replied, with an air of disdain.

"What are they?"

"Open-faced, cross-bar, kivered up, and the kind mother used to make," was the catalogue which she gave.—Popular Magazine.

"Didn't take the poem, did he?"

"No. Read three lines of it, handed it back to me and said: 'Friend, here's $2. You need it worse than I do.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

POLLY VICTIM OF DECEPTION

Bird Realized Period Between Its Temporary Oblivions Had Been Materially Cut Short.

The Goodleys have a sailor son, who on one occasion brought home a parrot for the amusement and enlightenment of the family. They kept it for the sake of the donor—on no other account would it have been given house room. Of course, it was a perfectly respectable bird—occasionally; but on Sunday evenings, when young Mr. Saintly paid his regular visit, it was deemed advisable to cover Polly with a cloth.

Recently, however, Mr. S. took advantage of a half-holiday accruing to him, and made an extra call on the Wednesday. As he was ushered in Miss Mary Goodley dexterously threw the cloth over Polly's cage. Greetings over, there ensued the usual awkward pause, which was broken by a squawk from the covered cage.

"Well, I'll be everlastingly blessed," said Polly. "This has been a thundering short week!"

Open Air Schools Grow in Favor.

With the opening of the fall school term, over 200 open air schools and fresh air classes for tuberculosis, and anaemic children, and also for all children in certain rooms and grades, will be in operation in various parts of the United States, according to the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. All of these school have been established since January, 1907, when the first institution of this character was opened in Providence, R. I. On January 1st, 1910, there were only 13 open air schools in this country and a year later the number had increased only to 29. Thus, the real growth in this movement has been within the last two years. Massachusetts now leads the states with 28 fresh air schools and classes for tuberculosis, anaemic and other school children, Boston alone having over 80. New York comes next with 29, and Ohio is third with 21. Open air schools have now been established in nearly 50 cities and 19 different states.

An old Englishwoman, who was extremely stout, was making vain efforts to enter the rear door of an omnibus. The driver leaned over good-naturedly, and cried:

"Why, bless ye, James, I ain't got no sideways!"—Youth's Companion.

The Farmer's Search.

While plowing, a Crawford county farmer near Helper had the mistortune to lose a small part from his cultivator in the plowed ground. Soon a neighbor came by. "Lost something?" he asked. Soon another came by and asked the same question. And then another. Pretty soon a man he didn't like anyhow approached. "Lost something?" he asked. The farmer looked up in supreme disgust. Little Eloise Cave, aged seven years, was visiting her grandmother in Madison, Va., and was sent to carry a saucer of ice cream to a neighbor. The lady, however, was less careful than Eloise had been, and dropped the saucer and broke it.

"You needn't mind about that," said the little diplomat, without an instant's hesitation. "I don't think grandma has a cup to match the saucer. If she has I will go right home and break it myself."—Popular Magazine.

The Fair Association has started a large bunch of men at work on the grounds getting things in shape for the Fair next week, and all indications are that the Fair will be better attended this year than ever before. The attractions and exhibits are also expected to surpass any heretofore seen in the county.

Season tickets are on sale this week at all three of the drug stores. They are only one dollar, so get one so that you can go in and out as many times as you like.

A telegram from Mr. Juvenal of the Stadium Shows announces that they will reach Clanton on next Monday in order to have their large number of shows up and ready to open promptly with the Fair on Tuesday morning. These are the largest and best shows that ever visited Clanton, and they are expected to be well attended.

Let every one have their exhibits on hand Monday so that they may be put in readiness for the opening Tuesday morning. If any one desires to begin on the general exhibit this week they may do so and will find plenty of help on the grounds.

The same premiums will be paid on all chickens that was paid last year whether your kind of chickens are in the catalogue or not, so bring them.

Monday will be general opening and parade day. Tuesday will be Jemison-Thorsby day, Wednesday will be Mountain Creek, Verbena and Cooper day, Thursday will be School and Children's day, also the Baby Show will be on this day. Friday will be Maplesville, Stanton, Riderville day. Saturday will be Everybody's Day. There is no special day set for the farmers as the Fair belongs to them and every day is for them.

"BEARLAX" LIQUID LAXATIVE FAR BETTER THAN CALOMEL

You have taken calomel, and the recollection is not pleasant. You have heard of hundreds of others who have taken it with painful and disastrous results.
This is absolutely unnecessary. "Bearlax," liquid laxative, contains no calomel, but is vastly better than calomel in every way. Bearlax is gentle yet sure, unfailingly "persuades" the liver to do its work, acts strongly but easily upon the bowels, does not make you sick and does not gripe. It is actually pleasant to the taste. In fact, Bearlax has no bad effects of any kind, but only the pleasantest and most effective action upon the liver, stomach and bowels that you could wish for.
Bearlax is without an equal for constipation and liver troubles, whether temporary or chronic. It is fully guaranteed. Buy one bottle of Bearlax, give it a fair trial, and if you are not fully satisfied that it is the best liver medicine and laxative that you have ever used, your dealer will promptly and willingly return your money.
Buy a bottle of it to-day and rid yourself of all liver and bowel irregularities at once. Price, 50 cents, everywhere.

When a doctor endorses a preparation it means more than an ordinary testimonial. His opinion is always that of the professional man devoted to the welfare of the people.
Rev. J. J. Boyd, Covington, Tenn. says: "I feel it my duty to write this for the benefit of those suffering from dandruff. In the average case a few applications of Newbro's Herpicide will remove all dandruff. It is advisable to continue its use for several weeks."
The words of J. B. Thompson, M. D., No. 2 Burrough Place, Cor. Hollis St., Boston, Mass., are not less emphatic: "I can only speak in praise of Newbro's Herpicide. It is all that is claimed, and performs much. Herpicide not only removes the scale but invigorates the hair, gives it life and makes it soft."
Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy to kill the dandruff germ and stop falling hair. Any druggist selling what some will attempt to substitute cannot supply the genuine Herpicide unless you order plainly.
We positively guarantee the use of Herpicide as directed to stop itching scalp humors, falling hair and dandruff, or we will refund the money paid us for it.

Sec. 4. The officers of such general election shall open a poll for the vote of the qualified electors upon the proposed amendment. The election shall be held in all things in accordance with the law governing general elections. In the election upon such proposed amendment the votes cast thereat shall be canvassed, tabulated and the returns thereof be made to the Secretary of State and counted in the same manner as in elections for representatives in the Legislature, and if it shall thereupon appear that a majority of the qualified electors who voted upon the proposed amendment voted in favor of the same, such amendment shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution of Alabama. The result of such election shall be made known by the proclamation of the Governor.

A KITCHEN COMFORT

The oven of Cole's Hot Blast Range will bake six loaves of light bread with less fuel than any range made. On account of the one-piece Colelzed Steel Fire Back and the Hot Blast Combustion you can bake a batch of light bread, using the fuel remaining after a heavy meal or other work has been finished. Light bread should be allowed to bake from 45 to 60 minutes. The heat retained in the heavy oven material, the hot blast combustion and the perfect control of the fire make it possible for you to bake in Cole's Hot Blast Range without the trouble of building an extra fire and overheating your kitchen. The oven can be heated quickly when required for biscuits and other baking which require a quick oven. Investigate this new improved range. Remember these improvements are not embodied in any other range at any price. (B-65)

The Record Shows the Facts

Milton H. Smith Answers B. B. Comer

Ex-Gov. Comer, in an address at Greenville, Ala., on August 30th, commented with evident satisfaction upon the rebuke administered to Milton H. Smith, President of the Louisville & Nashville and South & North Alabama Railroads, who, at a hearing before the Railroad Commission at which he presided, he asserts was offensively dictatorial.

The hearings by the Commission of which he was President were convened on complaint of a shipper of fertilizer, and lasted three days in the month of April and three days in the month of May, 1905. Fortunately, the proceedings were transcribed by the official stenographer of the Commission, and were printed and bound, making a book of over seven hundred pages. A perusal of that book will show that instead of performing the duties of presiding officer—judge to adjust the merits of a controversy between citizens of Alabama, he [illegible] one of the parties to the contention continually, was presiding officer, attorney for one side, witness for one side, in fact conducted himself in such a manner as would have resulted in his incarceration had he so conducted himself in any organized court of justice. During the entire six days he had before him representatives of all of the railways in Alabama, and a perusal of the printed proceedings will show that throughout the entire six days he was treated with respect, and that all who testified patiently endeavored to elucidate the matters under consideration, patiently tried to correct the innumerable erroneous statements made by him. They did this from respect to his position as a representative of the Commonwealth of Alabama. At the same time all present, including the two Associate Commissioners, were humiliated—made ashamed—that the State was disgraced by the performance of one with a mind[illegible]

CENTENNIAL COMMITEE

ABOUT 75 WERE PRESENT

Various Cities in the State Present Their Claims For the Big Show.

Montgomery.—About seventy-five members of the Centennial Exposition committee gathered here October 23 to discuss plans for holding the big show.

Men prominent in affairs of state were here and ably presented the claims of their several cities.

The committee meeting was held in the Exchange Hotel and here it was, the delegates gathered together for that purpose, discussed the proposed exposition from every conceivable point of view.

The program as previously announced was as follows:

11. Adjournment.

CLERKS DISMISSED.

Governor Issues Order in Connection With His Retrenchment Policy.

Montgomery. — Governor O'Neal's scheme for retrenchment involves a saving in salaries of state employes as was shown best when an order went out from his office to six departments of the state government cutting off the additional clerks who were authorized by him some time ago.

The departments affected by the order are state tax commission, department of archives and history, department of education, court of appeals, department of prison inspection and the banking department.

"On account of the depleted condition of the treasury," the governor writes, "I am compelled to use every possible economy. You are therefore notified that the order heretofore issued by me authorizing an additional clerk in your department is revoked. Such revocation takes effect

Discrepancies in Lauderdale Books.

Montgomery.—Illegal expenditure of money is charged to various officials of Lauderdale county by Frank V. Evans, state examiner of public accounts, who filed with Governor O'Neal and with Judge C. P. Almon, of the Eleventh circuit, reports on examination of books and accounts to the Lauderdale officials.

County Treasurer H. C. Davis is charged $6,044.25 of which $1,504.42 is a sum said to be unlawfully authorized.

Several discrepancies in the mortgage and license tax funds were found in the treasurer's books, according to the examiner. They were settled when attention was called to them.

A number of technical charges against various officials are noted in the report, most of them being due according to the examiner to illegal warrants drawn by the commissioners. Some accounts were pronounced illegal as holds because they were not drawn in the law provides.

HAS NUMEROUS PLANS.

O'Neal Would Bring in State $100,000 Additional by Leasing Prisoners at Speigners and State Farm.

Montgomery.—Governor O'Neal has numerous plans by which he hopes to save money for the state and to build up the depleted treasury. Not the least in importance of his plans is his scheme with reference to the state convicts. In brief, Governor O'Neal is planning to increase the state's revenues at least $100,000 annually by leasing out the convicts at Speigner's and at the state farm No. 4.

There are in the neighborhood of 200 convicts working for the state at Speigner's and about 100 convicts working on the state farm near Montgomery, which is known as No. 4.

It is estimated that by leasing out these convicts, they will bring into the state treasury at least $100,000 per annum additional to the sum which the state is already receiving from the operation of its convict labor contracts.

Roughly estimated the state convicts make in the neighborhood of $40 per month each, and with between 275 and 300 additional convicts leased out, the increase in revenue per year will amount to $100,000 or more.

ENTER THE LAND SHOW.

Four Alabama Cities Will Have Exhibit at Chicago.

Montgomery.—Montgomery, Birmingham, Mobile and Dothan will be the only Alabama cities represented at the Chicago Land Show in November, according to M. A. Bergfeld, agent of the show, who was in Montgomery.

The land show is a culmination of the "back to the land" movement, and is held to enlighten the people living in the congested districts of Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan and Indiana to the possibilities of the lands in different parts of America. Every State in the Union and nearly every province in Canada will have exhibits at the show, according to the agent.

The State Department of Immigration will have a display at Chicago in addition to the exhibits of the four cities mentioned.

1,600 CASES IN CONECUH.

Tax Commission Will Sit at Evergreen Beginning October 29.

Montgomery.—With 1,600 citations to property owners of Conecuh County, to appear and to show cause why assessments on their holdings should not be increased, the State Tax Commission is preparing for its session at Evergreen, beginning October 29. Conecuh will be the third county of the State to be visited in the campaign for general equalization, which recently has been launched in Jefferson and Montgomery.

The Commission adjourned its Montgomery session until December 3, when continued cases will be taken up. The session in Montgomery has been effective in producing results, the Commissioners believe, and in producing results amicably. Relatively few appeals were taken from the assessments made by the Commission, and most cases were settled by the property owners.

HECTOR LANE WILL RUN.

Legislator From Lawrence Plans to Be Commissioner of Agriculture.

Montgomery.—Hetcor D. Lane, of the State Department of Agriculture, and representative in the State Legislature from Lawrence County, will be a candidate for the office of Commissioner of Agriculture, in 1914, after all. In spite of his contemplated resignation as an attache of the State Department, it is his ambition to return to the office at the Capitol, in January, 1915, as Commissioner.

So he declared, in discussing his resignation as clerk of the department. The resignation will be forthcoming so as to be effective November 15, when he will undertake work in private employment, and in practical farming.

A forecast of his resignation was reported in Birmingham recently, to his regret, he said. He had no intention of making the announcement that he would retire from the work of the department, but now that it had ben made for him; he would suppress the rumor that his plans for a political race in 1914 were off.

To Encourage Pecan Industry.

Montgomery.—A campaign by the state department of agriculture to encourage pecan industry in Alabama was given impetus by the receipt in Montgomery of several cases of remarkable pecans, from orchardists in south and west Alabama. Bulletins will be prepared and other circulars of information probably will be distributed for the instruction of farmers in pecan growing, an industry which always has received indorsement from the state department.

Crop Records Come In.

Montgomery.—Remarkable corn yields, promising to exceed anything produced in Alabama, are being recorded in the state as the growing corn fast daily. The largest yield whose record came to the desk of Morton D. Lane, of the Department of Agriculture, was that of P. C. Smith, of Hanceville, Cullman county, who produced 184 bushels and thirty-four pounds of corn and peas on one acre. The yield [illegible] Montgomery county.

SOMETHING AKIN TO GENIUS

Young Man With Financial Ability So Well Developed Should Make Mark in World.

"Do you think there is any such thing as financial genius?"

"I am sure there is. I know a young man who has it in a marked degree. After he had persuaded a beautiful daughter of one of our most prominent jewelers to become his wife he went around and induced the old man to let him have an engagement ring at the cost price."

"I don't see any indication of remarkable financial genius about that."

"Wait. When he and the girl broke their engagement he took the ring back to her dad and got him to pay eight per cent interest on the money that had been invested."

Liquid Measure.

It was the time of the singing lesson at the local council school, and the teacher was explaining to the young hopefuls that if a "trebie," and "alto," a "tenor" and a "bass" sung together, their united efforts would constitute a quartet.

There seemed no trouble about that, and the teacher thought the class was getting on very nicely.

"Now, Jimmy, leave off pinching your brother's leg and listen to me," said she. "If a bass and tenor sang together, what would you call that?"

Jimmy was the son of the local milkman, and a bright lad withal. His answer was not long in coming.

"Please, miss," said he, "that would be a 'pintette.'"

TELEGRAPH NEWS OF INTEREST

New York.—Activity continued in all lines of steel products last week with further advances in prices, but there was a decrease in the volume of business in pig iron.

The railroads gave the greatest support to the mills, being responsible for orders which will call for 450,000 tons of finished products. The rail contracts alone aggregated 243,000 tons, including 50,000 tons for the Illinois Central, 50,000 tons for the Union Pacific and other Harriman lines, 90,000 tons for the Louisville and Nashville and 25,000 tons for several roads in the southwest. The Pennsylvania is also understood to have distributed additional rail orders for new construction, specifications having been completed for 200,000 tons.

Car orders aggregated more than 14,000, while locomotive shops reported orders for 167 engines, including 40 for the Missouri, Kansas and Texas.

The urgent demand for steel billets resulted in a further advance of from 50 cents to $1 per ton, sales of 15,000 tons being made at $28 to $29 per ton at mills in Cleveland and Buffalo. Other advances in prices included $1 per ton on rivets, bolts and nuts and blue annealed sheets. Black and galvanized sheets were up $2 per ton and manufacturers of wire advanced the extra on galvanized products, 10 cents per hundred pounds.

The principal feature in pig iron was the more active demand for some small lots of spot iron that commanded a premium of 50 cents to $1, per ton. Prices for the first quarter of 1913 were again advanced 25 cents to 50 cents per ton in eastern Pennsylvania and Virginia, but sales were much reduced in volume in all sections.

WILSON RETURNS HOME.

Has Made No Plans For the Immediate Future.

Princeton, N. J.—Gov. Woodrow Wilson returned to his home here, having made his last campaign speech, he said, until Colonel Roosevelt shall have recovered.

The governor said he had made no plans for the immediate future or the remainder of the campaign; that requests for speeches were many, but he was firm in his intention of keeping off the stump while one of his opponents was incapacitated. He probably will express his views on public questions through statements and announcements. The nominee rode home from New York with his family. They had visited friends in the metropolis and attended the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church. On the train a number of people recognized him. The governor will devote most of his time in the next few days between Princeton and the state house in Trenton.

MOVEMENT LARGE.

Prices Hold Generally Firm Despite Many Changes.

New York.—The movement in cotton goods continues large and prices have held generally firm in spite of the change in the cost of cotton this month. There has been a renewed demand for goods for export and sales have been made of standard drills for delivery to India through December. Sales of about 5,000 bales of goods have been made for delivery to China into next year. Miscellaneous export trade is quiet. In the domestic markets it is near the end of the buying season for the jobber and a little too early for him to begin spring operations.

Burglar Enters Residence.

Marion, Ala.—A burglar entered the residence of Mrs. Sprott, in the eastern part of town, at an early hour and secured about $75. When detected by Mrs. Gains, an occupant of the room, he knocked her senseless and made his escape. There was no man in the house and the ladies could not arouse the neighbors so that the robbery was not known for several hours.

The robber entered a window and worked his way to the second story, where the ladies were sleeping, and had scattered clothing and other articles about the room in his search for money when, in opening a drawer in a bureau, he awoke Mrs. Gains, who was visiting Mrs. Sprott. When she screamed he hit her with some heavy instrument and ran out of the house. Her injuries are not serious.

CANAL CONFERENCE.

Atlanta, Ga.—Plans have been perfected for a Panama canal conference to be held here November 26 and 27, and to be participated in by commercial bodies and railroads of the south. The conference will be held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, and is expected to have an important bearing on commercial interests in this section in connection with the opening of the canal traffic.

HARD FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

It's hard enough to keep house if in perfect health, but a woman who is weak, tired and suffering all of the time with an aching back has a heavy burden to carry. Any woman in this condition has good cause to suspect kidney trouble, especially if the kidney action seems disordered at all. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands of women suffering in this way. It is the best-recommended special kidney remedy.

A MARYLAND CASE.

Miss Lucinda Price, Eleventh St., Laurel, Md., says: "I seemed to have dropsy. My feet and hands were swollen and there were terrible pains in my back. I couldn't sleep and for one whole winter, could not get out. I doctored but nothing helped me until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. Eight boxes made me well."

Rose Matilda's Sprinter.

"Ah's got a sprinter f'm dat ol' winder sill in mah finge' Mis' Greene," announced Rose Matilda, who had been scrubbing window sills, exhibiting the injured member. "Is yo' got a pin or some sech sharp t'ing yo' cayn git it out wi'f? Ah don' jes' wan' to leave it in, 'ca'se dem sprinters ain' to be trifle wif. Tuberculosis Day Oct. 27.

Cordial approval and endorsement of Tuberculosis day which will be observed by the churches of the country on October 27, is expressed by President Taft in a letter to Homer Folks of New York, president of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. From present indications, Tuberculosis day will be observed by almost every religious denomination in the United States and not less than 50,000 sermons on tuberculosis will be preached on October 27, or in the weeks preceding or following that date.

Accelerated Brain Activity.

In the early days of Wisconsin, two of the most prominent lawyers of the state were George B. Smith and I. S. Sloan, the latter of whom had a habit of injecting into his remarks to the court the expression, "Your honor, I have an idea." A certain case had been dragging along through a hot summer day when Sloan sprang to his feet, with his remark, "Your honor, I have an idea."

Smith immediately bounded up, assumed an impressive attitude, and in great solemnity said:

"May it please the court, I move that a writ of habeas corpus be issued by this court immediately to take the learned gentleman's idea out of solitary confinement."—Popular Magazine.

Warrant No. 813 for $87.46 payable to L. H. Reynolds for carpet for court house, telephone freight and pins for court house, and interest on warrants Nos. 379, 378, 386 and 380.

The Commissioners Court Minutes Vol. No. 2, pages 76-77, under date of Nov. 21st, 1910, show that accounts were allowed and ordered paid to 27 different persons for enumerating the school children in their respective districts.

Under date of December 23, 1910, Commissioners Court Minutes Vol. No. 2, show that 3 accounts were allowed and ordered paid for enumeration of the school children.

Under date of January 13th, 1911, the Commissioners Court Minutes, Vol. No. 2, shows that 4 accounts were allowed and ordered paid for enumerating of school children.

According to the treasurer's report, filed in the probate office January 2nd, 1911, there was cash on hand to the credit of the general fund the sum of $10,244.-79. The treasurer's report above referred to, further shows that the treasurer received from J. N. Dennis, the tax collector, under date of December 29th, 1910, $2,000; Dec. 31, 1910, $9,000. According to this report if the tax collector had not paid the $2,000 and the $9,000 above referred to, into the county treasury, the treasurer's report would have shown a deficit of $655.21, January the 1st, 1911. In other words, the tax collector, as shown in the records before and after January 1st, 1911, made reports to the county treasurer on or about the 4th or 5th of each month, and paid to the county treasurer all monies collected for the county for the preceeding month. Therefore, it is clear that if the tax collector had not paid to the treasurer before his usual time for making reports, the $2,000 and the $9,000 above referred to, the treasurer's report above referred to, would have a deficit of $655.21 or that amount less than nothing.

The treasurer's report filed in the probate office, July 10th, 1911 which report covers the period from January 1st, 1911 to July 1st, 1911, shows that the treasurer paid warrants amounting to $3853.50, which were issued and ordered paid before January '16, 1911, the date the present administration took charge of the county's affairs.

The Commissioners Court Minutes show that these warrants were issued before January 16th, 1911, but the treasurer's report shows that no warrants were paid by him between January 1st, 1911 and January 19th, 1911.

Commissioners Court Minutes, Vol. 2, page 574, under date of October 1st, 1910, show that a contract was entered into by the Commissioners Court, under Judge Reynolds' administration, and the Hoosier Bridge Co. to build a certain steel bridge for $[illegible], that amount was paid by the present administration on May [illegible], 1911.

Now if you will take the time to add the amount of the warrants above referred to ($[illegible]) and the amount paid for the steel bridge ($[illegible]) and compare it with the present administration's test to pay $6,178.50 for debt and warrants not issued nor contracted by it. Granting that the present administration took charge of the county's business with $10,344.79 in the treasury, take from it $6,178.-50 (the amount of the outstanding warrants and bridge debt above referred to), you have left, only $4,166.29. Now isn't it clear to any reasonable, thinking mind that the present administration assumed the rains of government with almost an empty treasury instead of a full one. The above and foregoing statements are true and correct and I have cited the records where any one may examine for their own satisfaction.

E. B. DEASON.

Oct. 26, 1912.

NEEDS NO DEFENSE

Unjust Attack Falls Flat—Proven Altogether Untrue.

Judge Deason, the democratic party and the County Commissioners Court (three of whom are republicans) need no defense at our hands. We would not utter a word in defense of either, were it not to show to what desperate straights the Union-Banner is willing to go in its efforts to fortify the progressives against inevitable defeat.

"The burning question before the people of Chilton county is "Where has the money gone?" This is the inquiry of the Union-Banner.

Well, Mr. Union-Banner, just read the few extracts from the Minutes of the court under the former administration and doubtless you will be able to tell the people where the money has gone.

For instance, take a glance at the "interest" paid to former office holders on outstanding warrants paid by these officers to the holders and kept till the county could secure money with which to pay them and the INTEREST Inquire into the facts as to the statements made in the Minutes that the county in 1906 was without funds and could not pay its debts without a special levy to raise the money.

Recall that the tax collector usually paid over to the treasurer such funds as he had in hand on or about the first of the month but in December, 1910, the latter part of the month, a large amount was paid over—just before the retirement of the then probate judge and the incoming of the present probate judge. Recall that warrants for many thousands of dollars were drawn against this fund but were NOT PAID by the treasurer till after the democratic judge had assumed office. Why was this? To show that the republican judge, (now a bull moose) had left a "large" amount in the treasury and that it was recklessly spent by the incoming judge and his court!

These interest bearing warrants! What of them? Who authorized them to bear interest? The Minutes of the Court does not show that they were to bear interest! They were carried for six or eight months because in 1906 under republican administration! the county was unable to pay its debts and those who "cashed" them for the holders charged the county interest on the amount advanced. There was several thousand dollars worth of these warrants.

Notice the tax rate in 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, and the special assessments levied to meet the large debts [illegible] against the county; the [illegible] tax rate and the present rate is a variance!

No, Union-Banner, the present judge does not need any defense; the democratic party requires no defense nor does the present Commissioners Court composed as it is of THREE republicans (now Bull Moose) and one lone democrat. There has never been a single instance when the court in ordering the expenditure of the county's money has had a divided vote—or rather when it has been so divided as to permit the probate judge to cast the deciding vote.

See if the present Commissioners Court will not compare favorably with that of the former one—at least they have never yet gone to the extreme where they have issued warrants, kept them out of the terasury for several months and then PAID INTEREST on them!

How much was paid for the addition to the Court house and the jail? Where is the contract under which this work was done and the price to be paid for it? It does not appear in the Minutes; what has become of it? But, why go on? There are forty other items we might mention; yea, fifty, to show where the people's money has gone but what effect will it have? You would not renounce your "Bull Moosism," you would continue to cry "wolf."

Don't that "discounting" of county warrants look very much like trading in county script? Say, now don't it Mr. Union-Banner?

But why do you, in order to make a thrust at Judge Deason, condemn the commissioners court, whom you, even you, know is responsible for every dollar of the county's funds that are expended—for they have the "say" as to when and to whom the funds of the county shall be expended and for what it shall be expended. You, even you, know this and yet you try to make it appear that Judge Deason is the responsible one.

It looks very much like a frame up somewhere; very much as if there is somebody who is willing to sacrifice old friends and put them in a bad light before the world in order to reach one man against whom you hold animosity without cause.

If you didn't know the true facts you should not have rushed into print—you should have ASCERTAINED and VERIFIED the facts before proclaiming a county official guilty of extravagance!

But if you had ascertained the facts you would have kept quiet—extremely quiet, for the FACTS and the RECORDS are AGAINST you Mr. Union-Banner.

"There are none so blind as those who will not see."

Perhaps, we may yet be able to open your eyes and the eyes of many more here or hereabouts.

WALTER KNIGHT IN THE TOILS

Sheriff Jones received word Sunday night from the Sheriff of Marshall county that Walter Knight had been apprehended and was confined in jail awaiting the arrival of a Chilton county official.

It will be remembered by Press readers that Knight, his brother and father attacked Mr. Gray in the southwestern part of the county a little more than a year ago and came near killing him. The affair arose over some family discussion, Gray having married a sister of the Knight brothers.

One of the brothers and the father were taken by Chilton county officers shortly after the cutting affair but Walter managed to [illegible] and has been [illegible] from justice ever [illegible]

A BULL MOOSE IN CHILTON
A REPUBLICAN IN SHELBY

Longshore, The Short Probate Judge, Campaigning in Chilton.

Talladega, Ala., Oct. 7.—The Bull Moose party held a meeting at the court house here yesterday afternoon. The crowd was small, there being about fifty white persons and ten colored persons present.

The principal feature of the meeting was the speech of Judge A. P. Longshore, of Columbiana, candidate for Congress on the Bull Moose ticket for the Fourth Congressional District. Judge Longshore, in his speech, contended that it was best, and almost necessary, to have two political parties in Alabama in order that either party would be more careful in fulfilling their promises.

He also attacked the present state administration, saying that it was too extravagant, citing wherein the legislature should have left off appropriations until the State treasury was in a better condition, that he, as probate judge of Shelby county, and the other probate judges of the State, had received notices from the State authorities that the condition of the State treasury would not permit the old soldiers warrants and that the new officers who draw their salaries by virtue of the creation thereof by the last legislature, were unnecessary and should not draw their salaries until the old soldiers were paid. He also paid extravagant compliments to the big Bull Moose, Theodore Roosevelt.

Other prominent members of the new party were present and made speeches.

We thought Teddy Roosevelt said the southern negro had no right in conventions? We thought the Progressive party was to have none but northern negroes until the southern white men had made them fit, and then Teddy proposes to give both the men and the women a vote?

What right, then, has Mr. Longshore and those Talladega county Progressives to do what Mr. Roosevelt told them they hadn't ought to do? What right did those ten negroes have in hat convention anyway?

Charges against officials of Shelby County of illegal payments amounting to $22,176.69 were made by J. T. Gorman, Examiner of Public Accounts, to Governor O'Neal Thursday. Of this sum, $1,986.13 has been paid, leaving $20,189.56 yet due. The heaviest charges are made against A. P. Longshore, Probate Judge, and W. E. Harrison, County Treasurer, who jointly are due the county $13,727.01, for warrants paid without being properly audited by the Board of Revenue, and registered, according to the Examiner.

"While there have been no dishonest disbursements," Mr. Gorman writes to the Governor, "or intentional misappropriation of the money of the county, considerable amounts have been illegally and erroneously allowed and disbursed through misinterpretation and misconstruction of the the law."

The examiner hints that impeachment is one penalty for failure on the part of judges of probate to comply with the law governing the duties of his office. Commenting the accounts of Judge [illegible], he reports: [illegible] fairly well kept, [illegible] and careful [illegible] books of Judge Longshore's official transactions. He frequently fails to collect money for the State, where it is his legal duty to collect it, and he also frequently fails to remit money promtly to the State treasury which he has collected for the State, as required by law. For failure to discharge these duties, Section 7457 of the code provides as follows:

"Any judge of probate who knowingly and wilfully does any act contrary to the duties of his office, or knowingly omits or refuses to perform any duty required of him by law, must on conviction be fined not more than $200, if there be no other punishment prescribed for such act or omission, and may be removed from office."

Judge Longshore is charged, also, with money held to be erroneously paid him for road services, and with money collected by him for certain licenses. Treasurer Harrison owes, besides the joint debt, money which he paid as interest on loan, which is said to be not sanctioned by law; also, with money for an adding machine, held to be not a legal expenditure.

J. R. Allen, sheriff, is charged with $125 for fees which the Examiner holds were collected illegally. J. R. Dyke, ex-Circuit Clerk is charged with $680.50, the amount of fees collected by him for work in the County Court. J. R. White, Clerk County Court, is charged with $238.50, the Examiner holding that he was paid too much salary. The last three charges include interest. The members of the Board of Revenue are charged with $517.75 for money collected by them as road supervisors, the Examiner holding that they cannot act in this capacity.

The report was filed with Governor O'Neal this afternoon. The Governor, besides acknowledging unofficially, the receipt of the report, has done nothing concerning its disclosures, nor given any intimation of his plan of action in regard to it.—Advertiser.

This, we understand, is the ame Judge A. P. Longshore who was nominated at the Exchange hotel in Montgomery some days since to oppose Hon. Fred L. Blackmon for congress from this district. He is the same A. P. Longshore who not personally believing in the "rule of the people," when it comes to securing nominations for himself, went to Montgomery, rather than remain in his own district and submit his claims to a vote of the people of his party.

He is the same A. P. Longshore who run his own county into debt thousands upon thousands of dollars for the building of a court house and has been unable during a long administration, to relieve the people of the burden piled upon them.

It is he who has forced bonds upon his people till they are debt ridden, almost beyond endurance, and yet have no good roads or anything else to show for it except a very poor apology for a court house for which he has made the people of his country pay handsomely. We understand it is an "open secret" in Shelby that while the county was heavily bonded for the payment of a poor court house not all of the money raised by bonds for that purpose went into the court

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell.

CHAPTER XII.—Continued.

He had turned the tables most neatly, and I glanced down over my rough garments, awakening suddenly to the knowledge that I was also in masquerade. To be sure I had one advantage—I knew these men had been part of Delavan's foragers, and hence at heart must be loyalists.

"That is not a question I intend answering to every ruffian who stops me on the highway," I returned shortly. "I wish to know what this outrage means? I will know, you wooden-headed image! I was about my business when the four of you attacked me. I wasn't the man you were after at all, and yet I am held prisoner, shut up here behind iron bars. What is this place, anyhow?"

"It is called 'Elmhurst,' sir."

"Elmhurst? A country estate?"

"Yes, sir, one of the old plantations."

"It's a name I never heard. Where is that precious lieutenant?"

"I presume he is in bed, sir," and Peter rose quietly to his feet, and began replacing the dishes on his tray. Apparently there was not a nervous throb to his pulse, and he remained blissfully indifferent to my presence. I stared helplessly at him, even words failing me.

"You refuse to inform me as to the truth of this affair?" I faltered at last, as he lifted his burden on one arm. He turned a stolid face my way.

"It would seem so, sir. I have to thank you for a most delightful evening, sir. Your conversation has been both instructive and entertaining. However, sir, the hour is now late, and I should advise your retiring."

He bowed solemnly, backing toward the door, and I sprang to my feet, overtaken by a sudden determination to make a break for freedom. There was a slight glitter in Peter's gray eyes, as he rapped sharply with his heel on the door.

"I hardly think that would be advisable, sir," he warned softly. "The man outside is armed, and in the excitement might hurt you."

There was a click of the lock, and the heavy door swung open. I stood motionless, tempted to spring, yet not daring the venture. Peter backed majestically out, and I caught a glimpse of the graybeard, and the black outline of a pistol. Then the door closed, leaving me alone. The little scrap of candle left sputtered feebly, and, after walking across the floor a half-dozen times, striving to gain control of my temper, I blew it out, and crawled into the bunk. There was nothing I could do, but wait for morning; not a sound reached me from without, and, before I realized the possibility, I was fast asleep.

"I Hardly Think, Sir, That Would Be Advisable. The Man Outside Is Armed and Might Hurt You."

I must have slept long and soundly, for when I finally awoke a gleam of sun lay the full length of the room, and food was upon the table. Some one—Peter, no doubt—had entered and departed without arousing me. Sleep had left me in a pleasanter frame of mind, and I ate heartily, wondering vaguely what the day would disclose. I determined one thing, that when Peter returned for the dishes, I would lock him into a corner and choke at least a portion of the truth out of his unwilling throat. I had hardly reached this decision when the door opened, and he stood there gazing at me with sphinx-like stupidity. I arose to my feet, gripping the back of a chair, but the utter vacancy in that face seemed to numb action. There was no positive expression, no dim glimmer of interest in his features; the shining bald head alone gave him a grotesque appearance, restraining me from violence. I could as easily have warred with a baby.

"I trust, sir, you slept well," he said soothingly, "and that the service is satisfactory."

I choked back my indignation, the quiet deference of his manner causing me to feel like a brute.

"Nothing could be added to my happiness," I answered, "unless it might be a little information which you seem disinclined to furnish."

He waved one hand, as though brushing calmly aside some imagined insect.

"Disinclined? Oh, no, sir; there is nothing to conceal, sir, I assure you."

"Then, for God's sake, let it out of your system, man!" I burst forth impatiently. "Whom am I a prisoner to? What am I held for? What sort of treatment is this I am receiving?"

Peter bowed, without the tremor of an eyelash.

"Do not mention it, sir," he murmured smoothly; "we are only too proud to have you as our guest at Elmhurst. It has been very quiet here now for some weeks, sir, and your coming was welcome to us all."

I could only stare at the fellow with open mouth, so dumbfounded as to be speechless. Of all the idiots I had ever met he was the worst, or else his acting was magnificent. To save me I was not certain which might be the correct guess. He continued in stately solemnity:

"I trust there remains nothing more you desire to learn sir? If not, I am requested to conduct you to the library. Ah, thank you, sir—this way, please."

He stood aside, statue-like, his eyes looking directly past me, and pointed with dignity to the open door. I obeyed the calm movement of that hand as though it had been a military order, but, as I stepped into the twilight of the outer basement, I suddenly perceived the presence there of the attendant graybeard. He moved in advance, and I followed, aware that Peter was closely at my heels. A glance told me here was a library, not only in name, but in fact, a large square room, well lighted, the furniture mahogany, shining like glass, three of the walls lined with books, mostly in sombre bindings. A green-topped table occupied the center of the apartment, a massive affair, flanked by a leather upholstered reading chair, while before the front windows were cushioned ledges. My rapid glimpse about ended in Peter standing in dignified silence barely within the door, his hand upon the knob.

"I am authorized, sir," he said impressively, gazing directly across my shoulder, not a feature expressing emotion, "to permit you to remain here on parole."

"Parole! What do you mean?"

"Parole was, I believe, the word used, sir," in calm explanation. "It is, as I understand, sir, a military term signifying pledge."

"Oh, I know that. Kindly concede that I possess some small intelligence, Peter. But to whom is this parole given, and what does it imply?"

"To myself, sir. This may seem slightly unconventional, sir, but I trust you will repose sufficient confidence in me not to object. The sole requirements are that you remain in this room until sent for."

"That will not be long?"

"I think not, sir."

"And who will send for me?"

Peter's eyes surveyed me, but without expression.

"I am quite unable to answer that, sir."

He was enough to provoke a saint, but I had already butted my head against that stone wall sufficiently to learn the uselessness of any further attempt. Peter was Peter, and I crushed back my first impatient exclamation to say humbly:

"All right, my man, I'll wait here."

I sank back into the upholstered chair, and for a moment after he had closed the door I did not move. Then, scarcely knowing whether to laugh or swear over the situation, I crossed the room, and gazed out through the window. Far down the winding driveway, half concealed, behind the trees, a body of British troops was tramping toward the house.

CHAPTER XIII.

A New Combination.

My first thought was that this must prove a trap, and I drew hastily back behind the curtain, believing myself justified in an effort at escape. Surely, under such conditions, my word of parole to Peter had no binding force. Yet I waited long enough to glance forth again. The advancing body was less than a hundred strong. Queer Rangers and Hessians, from their forms, straggling along on foot, dusty and without arms. They must be the remnant of Delavan's command, released by their guard of partisans, and now wearily seeking refuge. But why were they coming here? Surely this was not the Philadelphia road?

They turned in upon the open lawn in front of the door, and I could plainly distinguish the faces. There could no longer be any doubt but what these were the men we had fought and defeated the evening before. Grant, with the two Hessian officers, was in advance, and the former strode directly toward the house, while the majority of his following flung themselves at full length on the ground, as though utterly exhausted. Some strange fascination held me motionless, watching the man climb the front steps. The iron knocker rang loudly twice before there came any response from within. Then I could hear voices, but the words reaching me were detached, and without definite meaning. Finally the door closed, and the two men passed along the hall, beyond the room in which I waited. Then Peter's voice said solemnly, as if announcing a distinguished guest:

"Captain Alfred Grant!"

There was an exclamation of surprise, a quick exchange of sentences indistinguishable, although I was sure of Grant's peculiar accent, and the other voice was that of the young light Dragoon lieutenant. Uncertain what best to do I stole toward the door and gripped the knob. This was the only known way out, for I dare not venture to use the window which was in plain view of those soldiers resting on the lawn. Whether Peter had retired or not, I possessed no means of knowing, yet I opened the door silently a bare inch to make sure. At the same instant my ears caught the lieutenant's dismissing order, even as my eyes had glimpse of Swanson's broad back blocking the open doorway of a room nearly opposite.

"That will do, Peter, for the present. Have the table prepared for three guests at once."

He backed out, casting a quick glance of caution in my direction, and disappeared down the hall, rubbing his bald head industriously. I opened the door wider, wondering if I dare venture upon slipping by unobserved. Then Grant spoke, his voice loud enough to be easily heard:

"How did we come here? Why, where else could we go? The damned rebels stripped us clean; we had to have food. This was the nearest place where we were certain of getting any. Of course I didn't know our foragers had left Elmhurst alone, and that—for some cause which mystifies Clinton—these Jersey outlaws have been equally considerate. There was plenty to be had here, and I meant to have it in spite of the servants."

"You must have marched straight past your own placd," the boyish voice interrupted.

"Well, what if we did? There was nothing there, as you know. The house has been stripped to a mere shell. Not a nigger left, nor a horse. I'd like to know what influence keeps this property untouched!"

"That's easily answered. You forget we are a divided family, with fighting men on either side."

"Little these outlaws care for that."

"At least they appear to, as we remain unmolested. There has not been a raiding party halted here since the war began."

"Well, if you hadn't been at home, there would have been one along now," burst forth Grant rather roughly. "Those fellows out there are desperate enough to sack the house if that was their only method of getting food. And I promised they should have the chance."

"Oh, you did, indeed! That would have proven a friendly act."

"Necessity does not take much account of friendship. I was responsible for a hundred starving men. Under such conditions force would be justified. I doubt if I could control the fellows now if provisions should be refused."

"There is no necessity for indulging in threats, Captain Grant," said the boy's voice coldly. "Elmhurst has never yet turned a soldier away in hunger. Peter will instruct what few servants remain to attend to the immediate needs of your men. May I ask how long you expect to remain?"

I thought Grant was walking nervously back and forth across the room.

"How long? Until night, probably. Then with a bite in our haversacks we'll take the road again. That is, providing you condescend to act as our host for so long a time. Odds life! but this reception is not over warm to my thinking."

"Elmhurst is not a tavern, sir."

"No; but the home of a loyalist—the commander of half these men out yonder. However I am not pleading for them, but myself personally. What welcome have I had? By all the gods, I was almost compelled to fight that bald-headed fool Peter for even gaining entrance to the hall. Were these your orders?"

"Assuredly not. Was you were gone, sir, [illegible] and despite for being over-zealous in duty, sir. I received you as such, and I know you were."

"Yes," somewhat mollified, "I presume that is true, although you are chilly enough, the Lord knows. But what brings you here?"

"That must remain my secret, Captain Grant—for the present."

"Oh, very well. I thought it might have some connection with Eric's presence in this neighborhood."

"With Eric! What do you mean? Have you seen him?"

"Ah! so I've got below the surface at last! I thought I might with that thrust. Yes, I saw him last night. I didn't know what the devil the fellow was up to, but I thought I'd let him play out his game. It was a right nervy trick, so far as it went, but unfortunately the rebels came in before I discovered what it all led up to."

"You do not make it very clear to me."

"I told you it was not even clear to myself. This is all I know. When I joined Delavan last night just after dark, he had a young officer of Light Dragoons in charge of his advance guard. I merely got a glimpse of the fellow as we rode in, and he looked so devilishly like Eric that I asked Delavan who the lad was. He said he had joined at Mount Holly with three men, was going through to Philadelphia with despatches from New York, and was only too glad of escort the rest of the way. Being short of officers Delavan gave him charge of the van."

"Did he recognize you?"

"I hardly think so; it was pretty dark, and I was put on guard over the rear wagons. I supposed I would have ample opportunity to learn the truth after it became daylight."

"But you believed him to be Eric?"

"Yes, and after the attack I was convinced. He and the three men with him bolted and got away. Must have run at the first fire, for the fellows had us completely hemmed in. It was Eric all right, and that is about half the reason why I led my men back here—I wanted to find out if he was hiding about the old place. Is it true you haven't seen him?"

"Quite true; indeed I had no reason to suppose him in the Jerseys at this time."

I Opened the Door Wider, Wondering If I Dare Venture Upon Stepping by Unobserved.

Grant remained silent, probably not wholly convinced that he was being told the truth, and yet not venturing to state openly his suspicions. However the other said no more, and finally the Ranger felt compelled to answer.

"Of course," he explained rather lamely, "I couldn't altogether blame you for concealing the boy if he had shown up here, but you will realize that as a King's officer I have a serious duty to perform."

"You would apprehend Eric? Would betray him into British hands? Is that your meaning, Captain Grant?"

"[illegible] as his, as you in that your meaning, Captain Grant?"

"[illegible] Don't be [illegible] as I am in [illegible] position [illegible] for such [illegible] Surely you know that. Last night I thought we had him in our power, but the very devil seems to protect him from capture, even when luck brings him fairly within our grip."

"And so you came here to search for him?" I could feel the bitter scorn in the voice. "In his father's home!"

"I certainly did," angrily. "I shall search the house from cellar to garret before I leave."

"But you are on parole."

"Damn the parole. What do I care for a pledge given to a band of plundering outlaws? And what do I care for Eric? He chose for himself, and has no right to expect any mercy from me, and by all the gods, he'll receive none. I half believe that attack last night was his planning, and that now you have him hidden away here."

"And you propose searching the rooms?"

"I do. If you had been a little more genial I might have exhibited greater courtesy. But I haven't any use for Eric, and never had. Now you know the truth."

"Very well, sir," and the incensed lieutenant pushed back his chair. "Then we clearly understand each other at last. I am sincerely glad of it. From now on I shall never again be guilty of mistaking you for a friend or a gentleman. No, I have no wish to listen to another word; you have spoken frankly enough, and I understand the situation. Perhaps it is only anger, but it gives me the excuse I have been seeking after a long while in vain. Whatever claim you may have had upon my regard in the past is over with, forever over with, Captain Grant."

"But—but, surely—"

"I mean precisely that. You can cover your despicable actions with the gloss of military duty, but I know you now as a revengeful liar. Treat this house as you please. I refuse to have any more dealings or words with you. I'll provision you and your men, as I would any others suffering from hunger, but that ends all."

I closed the crack of the door as he came forth into the hall, having no desire to be caught listening. My own position was more unpleasant and hazardous than ever. Whatever reason the lieutenant might have for holding me prisoner I was convinced he possessed no knowledge as to my real identity. The probability was that after an interview I would be released. But Grant would recognize me instantly, and he proposed searching the house, room by room, seeking this man Eric. I must make my escape first. Yet how could this be accomplished? I heard Peter pass along the hall, and solemnly announce the serving of breakfast. He and Grant exchanged a few sentences, and then the latter strode in the front door, where he gave orders to the men. I watched the German officers come up the steps, while the majority of the others formed into irregular line, stretched [illegible] the corner of the house, a small guard remained, however, on guard, [illegible] the front approach.

JAMES SHERMAN IS SERIOUSLY ILL

ALTHOUGH IN NO IMMEDIATE DANGER, HE IS FAILING RAPIDLY.

POSSIBILITY OF WITHDRAWAL

Many Interesting Possibilities If Republican Candidate For the Vice Presidency.

Utica, N. Y.—James S. Sherman, vice president of the United States, is seriously ill and steadily failing at his home here. While his physician, Dr. Fayette H. Peck, believes there is no immediate danger of death, the distinguished patient's condition is such that it is a matter of conjecture how much longer he can withstand the ravages of the disease with which he is affected.

Dr. Peck authorized this statement regarding Mr. Sherman's illness and his present condition:

"Mr. Sherman has been sick all this year, due to the condition of his kidneys, hardening of the arteries and softening of the muscles of the heart which is somewhat stretched. Mr. Sherman had an attack in the Adirondacks in June and I expected him to die. He improved steadily and was satisfactorily until the latter part of August. Since then his condition has been aggrevated and he has been steadily failing.

"For the last three weeks since he came back from Connecticut, where he went to rest, he has been dressed only once and that was a week ago Friday, when against my protest he went out to the polls to register.

"Mr. Sherman is now in the condition which that sort of trouble is to and is very seriously ill, but he is, I believe, no immediate danger of death."

Washington.—The illness of Vice President Sherman and speculation over possibilities of his withdrawal from the republican ticket because of the precarious condition of his health aroused discussion here as to what methods would be taken of supplying his place if necessary.

The general opinion expressed was that the republican national committee or the executive committee possessed power to fill a vacancy on the ticket. No one here professed to know whether the Chicago convention specifically provided for such an emergency.

The report of the 1908 convention does not appear to show that such provision was made then and the stenographic report of the convention for that year has not yet been printed.

Ordinarily should there be no vice president, the President pro tem of the Senate would preside over the body and the line of succession to the presidency would be to the Secretary of State.

The possibility, if even a remote one, that there might be no republican candidate for vice president, suggests many interesting possibilities in the event the election should go to the House of Representatives.

TWO ARE KILLED IN COLLISION

Toronto, Ont.—Two soldiers of the Toronto garrison were killed, [illegible] probably fatally injured and 37 others badly hurt, when a train on which the troops were returning from sham battles at Milton was wrecked at Streetsville junction. The special troop train crashed into the rear end of the Canadian Pacific express bound for Detroit, which was just moving from Streetsville junction after taking water. The force of the impact hurled the heavy baggage car of the special train from its trucks and it shot backward into the first of six passenger coaches in which the soldiers were crowded.

HE WAS TAKING NO CHANCES

Small Boy's Precautions May Have Been Excessive, but He Still Had the Suit.

The Rev. John N. Underwood, of Pittsburg's most eloquent evangelical ministers, said the other day in a temperance address in the south: "I pointed out that drunken husbands kill every year, with revolvers, hatchets and clubs, 3,600 wives. Every 500 babies are killed by drunken fathers who crush them in bed. Ninety per cent. of all our divorces are due to drunkenness."

Mr. Underwood paused, then added: "I heard recently of a little boy to whom a warm and comfortable suit had been given. The boy's father was a drunkard, and it was feared that it would soon find its way to the pawnshop. But a week after the boy had got the suit he was still wearing it.

"'Good for you, Johnny!' said a missionary to the little chap. 'You're wearing your suit, I see.'

"'Yes, sir,' the urchin explained, 'I keep in it.'"—Chicago Record-Herald.

RINGWORM SPREAD ON FACE

Campbell, Va.—"I have been troubled with ringworm on the right side of my face for six or eight years. It began with just very small pimples, then spots and continued to spread more every year until it covered the right side of my face. It was red, rough in circles, and itched and burned very much. It was sore when I scratched my face and it worried me so much I couldn't keep from scratching. It looked very bad; I would hate to go out while it was on my face. Everybody noticed it and some would ask me what it was.

"I tried some home remedies before using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, such as ——, ——, —— and ——, but could only find temporary relief until I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I put the Cuticura Ointment on my face and let it stay on for about an hour and then I washed my face with Cuticura Soap. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for one month and I was cured." WAS TAKING NO CHANCES Boy's Precautions May Have Been Excessive, but He Still Had the Suit.

The Rev. John N. Underwood, one Pittsburg's most eloquent and popular ministers, said the other day: a temperance address in the spring pointed out that drunken husbands every year, with revolvers and knives and clubs, 3,600 wives. That babies are killed by drunken who crush them in bed. That per cent. of all our divorces are due drunkenness."

Underwood paused, then added: heard recently of a little boy to a warm and comfortable suit been given. The boy's father was drunkard, and it was feared that the would soon find its way to the pawnshop. But a week after the lad got the suit he was still wearing it.

"Good for you, Johnny!' said a city visitor to the little chap. 'Still wearing your suit, I see.'

"'Yes, sir,' the urchin explained. 'I keep in it.'"—Chicago Record-Herald.

RINGWORM SPREAD ON FACE

Campbell, Va.—"I have been troubled with ringworm on the right side my face for six or eight years. It started with just very small pimples in and continued to spread more every year until it covered the right side of my face. It was red, rough and in circles, and itched and burned very much. It was sore when I scratched my face and it worried me so much I couldn't keep from scratching. It looked very bad; I would hate to go out while it was on my face. Every one noticed it and some would ask me about it was.

"I had tried some home remedies before using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, as much as ——, ——, —— and ——. I could only find temporary relief until I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I put the Cuticura Ointment on my face and let it stay on for about an hour and then I washed my face with Cuticura Soap. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for one month and I was cured." (Signed) Miss Sylvia Woodward, Feb. 21, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free with 32-p. Skin Book. Address Postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

WOMEN SHOULD BE PROTECTED

Against So Many Surgical Operations. How Mrs. Bethune and Mrs. Moore Escaped.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything.

I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Murrayville, Ill.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a very bad case of female trouble and it made me a well woman. My health was all broken down, the doctors said I must have an operation, and I was ready to go to the hospital, but dreaded it so that I began taking your Compound. I got along so well that I gave up the doctors and was saved from the operation."—Mrs. CHARLES MOORE, R. R. No. 3, Murrayville, Ill.

BAD BACKS DO MAKE WORK HARD

Backache makes the daily toil, for thousands, an agony hard to endure.

Many of these poor sufferers have kidney trouble and don't know it.

Swollen, aching kidneys usually go hand in hand with irregular kidney action, headache, dizziness, nervousness and despondancy.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, the best-recommended kidney remedy.

Here's a Connecticut Case

Byrne Street, 64 Tallman Str., Norwich, Conn., says: "For weeks I was sick in bed so helpless I couldn't turn over. I suffered tortures from the sharp pains across my loins, and was greatly troubled by profuse passage of the kidney secretions. "Doan's Kidney Pills cured me completely after doctors failed."

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. FAR BETTER THAN QUININE. Elixir Babek cures malaria where quinine fails, and it can be taken with impunity by old and young. "She brought a backer to the front."

NAMED THE FIRST REQUISITE

Bright Boy May Have Lacked Originality, but He Surely Had Correct Answer.

"This brave man, beloved by all France, was then buried with full military honors," a Baltimore boy read from the lesson, when his name had been called.

"What are 'military honors' in this connection?" the teacher asked, and several boys seemed to be possessed of the right idea.

"And what must one be to receive such honors?" was the next question.

"A general?" "A hero?" "A captain?" were a few of the tentative replies. Only the "bright boy" of the class remained silent.

"Have you no answer, James?" the teacher suggested, "what must one be?"

"Why, I should say dead, Miss Mary," was the reply.

A Nice Distinction.

Senator Gronna, discussing a knotty tariff problem, said in a speech:

"There is a nice distinction involved here. You don't notice it at first. Once it is pointed out to you, however, you perceive its immense importance.

"It's the sort of discussion that Gobsa Golde's beautiful young wife revealed to him during a conjugal quarrel over a diamond tiara.

"'People say,' quavered the old man, trembling with roge. 'People say you married me because I had money.'

The young woman smiled superbly.

"'Rubbish!' she exclaimed. 'My primary reason for marrying you was that I had no money myself.'"

Alphabetically Speaking.

Among a recent batch of candidates for appointment to the police force of Washington was a big darky, evidently of rural origin, who announced his readiness to stand examination.

"Are you a native of this city?" he was asked.

"No, suh. I am from the first state in the Union?"

"A New Yorker?"

"No, suh. I am from Alabama!"

"Alabama is not the first state in the Union, as the saying goes," responded the examiner.

"Alphabetically speaking it is suh," said the candidate with conviction. "Alphabetically speaking."

Superior Attraction.

One of the two women who sat near the front of the car had been to the theater the night before to see a certain beautiful actress.

"How does she hold her age?" eagerly asked the one who had not been.

"Well, to tell you the truth, Mamie, she wore such a lovely pink dress that I couldn't take my eyes off it the whole time she was on the stage; so I never thought of looking at her face to see whether she held her age or not—I should say she did, though."

As a summer tonic there is no medicine that quite compares with OXIDINE. It not only builds up the system, but taken regularly, prevents Malaria. Regular or Tasteless formula at Druggists. Adv.

Of Course.

"Doesn't the sight of a peach make you want to smack your lips?"

"No, indeed. The sight of a peach makes me want to smack her lips."

DOES YOUR HEAD ACHE? Try Hicks' CAPUDINE. It's liquid—pleasant to take—effects immediate—good to prevent Sick Headaches and Nervous Headaches also. Your money back if not satisfied. 10c., 25c. and 50c. at medicine stores. Adv.

"The joy riders are about all in."

Superiority.

"My wife can make a tart answer."

"My wife can do better than that. She can make a pie speak for itself."

To prevent Malaria is far better than to cure it. In malarial countries take a dose of OXIDINE regularly one each week and save yourself from Chills and Fever and other malarial troubles. Adv.

Let every democrat make it a part of his religious duty to go to the polls next Tuesday and cast his vote for the entire ticket.

See that your ticket is properly marked; do not take any chance on having your vote cast out because it was not properly marked; if you are not certain about marking it, get assistance from some one who is familiar with all the democratic candidates.

The bottling up of Clanton by the Western Union Telegraph Co. just at election time is disagreeable indeed; seems as if they might have waited till after the election anyway.

Did you notice in the Union-Banner of the 10th a statement wherein the editor said no articles would be published which reflected upon any man's personal character? Well, did you notice in its issue of the week before that it published an attack upon one of Chilton's citizens (Mr. Anderson Teel)? Did you notice that it refused to permit Mr. Teel to reply to that attack? Did you notice that the Union-Banner came back a second time at Mr. Anderson Teel after he had sought to refute the charges brought against him? "Consistency thou art a jewel!"

Court records are mighty reliable records; they are also mighty good testimony in many cases. Have you read the Minutes of the Commissioners Court for the year 1906? If not, you ought to read them before you cast your vote; they show some mighty interesting things.

Let every patriotic Alabamaian cast his vote for Woodrow Wilson, a Southern man with a Southern born wife. Let them bear in mind that had Mr. Underwood been nominated New Jersey's candidate would have stood nobly by him.

Democracy must do its full duty Tuesday; be on your guard from early till late. The election is not over till the vote has been counted and delivered to the County authorities.

Mr. Wilson, who is to be the next president, is sending out through the several campaign committees, a personal letter to the voters; he does not wish this letter opened or read till Saturday, November 2nd, but, on that day he earnestly requests that those to whom they are sent will assemble as many voters as possible and read the letter to them. It is highly important that Mr. Wilson's desires in this particular be respected and obeyed. Let those to whom the letters are sent see that his instructions are obeyed. Assemble your friends at a convenient point and read his letter to them. It will be an "eye opener" and should be heard by every voter.

Tuesday is election day. At that time the people of this country are to decide who, for the next four years, shall handle the reigns of government. It is a foregone conclusion that Wilson and Marshall will be triumphantly elected. Nevertheless it is the bounden duty of every loyal democrat in Alabama to go to the polls and vote; this is Mr. Underwood's state; he was a candidate for the democratic nomination for President; had he been nominated every Alabamian would have expected Mr. Wilson's state to support him with enthusiasm, and doubtless it would have done so; it is nothing but right then that Underwood's state should give Mr. Wilson its enthusiastic support.

In Chilton county the local fight is going to be close; the democrats lost one or two officers in the election year before last because someof our voters failed to go to the polls; this should not be the case this year. Every voter should make it his duty to see that every democratic voter is present at the polls on the day of the election.

The ticket is going to be a long one; if you have the least doubt about marking your ticket secure the assistance of some good democrat.

The Union-Banner is very profuse in its charges of "trickery" and "last day" circulars on the part of the democrats. Yes, they are very profuse indeed. We wish, however, to remind them that those circulars and that so-called "trickery" was all occasioned by the would-be "slick ones" of the then republican politicians (now Bull Moosemen).

Had they not tried to "hog" the Honeycutt letter and push it over the people; had they not changed the date in order to make it appear that Judge Honeycutt was actually supporting their ticket, whereas he was an ardent supporter of the democratic ticket, those "last day" circulars would never have been issued. It became necessary not only to forestall the trickery and deception of the then republicans but also to protect a gentleman (Judge Honeycutt) from false representation.

Don't talk about trickery or last day circulars; remember your own attempt to deceive the people and your own gross misrepresentation of one of Chilton county's best citizens.

MR. JONES REPUDIATES HIS APPOINTMENT

Editor of the Press:—

It has just come to my knowledge that the Progressive party at its organization meeting selected me as a member of their executive committee to represent precinct number One.

I wish to say that I have always been a democrat and that I am now a democrat and will vote the straight democratic ticket in November.

It appears that the progressive party is trying to make political capital by the appointment of democrats to represent them on the executive committee and then claiming that these men will vote with their party.

No such thing will take place in my case; as heretofore I am now a democrat and want all my friends to know it.

B. G. Jones.

M. L. WHITE

I wish to announce that I have in my yard a quantity of grate coal which I would like to deliver before the extreme cold weather and thereby save disappointment to my customers. Terms STRICTLY CASH THIS SEASON.

Below is a copy of the democratic ticket as it will appear on the offic al ballot next Tuesday under the "ROOSTER" of the democracy. It will be well for all of our voters to study this ticket carefully and prepare themselves to mark it. Of course the names of the various candidates for Justice of the Peace and for Constable do not appear; these are precinct, or beat officers, and it would be manifestly impossible to print them. Remember that in voting for President and Vice President you do not vote for the candidates direct, but for "electors;" Alabama is entitled to twelve electors, hence vote for every name on the ticket under the democratic Rooster.

All that is necessary to vote the entire ticket is to make a cross (X) mark in the circle at the top of the democratic column. When this is done the voter has voted the entire democratic ticket and need not mark the individual names.

BE YE NOT DECEIVED

The statement of the Treasurer printed in the Union-Banner showing that the general fund of the county is exhausted, should deceive no one; the publication was, of course, made for political effect; had there been a large amount on hand in that fund no statement would have been published. But that is not an indication of a "busted" county by any means and should deceive no one; there are many counties which are in the same condition when the funds of the county are kept in half a dozen or more separate funds.

Be that as it may, however, let the statement show what it may, it does NOT show that the present Probate Judge spent the money; it was ORDERED paid by the COUNTY COMMISSIONERS who are BULL MOOSERS and the Treasurer, who is a BULL MOOSER, PAID IT OUT!

It does not show, and cannot show, that any member of the Court of COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, who are Bull Moosers, have acted wrongfully. It does not show, and cannot show, that the present Probate Judge is DRAWING INTEREST FROM the COUNTY (the people's money) as did the Probate Judge in 1906 when the County was "busted" sure enough.

The other funds of the county are in good condition—that was not true in 1906 under a Bull Moose Probate Judge.

JOINT DISCUSSION

Arrangements have been made for a joint discussion at Clanton on Saturday morning at the Court House between Congressman Fred L. Blackmon and Judge A. P. Longshore.

We trust that all our people will be present and hear this discussion; Mr. Blackmon is a forceful speaker and will give out some information that every one should hear.

The discussion has been well advertised and we doubt not that a large assembly will greet the two speakers.

CLANTON AN ISOLATED TOWN.

Last Monday the Western Union graph Co. severed its connec- with the L. & N. railroad com- y, in so far as a joint office is cerned, and merged with the Phone Company, so that now nton is as badly separated from outside world in so far as wire munication is concerned, as Port Arthur when the Russo- n war was in progress. The one service was miserable ough when the young men in rge of that company had noth- else to do, but now with the estern Union business to look er in addition to the phone af- s it is past endurance. The one service has never been at it really should be, or what nton patronage deserves at the ds of the company; with the ditional duties thrust upon the oung men in charge it is well gh impossible to secure any kind serviee whatever.

It takes now anywhere from teen minutes to an hour to se- re connection with Birmingham Montgomery; before the consol- ation of the two offices it took ly from ten minutes to forty-five.

To get a telegram off from Clanton it is necessary to use the phone and send the message to Calera or Birmingham and have it transmitted from one of those points. Answers are received in the same manner.

Just how long we are to submit to this service is not known; surely our business men will take the matter up and undertake to secure us some kind of relief.

Right here at election time, when every one is more or less interested in receiving news, it is rather taxing upon one's patience to say the least of it.

TRUTH ABOUT THE TRUST.

"Expected Economies From Combination" Do Not Materialize.

[Louis D. Brandeis in Collier's.]

Leaders of the new (third term) party argue that industrial monopolies should be legalized lest we lose the efficiency of large scale production and distribution. No argument could be more misleading. * * *

It may be safely asserted that in America there is no line of business in which all or most concerns or plants must be concentrated in order to attain the size of greatest efficiency, for, while a business may be too small to be efficient, efficiency does not grow indefinitely with increasing size. What the most efficient size is can be learned definitely only by experience. The unit or greatest efficiency is reached when the disadvantages of size counterbalance the advantages. The unit of greatest efficiency is exceeded when the disadvantages of size outweigh the advantages. The history of American trusts makes this clear. That history shows:

First.—No conspicuous American trust owes its existence to the desire for increased efficiency. "Expected economies from combination" figure largely in promoters' prospectuses, but they have never been a compelling motive in the formation of any trust. On the contrary, the purpose of combining has often been to curb efficiency or even to preserve inefficiency, thus frustrating the natural law of survival of the fit test.

Second.—No conspicuously profitable trust owes its profits largely to superior efficiency. Some trusts have been very efficient, as have some independent concerns, but conspicuous profits have been secured mainly through control of the market, through the power of monopoly to fix prices, through this exercise of the taxing power.

Third.—No conspicuous trust has been efficient enough to maintain long as against the independents its proportion of the business of the country without continuing to buy up from time to time its successful competitors.

FARMER GETS LESS, BUT—

He Has to Pay More For What He Doesn't Raise.

The United States department of agriculture has just announced that notwithstanding the increased cost of living among the people as a whole there was a greater decline in the prices paid to farmers from Aug. 1 to Sept. 1 this year than there was last year.

The average farm prices of the important crops (corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed, potatoes, tobacco, cotton and hay, which represent about three-fourths of the value of all the country's crops) declined 7 per cent during the month, while in that time last year they declined in price only 4.4 per cent, and during the last four years the decline in price averaged 3.8 per cent. The average of farm prices on Sept. 1 was 2.8 per cent lower than on that date last year.

Prices paid to farmers on Sept. 1 this year, with comparison of prices paid on the same date last year, follow:

	1912.	1911.
Corn	$0.776	$0.659
Wheat	.858	.848
Oats	.350	.404
Barley	.625	.770
Rye	.708	.769
Buckwheat	.766	.740
Flaxseed	1.626	2.036
Potatoes	.650	1.137
Hay	12.140	14.610
Cotton	.113	.118
Butter	.242	.231
Chickens	.113	.111
Eggs	.191	.174

But the prices on tariff nurtured articles of manufacture which the farmer has to buy continue to soar.

The third term candidate's favorite reply to the telling, unanswerable arguments of Governor Wilson is that the latter's opinions are based "not on actual knowledge and experience, but by reading musty books on political economy." The colonel himself at a tender age was put at hard labor! It is not often that a man whose whole life has been given up to politics and officeholding gets as horny handed as Mr. Roosevelt in the ranks of labor and high finance.

Governor Wilson said to the newspaper men at the New York Press club banquet: "Suppose you had a house of representatives mixed like the present senate. I think we could all go fishing for the next two years." But he's at the helm, and there won't be any mixing. Democrats—that's all.

How many of those who are struggling with the "high cost of living" believe there is to be any relief if the Republican party, which brought it about, remains in power?

The card stacking at Armageddon goes merrily on. Eight Taft electors in Missouri announce that if elected they will vote for the third term candidate.

By applying the common sense test to Rooseveltian romance Governor Wilson manages to keep the country both amused and thoughtful.

A KITCHEN COMFORT
The oven of Cole's Hot Blast Range will bake six loaves of light bread with less fuel than any range made. On account of the one-pieced Coleined Steel Fire Back and the Hot Blast Combustion you can bake a batch of light bread, using the fuel remaining after a heavy meal or other work has been finished. Light bread should be allowed to bake from 45 to 60 minutes. The heat retained in the heavy oven material, the hot blast combustion and the perfect control of the fire make it possible for you to bake in Cole's Hot Blast Range without the trouble of building an extra fire and overheating your kitchen. The oven can be heated quickly when required for biscuits and other baking which require a quick oven. Investigate this new improved range. Remember these improvements are not embodied in any other range at any price. (R-65)

The People Will Be Advised

Milton H. Smith Answers B. B. Comer

Ex-Gov. Comer, in his Greenville address, expatiates at length on the alleged fact that representatives of the railroads have procured the publication of articles tending to inform and enlighten those who may read them on the subject of the contention between the State and said railroads, the contention on the part of the State having been largely initiated and prosecuted by his efforts. Also, such publications have exposed the falsity of his many baleful allegations.

He crafts his falsehoods and causes them to be widely published, and then carries because the press that may have published his emanations as matter of political interest, without charge, receive in some instances remuneration for publishing matter controverting his baseless charges.

He would have the railroads "roped and tied"—rendered helpless, that his shameful and baseless falsehoods may not be exposed. In fact, he would prohibit every one who may differ from him from refuting the ravings of his disordered mind.

His efforts to prevent exposition of his fallacious utterances will prove impotent—the citizens of Alabama will be fully advised of his heresies.

Cotton Mills of Demopolis Alleged to Not Have Complied With Requirements.

Montgomery.—Violation of the child labor law by the Elmore cotton mills of Demopolis has been reported to the state prison inspection department by Deputy Inspector P. P. Hudson, who has just returned from an inspection of that company.

According to Deputy Hudson he found that out of 22 children selected at random 14 of them had not filed with the officers of the company an affidavit of their parents consenting to their employment in the mill, a violation of the law.

Action looking to the prosection of the officials of the cotton company will be at once taken, according to a statement made by Deputy Hudson. This is the first violation of the child labor laws in the state in some time, and it is probable that every effort will be made to prosecute the guilty parties.

Birmingham.—Pig iron is being sold by manufacturers in Southern territory for delivery into the first half of 1913, and reports have it that considerable tonnage has already been sold ahead. The price that is being asked for iron for the first half of next year delivery ranges around $14.50 per ton, No. 2 foundry, with $14 as the minimum for iron during the last two months of this year and the first quarter of the new year.

Accumulated stocks of pig iron are dwindling rapidly, and by the end of the year, if there is no hesitation in the outward movement, the yards will be almost barren.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS MONEY.

Gadsden.—The mystery surrounding the reported finding of $5,500 at the old Whorton place, near Gadsden has not been cleared. The two men alleged to have found the money, cannot be located. Some believe the $3,500 found at Fort Payne was lost by the finders of the money at the Whorton place.

$77,000 FOR IMPROVEMENTS.

Birmingham.—Approximately $77,000 will be expended by the Queen and Crescent route to improve its facilities in Birmingham.

U. S. COURT OF APPEALS.

Montgomery.—The federal circuit court of appeals completed the term docket and adjourned to meet next either at New Orleans or Atlanta. The cases argued before Judges Pardee, Shelby and Meeks and the remaining ones will be heard. The docket consisted of fifteen cases, the majority of them being appeals from other districts in this and other states in the fifth judicial circuit.

JOHNSON TRIAL UNDER WAY.

Anniston—Walter Johnson, who told a very conflicting story in regard to the murder of Tom Stone, who was killed in his home during the days of Camp Pettus last summer, was placed on trial in the city court on October 30 to answer for the crime, which he tried to lay at the door of two militiamen whom he was unable to name or locate.

ARMORY WALLS COLLAPSE.

Selma.—The side walls of perhaps the oldest brick building in Selma, at the corner of Water and Lauderdale streets collapsed. For some weeks past workmen have been engaged in remodeling it and putting on a new roof, it having been leased for a period of years by the Abbott Rifles as an armory.

TWO SYRUP FACTORIES.

Mobile.—Announcement is made that two syrup factories are to be immediately erected at Dawes, a new town in the western part of Mobile county. Promoters of the movement originally intended to erect only one plant at Dawes, but, being liberally encouraged, they have decided that two will be necessary at this locality

BUSY WITH EDUCATION SHOW.

Anniston.—H. T. Persons, superintendent of schools of Calhoun county and chairman of the executive committee for the educational fair, which will be held at Jacksonville, a few miles north of here, November 21-23, is actively at work, and considerable interest is being manifested in Anniston in the undertaking, which will bo county-wide in its scope.

LINGERS TO CAST VOTE.

RAINS DAMAGING COTTON.

Hamilton.—Heavy rains are damaging the cotton crop and delaying picking. The crop is short one-third, if it could all be gathered.

JOBBERS HAVE HAD BRISK BUSINESS

Mercantile Interests Experience Active Trade—The South Showing Life.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

The mercantile interests of the country, speaking of them collectively, have experienced another week of exceptionally active trade. Jobbers of all staple lines have enjoyed a brisk business and calls for winter goods have come to the front in a noteworthy way. Incidentally, buying for future account for next spring is becoming more conspicuous. The relatively more active zones are the West, Northwest and Southwest, which sections have been blessed by bounteous crops. Even the South, for a long time comparatively backward is showing life, thanks to the free marketing of cotton, though things remain rather low in the South Atlantic regions. Shipping rooms, particularly of dry goods houses, are overtaxed in getting out orders, and manufacturers in most industries are working to capacity.

The iron and steel industry continues in an enviable position, further advances in prices are being made and the railways have bought more freely than at any time this year. Pig iron is not so active, but the general situation is such as to produce further strength in prices. Retail trade tends to improve, especially in the West, South and Southwest. Collections are improving and while matters in this respect are not yet entirely favorable the trends indicate that bills are being met more promptly.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending October 24 were 229, against 187 last week, 231 in 1909 and 241 in 1908. Business failures in Canada for the week number 23, which compares with 26 last week and 21 in the like week of 1911.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending October 24 (report from Galveston not received) aggregate 6,655,961 bushels, against 5,785,610 last week, and 3,780,016 this week last year. For the 17 weeks ending October 24, exports are 68,010,333 bushels, against 50,369,299 in the corresponding period last year. Corn exports for the week are 129,138 bushels, against 57,560 last week and 526,110 in 1911. For the 17 weeks ending October 24, corn exports are 1,324,700 bushels, against 10,632,305 last year.

Dun's Letter.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

While the Bulgarian-Turkish war causes much uneasiness abroad, its chief effect in this country has been, first to produce large foreign selling of American securities, and, second, to cause large foreign buying of American wheat.

Reports from every section of the country is favorable, and the general business situation is not only very active, but is healthy. Taking it altogether there has never been a more remarkable uplift in American business than that now in progress at a time of foreign disturbance and of an important political campaign; and it is notable also that the trade and industrial expansion, while testing the capacity of plants and banks and railroads and the labor supply, causes a comparatively small amount of friction.

While new business has slackened in some lines of iron and steel this is more than compensated for by the railroad buying which is on a heavier scale than at any previous time this year. Contracts for rails just announced exceed 200,000 tons and the orders already taken for 1913 established a record up to this date. Other equipment also is in heavy demand with $13,000 cash placed this week and considerable more than that amount still pending.

Aside from the railroad requirements the activity, as has been noted, is less pronounced. This is due to the inability to secure prompt deliveries, and the fact that most consumers of steel products are covered until next April.

From every large distributing center comes favorable reports of dry goods markets. In cotton goods the numerous orders from jobbers and the manufacturing trades prevent the accumulation that is commonly looked for at this period. The demand for fine and fancy cottons has improved, and a good business has been done in dress ginghams for spring. Staple prints and bleached cottons are quiet. Business in woolens and worsteds is claimed better than for many years. The leading mills have all the work they can handle for fall and spring.

Shoe factories report a demand which brings production to the point of factory capacity. Leather and hides continue very firm.

LIEUTENANT BECKER CONVICTED

New York.—Police Lieutenant Chas. Becker was found guilty of murder in the first degree by the jury which has been trying him for instigating the death of Herman Rosenthal, a gambler. The verdict read: "Murder in the first degree."

Becker was remanded for sentence to the Tombs by Justice Goff.

John F. McIntyre, Becker's chief counsel, announced that he would move for a new trial, appeal, and if that failed, take the case to the highest court in the state.

BRING YOUR BIBLE ALONG

As an illustration of how servants can sometimes get things badly mixed up, the following is told as an actual occurance which took place in Clanton Wednesday.

A servant girl from one of Clanton's best appointed homes, wherein lives a most attractive young lady, came to the office of a certain business institution and, addressing the proprietor, who was at the time entertaining several friends, said in subdued tones: "Miss—— says, bring your Bible along tonight." The proprietor looked in astonishment, never having before received any such message, and not expecting a message from any young lady—he being a grey haired old rascal. The visitors present enjoyed his discomfiture to the full. Questions put to the servant girl only elicited "Miss—— says, bring your Bible along tonight." Later in the evening the proprietor happened to meet the young lady who had sent the message and asked her if she had really sent a message of that kind. "Why no, said she: I told that dunce of a girl to tell one of the young men who works in your office to bring his BASS VIOLIN along; he understood that we were to have choir practice and I wanted him to bring his violin."

Who's the joke on anyway?

Miss Inez Byrd, who has been in Clanton for the past two weeks as stenographer for the Democratic Campaign Committee, returned Monday afternoon to her home in Montgomery, having completed her work here.

Miss Nettie Williams returned Sunday afternoon, after a pleasant visit of several days to Miss Dovie Roper.

Judge L. H. Reynolds went up to Birmingham Tuesday afternoon on a business trip.

SOME PECANS

Mr. W. A. Candler brought to the Press man last week a number of as fine pecans as the writer has seen in many a day. They were raised on his place in Clanton. They are of excellent flavor, good size and well matured. He says he has a number of trees in bearing and will have others coming in each year for a number of years

Mr. Candler has a fortune in store. Strange that more of our people do not raise more pecans and less cotton.

MY LADY OF DOUBT

BY RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "Love Under Fire," "My Lady of the Northwest"

COPYRIGHT, A.C. McCLURG & CO., 1911

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances.

CHAPTER XIV.

Again the Lady.

I must think rapidly, and act as quickly. Yet, if what Grant had said was true, that he had already posted guards on each side the house, then escape by daylight was practically impossible. From all I could see there was no concealment close at hand, and while the fellows were without arms, yet their numbers were sufficient to make any attempt at running their lines extra hazardous. And I had much at risk, for if taken it would be as a spy, and not a mere prisoner of war. There was no place for concealment in the library, but there might be upstairs, in the attic, or on the roof. The chance was worth the trial, and there could be no better time for such an experiment than while the three officers were at breakfast. Whatever servants remained about the house would be busily employed also, and probably I should have the entire upper portion to myself. Deciding to make the venture I had my hand on the knob of the door, when it was opened quietly from without, and I was startled by the sudden appearance of Peter. Whatever excitement may have prevailed among the other members of this peculiar household this model servitor remained with dignity unruffled. He surveyed me calmly, rubbing his bald head with one hand.

"You will pardon the delay, sir," he said calmly. "But circumstances have arisen changing the original plans. Will you kindly accompany me?"

"But where, Peter? I don't wish to be seen by these new arrivals."

"Have no fear, sir," condescendingly, and with an authoritative wave of the hand. "The officers are at table, and will know nothing of our movements."

I followed meekly enough, and he led the way up the broad stairs to the second story, turning to the left in the upper hall, and coming to a pause before a partially opened door. A glimpse within made me deem it a music room, although I could see merely along one wall.

"You will enter, sir, while I return to the guests below."

With one glance into this perfectly expressionless countenance, half suspicious of some new trick, I stepped across the threshold. The curtains were drawn, and the room seemed dark after the sun-glare of the hall. I advanced a step or two, almost convinced the apartment was unoccupied, when a voice addressed me.

"Under more favorable conditions, Major Lawrence, it would give me pleasure to welcome you to the hospitalities of Elmhurst."

I swung about as on a pivot and saw her standing with one hand upon the high back of a chair, her blue eyes smiling merrily. I felt the hot rush of blood to my cheeks, the quick throb of pulse, with which I recognized her. I was so surprised that, for the instant, the words I sought to utter choked in my throat.

"You have not suspected?" she asked. "You did not know this was my home?"

"Nothing was farther from my thoughts," I exclaimed hastily. "All I knew of your home was that it was situated somewhere in the Jerseys. But wait, perhaps I begin to understand—the lieutenant who brought me here, his voice has been echoing in my ears all night in familiarity. He is some near relative of yours—this Peter?"

"You are able to understand? You know the name although Captain Grant did not speak it?"

"Yes; I could not help hearing it during our ride. Peter had stationed me in the library, but there were portions of the conversation which I could not avoid hearing. Besides, I had my own suspicions as to the identity of the lieutenant."

"Why should I not? The voice was the same; at least sufficiently similar to deceive me, and he never addressed you in a way to arouse my suspicions. Is your brother named Eric?"

"Yes; I told you, did I not, that we are twins? The physical resemblance between us is very strong; no doubt our voices sound alike also, or would to a comparative stranger. Will you not be seated, Major? We shall not have long to converse, and there is much to be said before those downstairs complete their rather frugal meal—Peter has promised to delay serving as much as possible, but, as our larder is not extensive, at best it will not be long. You overheard Captain Grant's threat?"

"To search the house for your brother—yes."

"He will carry it out," quietly, her eyes, no longer smiling, on my face. "There has never been friendship between those two, and of late my own relations with Captain Grant have become very unpleasant. I think he is almost glad of an opportunity to thus exercise some authority over me. He is the kind of a man who must either rule or ruin. Convinced that Eric is concealed here, he will search the house as much to spite me as for any other reason. I should only laugh at him, but for your presence."

"Then your brother is not here?"

"Certainly not; Eric is in no danger—but, Major Lawrence, you are."

The earnestness with which she spoke made my heart leap. Whatever the girl's political sentiments might be, she was plainly desirous of serving me, of once again exposing herself in my defense. Yet her words, the frank expression of her eyes, gave no suggestion of sentiment—she was but a friend, an ally, performing a woman's part in the war game.

"But I fail to understand—"

"You mean me? Oh, well, you are not the first; and no doubt it is best so. The less you understand, the better we shall get along, Major; the only question being, will you obey my orders?"

"Had I inclination otherwise I fear I should find it impossible."

"I hardly know whether that remark be complimentary or not. You might mean that no other course was left you."

"Which I suspect is true, although if it proved so I should willingly trust myself to your guidance, because of my faith in you."

"That is much better," her eyes laughing, yet as swiftly sobering again. "But it is foolish of us to waste time in such silly speeches. There is too much waiting attention. Fortunately this house is not without its secrets, for when built by my grandfather this was the frontier."

"But does not Grant know?" I asked soberly. "I understood he played here as a boy, and there is not much a lad fails to learn."

"He is not without knowledge, surely, but here is something he never discovered. I would never have trusted him with the secret, and yet, as short a time as I have known you, I have no hesitancy. Isn't that a frank confession, sir?"

"One I mean you shall never regret."

"I am sure of that; yet I shall not betray everything even to you. Please face about with eyes to the front window. Yes, so; now do not look around until I tell you."

I heard her cross the room, her skirts rustling slightly, and then the faint clicking of some delicately adjusted mechanism. As this sound ceased, her voice again spoke.

"Now, Major, the way is opened for a safe retreat. Behold what has been accomplished by the 'soul of the lamp.'"

She was standing at one side of what had been the fireplace, but now the entire lower portion of the front chimney had been swung aside, revealing an opening large enough for the entrance of a man. Into the step forward in which I could perceive the beginning of a narrow, winding stair leading downward into utter darkness. Then I glanced quickly back at her.

Floorwalker Happily Able to Think of Quick Satisfactory Answer to the Inquiry.

"Silk stockings must be very cheap in America. Nowhere in the world do women's slim and supple ankles gleam in lustrous silk as they do here."

The speaker was Robert Loraine, the English actor. He continued:

"A married man told me the other day that, going into one of your department stores, he said to a floorwalker:

"'I'm looking for something pretty in silk stockings.'

"The floorwalker smiled, and with a gesture embraced the long rows of counters with their charming saleswomen.

"'That remark,' he said, 'describes, I believe, practically every one of our young ladies.'"

AWFUL ECZEMA ON FACE

Freeland, Md.—"Baby's eczema started in little spots and would burst and run all over his face and wherever the water would touch his face, it would make another sore. Pimples would break out and make his face sore and inflamed, and he was very cross and fretful. It was awful. He suffered tortures from it, and we had to tie mittens on his hands to keep him from scratching. A friend of mine told me of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I went to a drug store and bought them.

"When we would bathe his face with the Cuticura Soap and apply the Cuticura Ointment, he would be much better. He would wake up in the nights and cry with his face and we would put on some of the Cuticura Ointment and then he would rest all night. They have cured him completely of the eczema." (Signed) Mrs. Harry Wright, Mar. 21, 1912.

No Broken Parts.

During the progress of the morning bath of a few months old infant a little neighbor girl came into the room carrying a doll and stood watching the operation for some time. The little girl's doll was much the worse for hard usage, being minus an arm and a leg. Finally she said to the mother of the child:

"How long have you had your baby?"

The child was informed, and, looking from her doll to the baby, she said:

"My, but you have kept it nice."—National Monthly.

"I was very happy," said the professor, "when, after years of wooing, she finally said, 'Yes.'"

"Really?" said the friend. "How did that happen?"

"It was due to my accursed absent-mindedness. When, a few days later, I called at her home, I again asked her to marry me."—Youth's Companion.

England's Motto.

"Dieu et Mon Droit"—God and My Right"—the royal motto of England, was the parole of the day given by Richard I. (he of the Lion Heart) to his army at the battle of Gisors, in France, on the 20th of September, 1198, when the French army was signally defeated. Dieu et Mon Droit appears to have been first assumed as a motto by Henry VI., 1422-1462. Semper Idem—"Always the Same"—was one of the mottoes of Queen Elizabeth; also adopted by Queens Mary and Anne.

Accepts the Rebuke.

A resident of an English city has made himself a marked man by insisting on saying "nought" instead of "O" when he calls a telephone number having ciphers in it. The telephone operator usually corrects him when he says "three double nought" by saying "Three double O." The other night he called up central and said, "Hello," and the girl replied: "Hell-nought." He accepted meekly the "quiet rebuke."—Springfield Republican.

BABY'S HAPPINESS DEPENDS ON HEALTH

When your baby is cross and fretful instead of the happy, laughing little dear you are accustomed to, in all probability the digestion has become disarranged and the bowels need attention. Give it a mild laxative, dispel the irritability, and bring back the happy content of babyhood.

The mother should make sure that the laxative used contains no opiate or narcotic drug. A mild, pleasant-tasting, harmless laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is ideal for children because of its natural composition and gentle action. A small dose of Syrup Pepsin at bedtime will bring easy, certain relief next morning, and with no distressful griping or other discomfort. You can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store. Your name and address on a postal to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 West St., Monticello, Ill., will bring a free trial bottle by return mail. Adv.

BACKACHE "GETS ON THE NERVES"

Many who suffer from backache and weak kidneys are unnaturally irritable, fretful and nervous. Not only does constant backache "get on the nerves", but bad kidneys fail to eliminate all the uric acid from the system, and uric acid irritates the nerves, keeping you "on edge" and causing rheumatic, neuralgic pains. Doan's Kidney Pills cure these ills by curing the kidneys. Here's proof:

A North Carolina Case:

Mrs. J. W. Wilkinson, Statesville, N.C., says: "I suffered acutely from bladder inflammation and almost total suppression of kidney secretions. My usual weight was 140 lbs., but I had run down to 90. Doctors said an operation was my only hope but would not consent and was given up to die. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me completely."

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Now that the election is over and the result ascertained, let all get together and work for the upbuilding of Chilton County. Let not politics so divide us that we cannot work for the material development of our county.

Congressman Blackmon's election, by an increased majority, is assured; though he did not carry Chilton county, he made a gallant fight in the county and carried the district by an overwhelming vote.

There is one thing over which the democrats of Chilton can rejoice with exceeding great joy. While we lost the county ticket, we did not lose a single office which we had for they were all held by republicans previous to the election. If we had succeeded in electing a single man on the ticket it would have been just that much gained; and, while we regret losing the county ticket, we are in position to rejoice over the fact that we reaped an abundant harvest in the election of Wilson and Marshall, in the return of Fred L. Blackmon to Congress and in the triumphant election of every state officer. Look it all over boys; we are in no worse shape today than we were Monday, in so far as the county ticket is concerned, and we have the President, the house of Representatives and the Senate.

Hurrah for democracy anyway!

We acknowledge as gracefully as we can that the Progressives put it up on the democrats in Chilton; this is greatly to be regretted in the face of the tremendous vote received by the democrats in every other section of the country. Mr. Wilson has been elected President by one of the largest popular and electoral votes ever given a candidate for that office; in almost every instance democrats have been returned to Congress and a considerable gain has been made by the party in that particular branch of the government; three, perhaps four, United States Senators have been gained by the democrats; the state and district officers have been elected by large majorities. It was left to poor little Chilton to give the democrats a black eye.

Well, we've suffered in that direction before and can stand it again if necessary.

The democratic party of Chilton and the Press have often been accused by the republicans and progressives of trickery and deception. During the closing days of the campaign, progressive orators all over the county were verbose in their warning to look out for "tricks" by the Press and the democrats. They seemed to fear that the Press would print some additional truths that would injure their prospects. We stated in the beginning that we were going to make as clean a campaign as the progressives would permit us to make; we stuck to that assertion; we said nothing to injure the feelings of anyone; we did nothing to reflect upon anyone and wrote no word, every syllable of which cannot be substantiated by records; we attempted no "tricks" for we believe that the best way to win the confidence and the votes of the people is at all times to tell the TRUTH and never to even TRY to DECEIVE. Can the progressives say as much? If so how will they explain the publication last week of a statement, showing that the General Fund of the county had nothing to its credit, when in fact there was EIGHTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS lying in the bank belonging to this fund? How will they explain this to the "dear people" whom they have gulled? To say that this money was in the hands of the Tax Collector and had not been turned over to the Treasurer is no explanation, the people wont stand for that. Not much! The money belonged to the COUNTY—to the GENERAL FUND too—no matter in whose possession it was at the time that statement was published. IT WAS IN BANK BELONGING TO THE COUNTY, mind you, and yet the statement showed that the fund was exhausted. Had the democrats published such a statement no words would have been vile enough to be used in denunciation of such deception; had the Probate Judge [a democrat] made such a statement he would have been ostracised and looked upon as a traitor to the people; had the Press man published such a statement, as facts, he would have been ridden on a rail.

Will the people stand for such deceptions? Will they continue to follow the leadership of men who will perpetrate such deceptions?

Why was not that money deposited to the CREDIT of the GENERAL FUND just BEFORE election day?—It was lying Idle in the bank.—WHY?

The people cannot always be deceived by such trickery. Now wasn't that a beautiful, a manly trick to play upon the people, at a time when they were looking to their officers to treat them with absolute fairness and candor?

How long, oh, how long will they stand these deceptions without murmering?

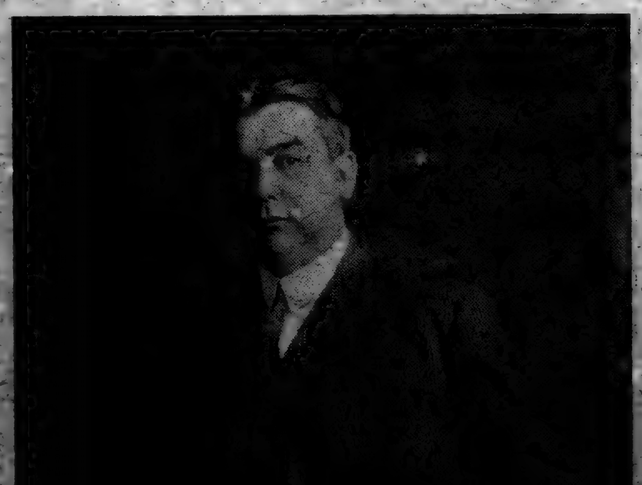
That trick will long be remembered by the voters of Chilton; of this everyone who had a hand in it may rest assured: "You can fool all of the people some of the time and some of the people all the time, but you cant fool all the people all the time" said Abe Lincoln.

Chilton county progressives will find this to be true, to their sorrow.

It now appears that Wilson will secure twice as many electoral votes as Roosevelt and Taft combined—and then some. The popular vote will be equally as large.

Well, who wouldn't swap Chilton county for the United States? Who?

Let not the progressives ever again speak of FRAUDS, DECEPTIONS and LAST DAY circulars; let them remember the $11,000.00 deposit on the last days of the old republican administration; let them be mindful of the Honeycutt letter in the closing days of the campaign of 1910; let them recall the withholding of county funds in 1912 till after a statement had been issued which grossly deceived the people. Let them REMEMBER—for assuredly the people WILL remember. TRICKS, RASCALITY, DECEPTIONS? Bah!



The Bull Moose party was so badly defeated that it now has no foundation on which to build. To what party will they now go? They have no national head, no senators or representatives and consequently cannot look to Washington for advice or favors; they are without a representative in any congressional or state senatorial district and without a single official in the state house, consequently they cannot look to state officers for aid or comfort; they need not look to district (congressional or senate); where then will they turn? To whom will they apply? Echo answers:—WHERE?

Will the Tax Collector please explain what he did with the check of the LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD CO., which was paid to him on Wednesday, OCTOBER 23rd; for the sum of TWENTY-TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for taxes?

It was deposited in bank on Wednesday, October 23rd, (ten days or more before the election, one week and more before the publication of the Treasurer's statement. WHAT went with that TWENTY-TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS? Please explain; the people want to KNOW?

If the treasury was "busted" what went with this TWENTY-TWO THOUSAND? If it was not "busted" why was not this TWENTY-TWO THOUSAND shown in the statement? If the Tax Collector had that money (and he did) and the treasury was busted, was it not the part of a good official to come to the "rescue" when he had so many dollars belongtng to the county?

Some investigation along this line would not be out of place, it seems.

FEARFUL ACCIDENT

Just as we go to press news comes of a most frightful accident which happened in the eastern part of the county Thursday.

The children of Mr. Ross Aycock were playing with a lantern during the afternoon and spilled oil from the lantern upon the floor; one of the children lighted the oil and while it was burning Myrtis, the seven year old daughter, went too close to the flames; her dress was ignited and before assistance could reach her she was horribly burned. L & N

OUR CITIZENSHIP

For the last fiscal year, "L. & N." properties bear between five and six per cent. of the property taxes accruing to the State of Alabama, although its lines traverse only portions of thirty-one of the sixty-seven counties of the State. And it would be surprising to consider what a large proportion of the revenues of the principal counties traversed by L. & N. Lines is paid by the "L. & N.," if the limits of this article permitted the consideration of this data.

As a tax payer of this magnitude and importance, the "L. & N." considers itself thoroughly identified with the welfare of the State, and entitled to the rights, privileges and protection accorded to tax-paying citizens of the State. The officials of the road believe that other tax payers, who give thoughtful consideration to the matter, will agree with this view.

It is apparent on the face of it that continual agitation to prejudice the public against the L. & N., coupled with the increased cost of operation, enormous tax payments and ever decreasing freight and passenger rates will seriously cripple the L. & N. and interfere with its service.

The people of Alabama demand, and are entitled to, good service. As their fellow-citizen, the L. & N. is exerting its every effort to meet that demand. But the effort is met with increasing opposition by some of those most insistent that the service be supplied. They make a demand, and then do all in their power to prevent the demand being complied with.

The suggestion has been made that the L. & N. is used as a fictitious issue; that the agitation has been continued to supply self-seeking individuals an opportunity to pose before the people as laboring with might and main in the interests of the people.

This suggestion does not apply to that great body of thoughtful, fair-minded citizens for whom and with whom the L. & N. worked long before the present agitation was started, and for whom and with whom the L. & N. will work long after the agitators have been forgotten.

We believe a big majority of the people understand the situation. We do not believe a majority of the people favor an agitation detrimental to the business interests of many substantial tax payers of the State.

Anniston.—A letter from some one to whom his wife objected cost Geo. James $115. A quarrel over the letter, followed by blows, caused the arrest of James and the officers found a pistol on his person. He was fined and there will be costs in addition to that.

DEMOPOLIS FINANCES.

Demopolis.—The financial condition of the city of Demopolis is very gratifying to its people. Under the administration of the present mayor the debt of the city was decreased over $8,000, the rate of interest on the remaining indebtedness was decreased, much grading and improvement of streets was accomplished, the school appropriation was increased, and many other improvements of a substantial nature were made.

HURT IN CHEMICAL PLANT.

Talladega.—Andrew Craighead, an employe of the chemical plant, was struck by a piece of iron [illegible] and badly wounded [illegible] not fatally.

BOOTH TO VISIT BIRMINGHAM

Present Head of Salvation Army and Son of the Late General Booth to Make Tour of United States.

Birmingham.—Birmingham will be visited the first Sunday in December by General Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America, and son of the noted General Booth who died recently. He will preach at the Southside Baptist church. He is on a general tour of the United States, visiting every place where there is a branch of the Volunteers.

CARRY LARGE CARGO.

Mobile.—Thirteen thousand, three hundred bales of cotton were shipped out of Mobile in the holds of the British steamer Glendone and Iriston, bound for French and German ports. The shipments were the largest for the year for a single day. The Iriston had as her cargo 6,563 square and 700 round bales of cotton. The Glendone had 6,200 bales of cotton.

CARGO OF COTTON SEED CAKE.

Mobile.—With an exclusive cargo of cotton seed cake, the steamship Norden sailed from Mobile for Aarhus, Denmark. The cargo was brought to Mobile over the Mobile and Ohio and Southern Railroads. The cargo is in 200 pound sacks and totals 9,433,740 pounds. The cake will be used in feeding cattle. Another cargo will be sent out in the near future.

MAY MEET PERMANENTLY.

Birmingham.—The Alabama State Land congress, to be held in Mobile November 12, 13 and 14, probably will be made a permanent organization to meet annually, and in this case probably will meet in Birmingham in 1913. That such a movement was under way was stated by Secretary W. C. Radcliffe of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce.

NEW SCHOOL PROPOSED.

Anniston.—A new school is in the process of organization at Wellington, this county, on the crossing of the Seaboard and Louisville and Nashville railroads. The people of the town became dissatisfied with a ruling of the county board and will have an independent school in their own building.

TWENTY-FIVE STORY BUILDING

Birmingham.—It was announced the new Jefferson County bank building will be 25 stories high instead of 22 stories as formerly planned. This, it is stated, will give Birmingham the highest building south of Washington, by several feet.

NEGRO DESPERADO KILLED.

Bessemer.—Barricaded in a private residence, a negro giving the name of Will Smith was riddled with bullets in a battle with a mob of infuriated citizens and officers of the law. Over 100 shots were fired.

The miniature "battle" followed the fatal wounding by the negro of Bessemer City Detective Frank Childers in the rear of Tery Brothers' pawn shop, 103 Nineteenth street.

Childers lies mortally wounded at the Robinson hospital with two 41 calibre bullets in the body, the negro lies dead at the morgue of the Kennedy Undertaking establishment.

TALLADEGA MILLS INSANITARY.

Montgomery. — Complaint concerning the sanitary condition of Talladega County Cotton Mills is being made in a report which P. P. Hudson, Assistant State Mill Inspector, is compiling, covering the results of a trip of inspection. Condition of the Central Mills of Sylacauga and the Talladega Hosiery Mills, of Talladega, is commended by the inspector, but arrangements for sanitation at the following mills are declared to be not good: Marble City Mills, Sylacauga; Highland City Mills, Talladega Cotton Factory Chinabee Mills, Talladega; Sycamore Mills at Sycamore, Munford Mills at Munford.

It is not likely that prosecution will be undertaken in the instance of any of the concerns. No violations of the child labor law or of other regulations governing mill operations were noted by the inspector.

NEGRO BROUGHT BACK.

Talladega. — The city infirmary and hospital has been purchased by Drs. B. B. Simms. The capital stock of the infirmary company is $5,000.

CITY INFIRMARY SOLD.

Selma.—Sheriff H. H. Randall, of Dallas county, brought back J. Tesco, wanted in the east west on charge of murder. The negro was arrested in Birmingham.

OTTOMAN EMPIRE ASKS MEDIATION

APPLICATION MADE TO EMBASSIES IN CONSTANTINOPLE AND IN CIRCULAR NOTE.

TURKS ADMIT THEIR DEFEAT

CHIEF EVENTS IN BALKAN WAR.

October 8.—Montenegro declares war against Turkey.

October 12.—Montenegrins invest Tarabosch.

October 14—Montenegrins take Tushi.

October 15—Turco-Italian war ends.

October 22—Servians take Pristina.

October 23—Servians take Novipazari.

October 24—Bulgarians capture town of Servia.

October 25—Servians take Kumanova and other Turkish cities.

October 26—Servians capture Uskup; Montenegrins invest Scutari.

October 17—Bulgarians capture Eski-Baba, near Adrianople.

October 30—Bulgarians capture Luleburgas.

November 1—Bulgarians occupy Demotici cutting communication between Adrianople and Constantinople, Greek torpedo sinks Turkish cruiser.

November 2—Turks driven back in three day battle to Tchorc.

November 3—Turks in full retreat on Constantinople. Porte asks for mediation by the powers.

Constantinople.—The porte has applied to the powers for mediation with a view to cessation of hostilities and for the negotiation of peace. Application has been made to the embassies here and by circular to the Ottoman representatives in the European capitals.

The Turkish army is retreating to the last line of fortifications outside the capital. This was in the first bulletin admitting defeat in the great battle, which the government has issued.

"The fortunes of war are variable and it is not always possible to be successful on all sides. A people which accepts war must submit with resignation to all its consequences. To overlook this obligation is to fail in one's duty. Consequently, while it would be wise to be unnecessarily proud over victories, it likewise would be incorrect to be alarmed at want of success.

"For instance, in the war with the four federated states the imperial troops are defending themselves within the environs of Scutari and Janina, but the eastern army around Luleburgas felt obliged to retire to the lines of defense.

"In order to facilitate a successful defense it has naturally been decided to exert all efforts to safeguard the interests of the fatherland."

In compliance with the request made by the embassadors of the great powers, the porte has granted them permission to send one warship each through the Dardanelles.

The fighting south of Luleburgas was of the most murderous character. The Turks offered splendid resistance, but were overwhelmed by the Bulgarian artillery fire.

There the Turkish troops intend to make a supreme effort to save the capital. Reports place the Turkish loss at more than 30,000 killed or wounded.

Recent announcements had led the people here to believe that the tide was turning in favor of the Turkish army. The present announcement is intended to break the bad news gently. The porte's application to the powers for mediation is not known to the public but it is believed that this action would be approved by the great majority of citizens.

NEITHER HAYSEED NOR ANGEL

But There Need Be Little Question That Young Lady Had Much Ingenuity.

Across the line on the Kansas side where the study of agriculture is compulsory, one of the high school girls took home her monthly report card and proudly announced:

"I took the highest grade in the class in history, English literature and German."

"That's all very well," replied her father, critically examining the card, "but how about this grade in agriculture?"

"Oh, well," explained the daughter, "I'm no hayseed!"

A little farther down a deportment grade, not altogether satisfactory, appeared.

"And how do you account for this grade in deportment?" he inquired.

"I'm no bloomin' angel, either," she replied.—Kansas City Star.

Situation Vacant.

The rich bachelor sighed and looked fixedly at the beautiful girl.

"Things with me," he said, "are at sixes and sevens. I feel the great need of a woman in my home—one who would straighten out my tangled affairs and make life worth living once again.

Her soft glance spoke her excitement and expectation.

"Yes?" she queried gently.

"Do you know," he continued, "of any good, able-bodied woman whom I could get to clean the house?"

Fond Memories.

"Baggs is such an ugly man, Miss Prettyface, that I cannot understand why he seems to interest you so."

"Of course, you can't, but with his dogged expression and his pug nose, he reminds me so much of my pet terrier."

He said ...about Wilson and the dem... ...no, not he; he was too everlastingly prejudiced to give credit where he actually thought credit was due. He was perfectly willing to "cuss" the democrats, but unwilling and too narrow to say a kind word about them for having brought "prosperity" to his home.

Another old jaundiced-eyed individual, when he heard that cotton had advanced several points since the election, remarked, "Well, I'm not surprised, it's Mr. Taft's doings, he's going to show the country what he can do 'twixt now and the time he goes out of office."

This old rooster turned his back on Taft and voted the Bull Moose ticket, yet when he received a substantial benefit he was willing to give the republican party—the party he fought with might and main—credit for something with which neither democrats, republicans, progressives, socialists or prohibitionists had one particle to do.

It was merely the law of supply and demand which advanced the price of cotton and neither Wilson, Taft or Roosevelt had any more to do with it than the veriest little coon in the oak trees of Central America.

There was another amusing little incident whispered about the streets in connection with the election.

A certain farmer went into a certain store with a cotton sample and asked what the market quotations were for the day. The merchant looked him in the eye and said "Wilson has been elected, you know, and cotton has gone down to Cleveland prices."

The farmer took it seriously, looked like a scared calf and walked out. Later during the day he was berating the democrats and letting off quite a bit of his hot air theories of government; while he was talking another merchant walked up and asked what he had been offered for his cotton. "Oh, the devil," said he, "I'm going to take my cotton back home and wait till I get a decent price for it." He was asked what he considered a decent price, and replied that not less than ten cents would be considered decent.

"Well," said the merchant, "I'll give you twelve cents." The old cuss looked at the merchant, gave him the sample and receipt, took his money and walked off without saying one word in commendation of the democrats "for raising the price of cotton," but he was loud mouthed for condemning them for having—as he thought—lowered the price.

We might mention a dozen or more of such cases, but what's the use? This class of people are so blinded by prejudice that they will not see; so hobbled and hog-tied to a one man rule that they would not be free if they had the opportunity; so warped with venom that they will not seek the truth even when it is presented at their doors.

What explanation will the "leaders" give for the advance in cotton? We are anxious to know.

A HANDSOME CALENDAR

One of the swellest calendars seen by the Press man for the coming year is that being presented by Messrs. Sanford & Driver, the enterprising barbers. It is a long panel picture and would grace any office. Thanks, young men, for your kind remembrance.

Mr. F. H. Patterson of Montgomery was circulating among Clanton friends on last Tuesday.

Mr. I. Gordon, for quite a while a citizen of Clanton, but now residing in Birmingham, came down Tuesday on business.

Miss Lilah Anderson of Talladega has accepted a position as clerk in the public school at Clanton.

ED MARTIN NOT OF THEM

In a recent issue of the Press was an article telling of the attempted jail delivery on the part of the prisoners in the Chilton county jail. The article did not give the names of those who were implicated in the affair and the impression has gone out that Mr Ed Martin, charged with the murder of Mr. C. W. Cox, was one of those implicated.

In justice to Mr. Martin we wish to state that he was in no wise connected with the attempt, but was quietly sleeping in his cell while the work of sawing the prison bars was going on and knew nothing of the plans till awakened by the Sheriff.

A Few Words to My Evil Minded Friends in Thorsby.

To the so-called Christian People of Thorsby:

It is my privilege as well as my duty to infor them evil minded people of Thorsby that my daughter, Evangeline, is not in a reform school and does not need to be there. I want to give the women of Thorsby—not the LADIES—to understand that as a mother I am making a great sacrifice financially to keep my daughter in a girls' training school for the next two or three years. I also wish to inform them that it is through the instrumentality of one of the best and most influential men of Birmingham that she has been placed in the good hands and under the Christian protection that she is. I wish also to inform them that it was because of the love and kindly interest Dr. Eaves has in her that he persuaded her to go to school rather than work; there has been no force whatever used in putting her in school, she went of her own free will after Dr. Eaves showed her how much better it would be to have a good education. I wish also to inform them that she will come out of school a much finer woman and character than those who are so earnest in their endeavors to kick girls down the hill instead of helping them up. (Beware, mothers who have daughters of your own) I also wish to say it has been through the gossip and false reports of those connected with the long distance phone that this scandal arose and caused me the expense and inconvenience of making a night trip to Birmingham. If the patrons of the phone have to be scandalized the quicker the phone is put out of existence the better. I therefore ask the people of Thorsby to keep their mouth shut in relation to my affairs. I am not asking any of them to interfere with my business, I am capable of looking after my own, both mentally and financially.

Sincerely,
L. E. Simonton,
Thorsby.

CARD OF THANKS

Now that the election is over and, while I was defeated and the democratic ticket lost in Chilton County, certainly a great democratic victory has been won in the nation, which should encourage those who have stood the storms of many winters and given the democratic ticket their loyal support in the election in Chilton county. To you loyal and true friends I am grateful for the support given me and for anything done in my behalf before and during the election. I appreciate the fact that you did not desert me in my defeat, but stood by me to the last. Now that the election is over, let us lay aside all political feelings and pull together, as men should, for the cause, the progress, upbuilding and betterment of our county, for the good of all.

Again thanking you who stood by me with your help and support, I am,

Yours respectfully,
W. A. KEMP.

INDUSTRIES FOR CLANTON

A PULL TOGETHER MIGHT LAND THEM.

Dr. Earl Gowan informed the Press man several days since that he was busily engaged in trying to locate three small industries for Clanton.

He said that he was practically assured that all would come if proper encouragement was given by the citizenship of the town.

Just what these industries are may not be wise to tell yet—it might interfere with Dr. Gowan's plans somewhat, but we are free to say, that they are industries which are badly needed in Clanton. Each would employ several "hands," thus giving us each week a cash pay roll to be expended in the town, besides building up our city.

THORSBY NEWS

Mrs. S. H. Herbert has been removed from the sanitarium in Birmingham to the Hopkins infirmary in Clanton. Her improvement is very slow.

The new dormitory for the boys of the High school is being erected at the present time.

Rev. Butler preached at the Congregational church Sunday morning.

Mr. W. B. Tomlin has just returned from a trip to Mississippi.

The Commercial Club of Thorsby met Tuesday night of this week for the purpose of organizing.

Dr. Posey and family have come to dwell with us. The Dr. will practice medicine here.

Mr. P. K. Villadsen is in the North on a business trip.

Thorsby is on the progressive list, every house in town is occupied.

THE POST OFFICE

APPLICANTS BY THE SCORE.

Congressman Blackmon will have no difficulty in finding some one ready to accept the Postmastership at Clanton should that office be declared vacant when the new administration takes charge.

Scarcely had the newspapers announced the election of Wilson and Marshall before half a dozen applicants were on the streets announcing their candidacy. The office is one of the best in the gift of the genial Congressman and no doubt he will go slowly in announcing to whom he will give the luscious plum.

Mr. Dudley, the present incumbent, has held the office for more than ten years and has made an enviable record as a postmaster, were he on the winning side he would, without doubt, receive the endorsement of the business men of Clanton for re-appointment; but being caught in the great landslide he will, of course, have to walk the plank, as will numbers of other federal office holders all over the country.

However, the appointment will probably be made [illegible]

SCARLET FEVER

LITTLE MISS HOPKINS STRICKEN.

While there is no cause for serious alarm, nevertheless, mothers should be more or less careful with the little ones for the next few weeks. Wednesday morning little Miss Frances Hopkins developed a genuine case of scarlet fever. From whom the infection was caught has not yet been ascertained, but it is practically certain that some little school child imparted the fever to little Francis; perhaps some one who did not feel sick enough to discontinue school or take to the bed.

Physicians are now trying to locate the orignal case and will do all that is possible to exterminate the disease. In the meantime quarantine and disinfectants will be employed. Mothers should caution their little ones to avoid those homes where the flag of infectuous disease is displayed.

FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Hon. Robt. H. Mangum of Selma, than whom no better democrat ever lived, is an applicant for District Attorney for the Southern district of Alabama. Mr. Mangum is a brilliant orator, a finished scholar and a first-class lawyer. He has devoted much of his time and attention to the Wilson campaign, speaking for several weeks for the national ticket in New York, New Jersey and Connecticutt, where he did effective work. No one in the Southern district is more deserving than is Mr. Mangum and the Press takes pleasure in giving to him its unqualified endorsement and in wishing that he may succeed in landing the office which he so richly deserves.

"DID YOU KNOW?"

That no person ever knew a thing (secret or what not) but what they finally told it to some one? Then we kindly ask you just to call in Higgins' Jewelry store in Clanton and see the hundreds of beautiful Christmas presents. That's all, we believe, will be necessary for Higgins to do a big Christmas business, 'cause if you see all the fine presents you are sure not to keep it a secret.

Mr. Huey Hayes is resting well following an operation for appendicitis at the Hopkins infirmary.

Mrs. S. H. Herbert of Thorsby who has been under treatment at the Hopkins infirmary for the past two weeks, is improving slowly, much to the gratification of her many friends.

Miss McDavid of Bluff City, Fla., has accepted a position with attorneys Middleton & Reynolds as stenographer.

The following marriage licenses were issued this week:

Mr. J. W. Wilson and Miss Lela Mae Collum,

Mr. H. E. Crim and Miss Sarah Virgin,

Mr. C. C. Hayes and Miss Perdita Eiland,

Mr. E. E. Williams and Miss Eva Driver.

BLACKMON'S MAJORITIES

No doubt Chilton feels [illegible] over the election returns as far as this county is concerned; doubtless many of them thought that as Chilton went so goes the Union, but the next morning many of them awoke to the fact that as the Union went Chilton was left in the lurch, enjoying the distinction of being the only county which did not go democratic except poor little [illegible] ridden Shelby.

As for the district, [illegible] Blackmon didn't need Chilton, nevertheless Chiltonites will be the first to call upon our congressman for favors.

Truth About Old Age.

George F. Baer, the famous Philadelphia railroad man, said on his seventieth birthday:

"I agree with Professor Metchnikoff about the wisdom of the old. Professor Osler made it fashionable to decry gray hairs, but my experience has been that the old not only possess wisdom, but they seek it also."

With a smile Mr. Baer added:

"The only people who think they are too old to learn are those who really are too young."

SKIN DISEASE ON FACE

Barthell, Ky.—"I had a skin disease on my face, neck and hands that tormented me all the time and when I would get hot the places would burn so that I had to keep my face wet in cold water. It began as pimples and indeed it was disfiguring, for it would get in spots on my face and hands as large as a quarter of a dollar. It would get into blisters sometimes and I sure did suffer. My face burned all the time. It was this way so bad for about six years and I tried everything that I could hear of, but nothing did any good.

"One day I found the Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised and ordered some at once. I would wash my face good with the Cuticura Soap and then apply the Cuticura Ointment and they have cured me. It would take half a tablet to tell all I suffered in those six years." (Signed) Mrs. Della Hill, Jan. 3, 1912.

All this over emphasis of the unessential surface is due to a confusion of newspaper and literary standards, aims. The word literary has come to suggest an absence of red-blood; sewers and knitters in the sun; the scant magazine crowd; this is nonsensical, of course. In its elemental meaning literature is at least as stern a job as journalism, albeit the intention and function of the latter is merely to present things that happen, of the former to volatilize such material as hovering and potent meanings, to strike the rock and raise a spirit that lives.

FOURTEEN KILLED; NINETY INJURED

FIVE OF DEAD ARE WHITE AND REMAINDER ARE NEGROES.

NEGLIGENCE OF FLAGMAN

Pathetic Stories of Ghastly Horror, Told By Survivors of Wreck.

New Orleans, La.—Fourteen lives were snuffed out and 90 passengers injured when a through freight train crashed into the rear end of a northbound excursion train on the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad near Montz.

The appalling disaster is charged by the railroad officials to the negligence of a flagman named Cunningham, who disappeared when the two trains crashed together.

Of the dead four are white women, one a white infant, four negro women and five negro men.

Forty-one of the injured are white and forty-nine negroes.

It is expected that all of these, except possibly three, will recover.

Although the scene of the wreck is but 27 miles north of New Orleans and relief trains were sent from this city and from Baton Rouge, the railroad officials withheld from the press information of the wreck until a late hour.

An amazing feature of the wreck was that the loss of life was confined almost entirely to the last and fourth from the last coaches of the excursion train. The second from the rear coach escaped injury almost completely. The excursion train was made up of ten coaches, with negroes occupying all but the two rear coaches.

The rear coach was demolished and the third and fourth cars were telescoped. All three, together with the freight engine, were burned.

Pathetic stories of the ghastly horror were brought to New Orleans by survivors, many of whom barely escaped death. The confusion and excitement incident to the distressing scenes of death and suffering was increased by the cries and exclamations of the hundreds of negroes who ran about in a panic stricken condition.

A few of the negroes were self possessed and lent their earnest aid to the heroic efforts of white passengers to save from the flames those pinioned beneath the wreckage, but most of them ran wildly about, shrieking, shouting and praying.

Mrs. Thomas McGinness, wife of a New Orleans plumber, was killed and her husband and two small babies are in a local hospital. Three of the other dead among the white victims were relatives and neighbors of Zachary, La.

Of the injured, 46 were brought to New Orleans for medical treatment and 44 were taken to Baton Rouge or to their homes.

The Louisiana railroad commission telegraphed to the interstate commerce commission to join in an investigation of the wreck.

A MAINE CASE.

S. C. Verrill, Old Town, Me., says: "I was confined to bed two years, and the doctors did not know what ailed me. My back pained intensely and the kidney secretions were very irregular. The doctor said I would never walk again. After taking Doan's Kidney Pills I rapidly improved until once more in good health. I cannot express my gratitude."

Built Her Own Home.

Miss Francis Lyon of Westwood has the distinction of being the only woman in New England who lives in a house literally built with her own hands. Miss Lyons belongs to a club whose members are practicing the doctrine of going back to the farm. The club is limited to 40 members and owns property to the amount of $1,000 and about 70 acres of farming land not far from Westwood. Each member holds a deed to one acre and the balance of the land is held in common to be rented to any member who wishes to try farming on a larger scale.

English Stump Speech.

A correspondent, "Old Briney," sends us the following specimen of frenzied stump oratory: "Foller blokes! Thanks ter th' guv'ment, yer got yer d'minishin' wake, and yer little loaf, an' all that. Wotcher got ter do now is ter go fer devil-cotton and local anatomy, an' go it blind!" (Loud cheers.)—London Globe.

Escaped the Worst of It.

The worst things are the afflictions that have never happened. Bobby had just been soundly spanked for falling into the creek. "Gee!" he exclaimed, rubbing the seat of punishment, "what wouldn't I have got if I had drowned?"

House Plans Important.

The care in the home and all other forms of household work are greatly facilitated by right planning and the use of suitable materials for the construction and furnishing of the home. An adequate and convenient water supply and other conveniences are essential, not only for comfort and for saving labor, but also from the standpoint of home hygiene.

Scotch Query.

A bluff, consequential gentleman from the south, with more beef on his bones than brain in his head, riding along the Hamilton road, near to Blantyre, asked a herdboy on the roadside, in a tone and manner evidently meant to quiz, if he were "halfway to Hamilton?" "Man," replied the boy, "I wad need to ken whar ye hae come frae, afore I could answer your question."—Exchange.

Hard to See Under Water.

"There is no scientific instrument of the 'scope' character which enables one to see down to 50 or 60 feet under water. When the sun shines vertically over water, a box or bucket with a glass bottom is often used to look into the water. A cloth covering to exclude light from the box or bucket is sometimes employed. But without electric or some other light in the water these devices are not very satisfactory.

Probably Prize Grouch.

A grouchy butcher, who had watched the price of porterhouse steak climb the ladder of fame, was deep in the throes of an unusually bad grouch when a would-be customer, 8 years old, approached him and handed him a penny.

"Please, mister, I want a cent's worth of sausage."

Turning on the youngster with a growl, he let forth this burst of good salesmanship:

"Go smell o' the hook."—New Orleans Daily States.

Quite the Thing.

"I told you that if you came tomorrow morning I would give you the money for my wash. Why did you come tonight?" said Miss Philis to the daughter of her laundress.

"I know you said tomorrow mornin'," responded the girl, "but me mother she told me to come tonight, 'cause she was afraid you might be gone away by tomorrow mornin'."

"I certainly should not go without paying my laundry bill," said Miss Philis sharply. "No respectable woman would do such a thing."

"Oh, yes, ma'am, they would," replied the child knowingly. "There's lots of respectable ladies does."

Fashion Note.

Lady Duff Gordon, at a tea at the Ritz-Carlton, praised the pannier skirt.

"Everybody likes it, it is so graceful," she said, smiling. "Everybody likes it except crusty old fellows."

She turned to a crusty old fellow upon a Louis Seize chair beside her and continued:

"I know a woman whose husband growled at her when she tried on a new pannier gown for him:

"'I don't see why you wear those ridiculous big panniers. You haven't got the hips for 'em.'

"The woman blushed and let her skirts, she said gently:

"'Maybe you fill your milk bottles.'"

Paid Minister in Tinfoil.

The meanest man in the world has been found. He is the man who gave the Rev. Thilo Gore, pastor of the German Lutheran church, an envelope filled with tinfoil for marrying him.

The bride and groom rang Dr. Gore's doorbell late one night and asked him to marry them. As they had a license, he did so. After the ceremony was performed the man handed the minister an envelope which was supposed to contain the fee. He found it contained nothing but several pieces of tinfoil.—Chicago Tribune.

Doing His Part.

"What part are you taking in the war on flies?"

"I do sentry duty at the breakfast table over the milk pitcher every morning."

What a Question.

"There is use for everything."

"Huh! Has anyone ever found a sensible use for a phonograph?"

Win with Wilson? Well, we w[illegible]

Cribs didn't do a durn.

Chafin chafed but couldn't c[illegible]

Taft tumbled tremendously; terrible trial to the trusts.

Roosevelt ran readily, recklessly; results refused to revivify.

Where's the Treasurer's report anyway? It ought to be set out in full, now that the election is over. The "hold back" scheme has accomplished its purpose.

To do less than be honorable is to be dishonorable; to tell less than the truth is to tell a lie.

We, the people! Well, we are the people; at least everything and everybody but Oshkosh and Chilton county says so

Fred Blackmon didn't need Chilton to land him in Congress; he had men behind him who could read the signs of the times and were able to distinguish between a statesman and a politician.

We still register from Chilton, the best county in the state—agriculturally speaking—but when it comes to politics—Well, Chilton county is the limit.

A Treasurer's report should show ACTUAL facts, not surface dashes or the gloved hand of the politician. Its the people's money and they have a right to know where it is.

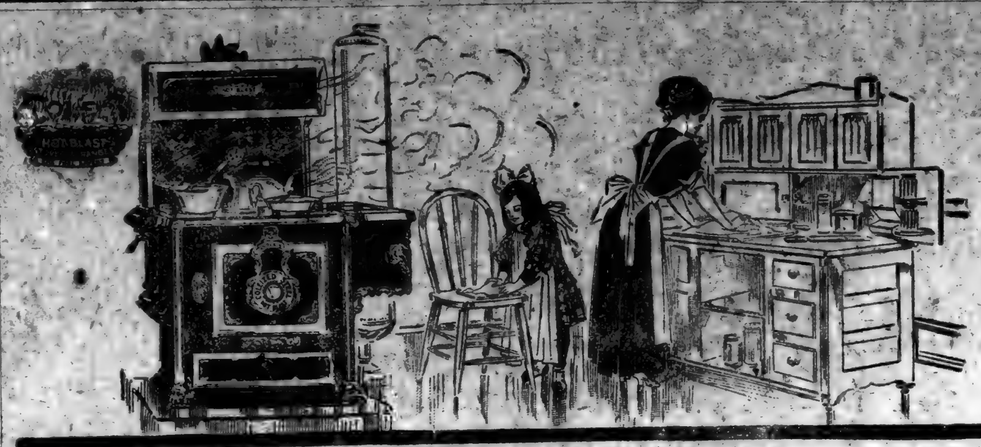
If "it is a sin to steal a pin,
And he is great who steals a state,"
How about a county? Just petit larceny?

Where did that eighteen thousand go? We ask because the people want to know.

If you had a hand in that dark scheme, don't you know Dennis will be your name?

It will perhaps take the official count to tell what else besides Chilton went the wrong way; certainly nothing but Shelby and Oshkosh.

The voters of Chilton should feel extremely proud of their record in the vote delivering feat. It out-distanced everything on earth but Oshkosh.



If Calhoun, Talladega, Cleburne and Dallas had gone as did Chilton and Shelby we might have had a short Probate Judge in Congress to tell us how to build forty thousand court houses at an expense of two hundred thousand, and how to construct roads such as they have in Shelby.

FOR SALE—60 acres of land situated three miles southwest of Clanton; two settlements and extra good well of water; 30 acres of open land; the garden spot of Chilton for productiveness. Apply to

A. L. Williams.

"Tells the Whole Story"

To say that Foley's Honey & Tar Compound is best for children and grown persons and contains no opiates tells only part of the tale. The whole story is that it is the best medicine for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and other affections of the throat, chest and lungs. Stops la grippe, cough and has a soothing effect. Remember the name, Foley's Honey & Tar Compound, and accept no substitutes. Alred Drug Co.

Baking Made a Pleasure With Cole's Hot Blast Range

You will be highly pleased with the results from the oven of Cole's Hot Blast Range. The oven is the most vital part of the range. If the oven is not satisfactory the range is worthless. A single sheet of boiler plate steel is used in constructing the oven. This extra thickness insures even baking and roasting. Bread bakes evenly and is not dried out. Roasts are not dried out, leaving the meat without flavor. Cheap, light steel ranges with light ovens are not a success—they do imperfect work and burn out quickly.

The oven is extra large in depth and height. It has two oven shelf slides, making the shelf adjustable, thus accommodating the largest roasts with room for other vessels when extra cooking is to be done. The one-piece fire back forms a part of the oven front. This is protected by a steel shield on inside of oven which causes the air in the oven to circulate and the oven is heated perfectly.

The Oven of Cole's Hot Blast Range will bake six loaves of light bread with less fuel than any range made. On account of the one-piece Coleized steel fire back and the Hot Blast Combustion you can bake a batch of light bread, using the fuel remaining after a heavy meal or other work has been finished.

Light bread should be allowed to bake from 45 to 60 minutes. The heat retained in the heavy material, the perfect control and the air-tight features, make it possible for you to bake in Cole's Hot Blast Range without the trouble of building an extra fire and overheating your kitchen. The oven can be heated quickly when required for biscuits or other baking which requires a quick oven. The bottom of the oven is corrugated, which strengthens it and insures a level oven bottom as long as the range is used.

Investigate this new, improved range. Remember, these improvements were made to please the cook, the housewife.

This is the Range with the Odorless Broiler Attachment.

COLLUM & HOBSON

OF JEMISON CLOSE THEIR DOORS.

News from Jemison states that on last Friday Collum & Hobson of Jemison closed their doors to the business world and retired from business. Just what the liabilities will amount to is not stated, nor could we learn the value of the resources. The two young men have not been in business very long, but we understand they did a "rushing" business while they were at it.

Perhaps we will be able to give more definite information next week. Mr. Collum is the son of the Postmaster at Jemison, while Mr. Hobson is the son-in-law of Mr. C. W. Reynolds, well-known throughout this county.

Is it the Hair or the Face that makes the Woman?

If you think it is the face take another look at the two heads pictured here. One shows a girl which the most critical would pronounce beautiful.
While her features are fairly perfect her greatest charm lies in a mass of fine lustrous hair. The opposite picture is identical as to features and other detail except that the wealth of hair is wanting.
Both of these ladies would attract attention anywhere but each for a different reason, one on account of her superb beauty and the other on account of her comical appearance.
The hair makes all the difference. A woman loses her good looks in exact proportion as she loses her hair.

L&N

THE DOUBLE BURDEN

Statisticians have been busy for some time demonstrating by figures which never lie that the cost of living has increased very materially in the last decade.

The increase in the cost of living has exacted an increase in the cost of every known article required in the operation of a railroad.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. has had to pay a proportionate increase in price for coal, steel rails, lumber for passenger and freight cars, locomotives, ties, right of way and labor.

Those laborers engaged in the manufacture of the articles referred to have secured an increase in wage scale; the manufacturers of those articles have demanded and secured an increased price for the finished product.

The wage scale along the line of the L. & N. has had to be increased to enable the employees of the L. & N. to meet the requirements of the increased cost of living.

And yet while the tendency of the times is ever on the increase, the only changes in freight and passenger rates of the L. & N. have been decreases. The officials of the company are confronted on the one hand with the serious problem of the ever-increasing cost of operation, and on the other hand with the more serious problems of the ever-persistent effort to decrease rates.

Careful management, economy of operation and maximum efficiency have enabled the L. & N. to shoulder the double burden. But the time has now arrived when a fair-minded public must be advised.

Any injustice imposed upon the L. & N.—a servant of the general public—is an injustice imposed upon the business interests of the general public.

To think of a railroad as a thing of steel rail tentacles, snorting engines, grease boxes and plush cushions—all without a soul—is wrong. The L. & N. is human—intensely so—and is confronted by those same human problems which confront every business man.

The effort to injure the L. & N. is a blow at the very vitals of the prosperity of the territory through which the road operates. We ask the public to give thoughtful consideration to existing conditions. Once those conditions are understood we are willing to rest our case. We have faith in the people.

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence, of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is given a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. Major attends a great fete given by the "Lady of the Blended Rose," a mob. He later meets the girl at the elegant ball. Trouble is started by Grant, and Lawrence is urged by Beryl, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. He is detected as a spy by Captain Eric, of the British Army, who agrees to aid him. The duel is stopped by Grant's men and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the home of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and meets the Lady of the Blended Rose. Grant and rangers search blacksmith's shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his men are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and three white men, who lock him in a cellar. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" is on hand for him. Grant's appearance is a mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the girl of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she is in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a subterranean chamber when Captain Eric begins a search of the premises.

CHAPTER XV.—Continued.

The silence and loneliness caused me to become restless. I could not seem to throw off the sense of being entombed alive in this dismal hole. I wondered if there was any way of escape. If that secret door was not locked and unlocked only from without? A desire to ascertain led me to take candle in hand, and climb the narrow staircase, examining the wall as I passed upward. The interior of the chimney revealed nothing. While I was convinced there must also be a fireplace on the first floor, so as to carry out the deception, the dim light made no revealment of its nature. I could judge very nearly where it should appear, and I sounded the wall thereabout carefully both above and below without result. Nor did any of my blows reach me to disclose a hollow of partition.

Convinced of the solidity of the wall at this spot, I continued higher until I came to the end of the passage. To my surprise the conditions here were practically the same. Had I not entered at this point I could never have been convinced that there was an opening. From within it defied discovery, for nothing confronted my eyes but mortared stone. I was sealed in hopelessly, but for the assistance of a friend without; no effort on my part could ever bring release.

Slowly I went over the rough surface before me before retracing my steps down into the room below. All this must have taken fully an hour of time, and the result of disappointment left me weak as though I had done a day's labor. I can hardly conceive that I could, and yet I certainly lost consciousness, for when I aroused myself it was in pitch darkness.

I was dazed, bewildered, but as my hand felt the edge of the table I comprehended where I was, and what had occurred. Groping about, I found flint and steel, and that last candle, which I placed into the candlestick. The tiny flame was like a message from heaven. How I watched it, every nerve tingling, as it burned lower and lower. Would it last until help came, or was I destined to remain pinned up in the darkness of this ghastly grave? How long I must have been there for I—hours. The burning out of the candle proved that. Surely I could not longer this was a trick, a deadly, cruel trick! If help had been coming it would have reached me before this. The day must have passed, and much of the night. Grant and his men would have marched away long since this on the road to Philadelphia. What could have occurred, then, to prevent Peter or the girl from setting me free? Could they have been captured into accompanying the soldiers? Could they have forgotten? Or had they deliberately leave me there to die?

My brain whirled with incipient madness as such questions haunted me relentlessly. I lost faith in everything, even her, and cursed aloud, hating the echoes of my own voice. It seemed as though those walls, that low roof, were crushing me, as if the close, foul air was suffocating. I recall tearing open the front of my shirt to gain easier breath. I walked about beating with bare hands the rough stone, muttering to myself words without meaning. The candle had burned down until barely an inch remained.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Remains of Tragedy.

It must have been the shock of thus realizing suddenly how short a time remained in which I should have light which restored my senses. I know I stared at the dim yellow flicker dully at first, and then with a swift returning consciousness which spurred my brain into activity. In that instant I hated, despised myself, rebelled at my weakness. Faith in Claire Mortimer came back to me in a flood of regret. If she had failed, it was through no fault of hers, and I was no coward to lie there and rot without making a stern fight for life. When I was found, those who came upon my body would know that I died struggling, died as a man should, facing fate with a smile, with hands gripped in the contest. The resolution served—it was a spur to my pride, instantly driving away every haunting shadow of evil. Yet where should I turn? To what end should I devote my energies? It was useless to climb those stairs again. But there must be a way out.

I gripped the old musket as the only instrument at hand, and began testing the walls. Three sides I rapped, receiving the same dead, dull response. I was in the darkest corner now, beyond the stairs, still hopelessly beating the gun barrel against the stone. The dim light revealed no change in the wall formation, the same irregular expanse of rubble set in solid mortar, hardened by a century of exposure to the dry atmosphere. Then to an idle, listless blow there came a hollow, wooden sound, that caused the heart to leap into the throat. I tried again, a foot to the left, confident my ears had played me false, but this time there could be no doubt—there was an opening here back of a wooden barrier.

Half crazed by this good fortune, I caught up the inch of candle, and held it before the wall. The dim light scarcely served as an aid, so ingeniously had the door been painted in resemblance to the mortared stone. I was compelled to sound again, inch by inch, with the gun barrel before I could determine the exact dimensions of the opening. Then I could trace the slight crack where the wood was fitted, nor could I have done this but for the warping of a board. Wild with apprehension lest my light fail before the necessary work could be accomplished, I drew out the single-bladed knife from my pocket, and began widening this crack. Feverishly as I worked, this was slow of accomplishment, yet sliver by sliver the slight aperture grew, until I wedged in the gun barrel, and pried out the plank. The rush of air extinguished the candle, yet I cared nothing, for the air was fresh and pure, promising a clear passage.

God, this was luck! With new courage throbbing through my veins I groped my way back to the table after flint and steel, and relit the candle fragment, shadowing the flame with both palms as I returned to where the plank had been pressed aside. However, I found such precaution unnecessary, as there was no perceptible draft through the passage now the opening was clear for the circulation of air. There had been two planks—thick and of hard wood—composing the entrance to the tunnel, but I found it impossible to dislodge the second, and was compelled to squeeze my way through the narrow twelve-inch opening. This was a difficult task, as I was a man of some weight, but once accomplished I found myself in a contracted passageway, not to exceed three feet in width, and perhaps five from floor to roof. Here it was apparently as well preserved as when first constructed, probably a hundred years or more ago, the side walls faced with stone, the roof supported by roughly hewn oak beams. I was convinced there was no great weight of earth resting upon these, and the tunnel, which I followed without difficulty, or the discovery of any serious obstruction, for fifty feet, inclined steadily upward, until, in my judgment, it must have come within a very few feet of the surface. Here there occurred a sharp turn to the right, and the excavation advanced almost upon a level.

Knowing nothing of the conformation above or of the location of buildings, I was obliged to press forward blindly, conserving the faint light of the candle, and praying for a free passage. It was an experience to test the nerves, the darkness, the hare-gray walls, and to hear the beating of my own heart, and withhold myself from shouting aloud in the sheer joy of escape. With what difficulty I kept my head, with what effort I refrained from running, I cannot now recall, but I do remember that I trod cautiously, and that the candle flame burned steadily, and bits of earth, jarred by my passage, fell upon me in clods. Altogether it was an experience I have no desire to repeat, although I was in no actual danger for some distance. Old Mortimer had built his tunnel well, and through all the years it had held safely, except where water had soaked through, rotting the timbers. The candle was sputtering with a final effort to remain alight when I came to the first serious obstruction. I had barely time in which to mark the nature of the obstacle before the flame died in the socket, leaving me in a blackness so profound it was like a weight. For the moment I was practically paralyzed by fear, my muscles limp, my limbs trembling. Yet to endeavor to push forward was no more to be dreaded than to attempt retracing my steps. In one way there was hope; in the other none.

With groping fingers I verified the situation, as that brief glance ere the candle failed had revealed it. A beam had fallen, letting down a mass of earth, but was wedged in such a way as to leave a small opening above the floor, barely sufficient for a man to wiggle through. How far even this slight passage extended, or what worse obstruction lay hidden beyond was all conjecture. It was a mere chance in which I must risk life in hope of saving it—I might become helplessly wedged beneath the timbers, or any movement might precipitate upon me a mass of loosened earth. It was a horrid thought, the death of a burrowing rat; and I dare not let my mind dwell upon the dread possibility. Slowly, barely advancing an inch at a time, I began the venture, my hands blindly groping for the passage, the cold perspiration bathing my body. The farther I penetrated amid the debris, the greater became the terror dominating me, yet to draw back was next to impossible. The opening grew more contracted; I could scarcely force myself forward, digging fingers and toes into the hard earth floor, the obstructing timber scraping my body. It was an awful, heartrending struggle, stretched out flat like a snake in the darkness, the loose earth showering me with each movement. There was more than one support down; I had to double about to find opening; again and again I seemed to be against an unsurpassable barrier; twice I dug through a mass of fallen dirt, once for three solid feet, throwing the loosened earth either side of me, and pushing it back with my feet, thus utterly blocking all chance of retreat. Scarcely was this accomplished when another fall from above came, half burying head and shoulders, and compelling me to do the work over. The air grew foul and sluggish, but I was toiling for life, and dug at the debris madly, reckless of what might fall from above. Better to be crushed than to die of suffocation, and the very desperation with which I strove proved my salvation. For what remained of the roof held, and I struggled through into the firmer gallery beyond, faint from exhaustion, yet as quickly reviving in the fresher air. I had reached the end of the passage before I comprehended the truth. It opened in the side of a gulley, coming out between the roots of a great tree.

I was a wreck in body and mind, my face streaked with earth, my hair filled with dirt, my clothing torn and disreputable. Laboring for breath, my fingers raw and bleeding, I lay there, with scarcely enough strength remaining to keep from rolling to the bottom of the ravine. For some moments I was incapable of either thought or action, every ounce of energy having been expended in that last desperate struggle. I lay panting, with eyes closed, hardly realizing that I was indeed alive. Slowly, throb by throb, my heart came back into regularity of beat, and my brain into command. My eyes opened, and I shuddered with horror, as I recognized that dismal opening into the side of the hill. Clinging to the tree trunk I attained my feet, still swaying from weakness, and was thus able to glance about over the edge of the bank, and gain some conception of my immediate surroundings.

It was early dawn, the eastern sky that shade of pale gray which precedes the sun, a few, white, fleecy clouds sailing high above, already tinged with red reflection. I must have been in that earth prison since the morning of the previous day; it seemed longer, yet even that expiration of time proved that those who had imprisoned me there had left me to die. God! I couldn't believe that—not of her! Clear as the evidence appeared, I yet fought down the thought bitterly, creeping on hands and knees over the edge of the bank, to where I could sit on the grass and gaze about in the morning light. The house was to the left, an apple orchard between, and a low fence enclosing a garden. I could catch but glimpses of the mansion through the intervening trees, for it was large, imposing, apparently old-fashioned, painted white, with green shutters. Instinctively I crouched low, with my head on a level with the grass, and peered through the bushes. Nothing moved, no sign of life, as I circled through the trees of the orchard, and came out upon the grass-plot facing the front porch. The sun was up now, and I could perceive each detail. There was a smashed window to the right, a green shutter hanging dejectedly by one hinge; the great front door stood wide open, and the body of a dead man lay across the threshold, a dark stain of blood extending across the porch floor.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Queen's Rangers.

A bullet had struck the hand rail, shattering one of the supports, and the broad steps were scarred and splintered. The man lay face upward, his feet inside the hallway, one side of his head crushed in. He was roughly dressed in woolen shirt and patched smalliclothes, and wore gold hoops in his ears, his complexion dark enough for a mulatto, with hands seared and twisted. Surely the fellow was no soldier; he appeared more to me like one who had followed the sea. I stepped over his body, and glanced the length of the hall. The chandelier was shattered, the glass gleaming underfoot, the stair rail broken into a jagged splinter, and a second man shot through the eye, rested half upright propped against the lower step. He was a dark-bearded fellow, no better dressed than the first, without, but with a belt about him, containing pistol and knife. His yellow teeth protruded from his tawny features a fearful look. Behind him a pair of legs, much the same, protruded from the doorway, and I knew instinctively that the dead lay there in numbers.

These came back to memory as I gazed about those lower rooms, dreading my next discovery, half ceased to think that Claire Mortimer might be helpless in their ruthless grasp. Better death a thousand times than such a fate.

I pushed forward into the rooms of the lower floor, more than ever impressed by their original magnificence. Now, however, they were all confusion, furniture broken and flung aside, walls hacked, dishes smashed into fragments. The scene was sickening in its evidence of wanton hate. Yet I found no more bodies, no traces of further resistance. In what must have been Mistress Claire's private apartments I stood with beating heart upon the threshold of each chamber, and

POOR JOHN NEATLY CAUGHT

Cleverly Contrived Trap That Led to the Downfall of One Forgetful Husband.

He had returned home in the evening tired and ready for a restful hour or two.

"John, my love," said his little wife sweetly, "did you post that letter I gave you this morning?"

"Yes, my pet," said John, hiding his conscience-stricken face behind the newspaper.

"Well, what is your answer?" still more sweetly.

"Wh-what is what?" gasped John.

"What is your answer, dear?" said his little wife, clearly. "That letter was addressed to you."

"Addressed to me?" exclaimed John. "I didn't notice it."

And then, like a foolish man, he fell into the trap and produced the letter from his pocket to see. The envelope was not addressed to him; but a long and severe lecture was shortly after.

FRIGHTFUL HANDICAP.

Beryl—Poor young Stickleby! He had to give up studying for a doctor.

Sibyl—Lack of brains?

Beryl—No; he found he couldn't raise a Vandyke beard.

Was Fun to Choose.

A number of drivers of racing cars who were in Louisville to participate in the motor races were present at a luncheon in honor of one of the leading contestants, who told several automobile stories.

"But my best story," said the racer, "is about a taxicab chauffeur. This man was discharged for reckless driving and so became a motorman on a trolley car.

"As he was grumbling over his fallen fortunes a friend said:

"'Oh, what's the matter with you? Can't you run over people just as much as ever?'

"'Yes,' the ex-chauffeur replied, 'but formerly I could pick, and choose.'"

Just Like Other Men.

Most surgeons simply go way up in the air when one of the world's great ones is stricken. When Sir Frederic Treves was called to operate on King Edward he split him open as nonchalantly as if the king had been an apple or a watermelon.—New York Press.

Its Kind.

"What is a voice from the tombs like?"

"It must be a skeleton's articulation."

Paradoxical Misfortune.

"There is nothing in this place but soft drinks."

"Just my hard luck."

NO MEDICINE

But Change of Food Gave Final Relief.

Most diseases start in the alimentary canal—stomach and bowels.

A great deal of our stomach and bowel troubles come from eating too much starchy and greasy food.

The stomach does not digest any of the starchy food we eat—white bread, pastry, potatoes, oats, etc.—these things are digested in the small intestines, and if we eat too much, as most of us do, the organs that should digest this kind of food are overcome by excess of work, so that fermentation, indigestion, and a long train of ills result.

Too much fat also is hard to digest and this is changed into acids, sour stomach, belching gas, and a bloated, heavy feeling.

In these conditions a change from indigestible foods to Grape-Nuts will work wonders in not only relieving the distress but in building up a strong digestion, clear brain and steady nerves. A Wash. woman writes:

"About five years ago I suffered with bad stomach—dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation—caused, I know now, from overeating starchy and greasy food.

"I doctored for two years without any benefit. The doctor told me there was no cure for me. I could not eat anything without suffering severe pain in my back and sides, and I became discouraged.

"A friend recommended Grape-Nuts and I began to use it. In less than two weeks I began to feel better and inside of two months I was a well woman and have been ever since.

"I can eat anything I wish with pleasure. We eat Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast and are very fond of it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

article is intended primarily ll the attention of our citizens fact that they are "access- the violation of certain laws city statute books. It is misdemeanor for a farmer (or any other person) to hitch a team on the sidewalks, yet our merchants and citizens owning property, have provided no place where teams can be hitched. We all want our country friends to come to town and trade, but we offer him no facilities after he arrives. We separate him from his hard earned money, then tell him it is contrary to law for him to hitch his team on the sidewalks or to leave it unhitched on the streets.

Of course the merchant with whom the farmer is trading does not object to the farmer obstructing the sidewalk near his place of business, because he is getting glittering coin out of the farmer, but how about the other citizens? Are they not to be considered? How about the other merchants? Are they not to have their rights enforced also?

In other towns merchants have arranged "hitching grounds" for the convenience of farmers; all are treated alike. Here no such arrangement is made and consequently the law must be violated. Let the merchants do as they do in other towns and all this will be obviated. It is but right that they should do so. The lady pedestrians, the children's safety, demand it.

Again, there are laws against committing nuisances upon the streets. Can this law be enforced in the face of the facilities afforded the public? Are they to be blamed when the citizenship of Clanton are equally guilty with the non-citizen?

The railroad is supposed to have certain facilities for the traveling public, and doubtless they are within the pale of the law, but those facilities are kept so closely guarded that not one in fifty know of their existence.

No town, we venture, in all the State is so poorly supplied with public utilities of this nature as is Clanton.

We are not knocking; far from it, we are BOOSTING—boosting; we want improvement and are clamoring for it.

The calls of nature demand it, decency demands it; health demands it, PRIDE demands it.

In several of the smaller towns, where the county seat is located, the town and county have joined hands to furnish such facilities; they are conducted under a well regulated system of rules; when that rule is violated the violator pays the penalty—he never violates but once. Such arrangements COULD be made in this town and county.

It ought to be made and it OUGHT to be made NOW.

MUSICAL RECITAL

MRS. MIDDLETON'S MUSIC CLASS RENDERS DELIGHTFUL PROGRAM.

The Recital, given on Saturday night, Nov. 16th, in the auditorium of the Clanton High School building by the music and chorus class of Mrs. J. H. Middleton, was a marked success. All of numbers on the program were presented in a manner highly creditable to the class and its teacher. The entertainment was of a high order throughout. When it is remembered that no time was lost from school duties in the preparation of the program and that no effort whatever was made at display, congratulation and compliment are well deserved.

Mrs. Middleton's ability as a teacher and her fidelity to her class in so promoting the musical interest of our little city that its standards have being rapidly lifted to a high order of musical ideals. Too much praise cannot be sung for [illegible] work.

AN EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY

WILL CLANTON BE EQUAL TO THE OCCASION?

The Press has several hobbies which it delights to ride—perhaps to the frequent disgust of its patrons. Nevertheless our conscience is clear and until we secure the things contended for or till someone rides rough shod over us and compels us to keep quiet, we are going to ride those hobbies, interchangably, from week to week.

Need we mention the names of our hobby horses? Doubtless everyone knows them by name, color and age. However, one is named Sewerage for Clanton; his harness mate is named Water Works for Clanton; over in another stall we have stabled a pair called "Amusement House," with a team mate called "No Hogs;" there is still another called "Clean Streets and Sidewalk" which drives with "Better Public Utilities."

These three teams are young, vigorous and are winners; they have not won a race yet, because they never had the proper grooming or encouragement, but they are capable nags and all they need to wear the blue ribbons of success is a little jockeying on the part of Chilton and Clanton officials with the aid of Clanton citizens.

The lead horse in the first team is now in fit condition to win a race hands down; he is groomed up to the keenest point and anxious for the running. LISTEN!

We have figures [illegible] authority that the [illegible] willing, not to say anxious, to donate to Clanton the [illegible] the town with water, PROVIDED the town will undertake to keep the remaining tank near the depot filled with water for the use of the depot!

The pumping station is in perfect condition; it will supply all the water necessary for fire, domestic and sewerage purposes for yet a few years. A large tank could be purchased at comparatively small cost—a cost not to exceed what is saved in insurance rates.

A fireman or manager of the pumping station could be employed at a nominal cost. The town would be protected from fire, the house wives from much drudgery and the health of the town greatly benefitted.

We merely throw out the suggestion, [illegible] to its [illegible]

AN APPRECIATIVE AUDIENCE

CLANTON PATRONIZES ENTERTAINMENTS WELL; EXTRAORDINARY ENCOURAGEMENT

Some weeks ago a handsomely attired and beautifully endowed lady from Montgomery, whose refinement and intelligence is a household word in her home town, came to Clanton endeavoring to place before the people of the town a series of entertainments at stated intervals. She met with little or no encouragement from those whom she interviewed, but was never the less tireless in her determination to "bill" at least three attractions.

The Press man, seeking always to benefit the town and to bring such entertainments here as will give the people an evening of pleasure, undertook the pleasant task of assisting the above mentioned lady in her efforts.

After a day and a half of extreme effort and pittiless begging the two succeeded in listing the names of twenty or more gentlemen who agreed that in the event the people did not sufficiently patronize the entertainments to pay the contract price therefor, they would furnish whatever was in arrears. This done the lady went away happy, tho' somewhat disgusted with the "public spirit" of Clantonites.

In the course of several weeks one of the attractions appeared; it came just at the close of the County Fair, when people were surfeited with entertainment. There was no place to "stage" the performance except at the Fair grounds, everything else being closed as tight as some people we know. The performance was given in one of the tents at the Fair grounds, and, after paying the necessary expenses, the "underwriters" were out the neat little sum of $1.50 each. This did not dampen their ardour, however, for they felt that the time was inauspicious and the place disadvantageous; they plumed themselves for another flight and things went merrily on to its final climax.

Last Friday night the Nell Brunell Concert Co. was billed to appear in Clanton. This company is composed of three handsome young ladies of high class, refined and of most entertaining character.

The school auditorium was secured for this particular entertainment and the "underwriters" expected to reap a rich harvest from their enterprize and public spirit. Night came; the auditorium was lighted; the announcement bell was rung and the young ladies were upon the stage to entertain and delight. They were greeted by at least seventy five persons, twenty one of whom were paid admissions.

Fortunantly for the "management," the "underwriters" were seen in advance and a half dozen dollars secured from each to be paid over to the Concert Company in case the public response was not sufficient.

The entertainment was entertaining; the young ladies were artists in their respective roles; they were beautiful of form and face; an entertainment which, ordinarily, would attract large crowds any where except in Clanton; which, in fact, DOES attract large crowds everywhere else except in Clanton.

The ladies were almost frozen with their reception; they could not, of course, perform their parts leaning against an ice-berg, nevertheless, with rare bravery they essayed their parts and executed them well [illegible] dozen dollars secured for their part of the entertainment [illegible] of Clanton.

writers" are making every effort to have it cancelled, because they receive no encouragement from the people and because they have no place suitable for staging a refined performance. It may be that they will be successful in cancelling; it may be that they will have to dig up another half dozen dollars each. And, just here it might be well to say that had all the "underwriters" stuck to their agreement less than half a dozen dollars would have been sufficient to have defrayed all expenses, but more than half of them had "cold feet" and refused to abide by the contract; hence, the few remaining "faithful" had to bear the entire expense.

In most other towns, early in season, a fund of from three to four hundred dollars is raised so that such entertainments can be booked; adequate "play houses" are provided for the entertainment of the people and the citizenship patronize such entertainments with gladness. Why is Clanton different from other towns in this respect? It cannot be lack of intelligence—is it? It cannot be that Clantonites despise to be entertained—can it? It isn't because we are "tight wads"—surely not!

Then WHY? That's the question—WHY?

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES

POSTOFFICE A BUSY PLACE DURING OCTGBER.

Assistant post-master, J. E. Robinson, Jr., has compiled some very interesting figures with reference to the mail service at Clanton, in so far as the seven rural routes are concerned. The local mail would, doubtless, equal that of the routes if it did not exceed it.

We give below the number of pieces of mail, the weight theoeof, handled by the rural carriers during October, showing that the Clanton post-office is far from an idle place.

The November mail wonld, perhaps, make even a better showing, since the election was held in this month, and being nearer the holidays, the mail deliveries are naturally greater. However, the October showing is good enough to give anyone an idea of what Uncle Samuel is doing in this neck 'o the woods.

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blendid Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidence of a battle and a dead man across the threshold.

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued.

I stepped across the pile of things to the window, glancing out at the still smouldering ruins of the stable. Whatever had occurred, neither the lady nor Peter remained about the house. Of this I was satisfied, yet with the realization there came a sudden comprehension of my own helplessness to be of any aid.

From the window where I stood not a house was visible. Just beyond the orchard the roads forked, a well-traveled branch circling to the left, and disappearing over the edge of a hill. As I traced it with my eyes a considerable body of mounted men suddenly appeared on the summit. Without fear that they could see me at that distance I watched eagerly as they trotted down the long slope. They were plainly a squadron of British Dragoons, their arms and cross-belts shining in the sun, in spite of the dust kicked up by their horses' hoofs.

I waited until convinced they were coming to the house, before drawing back out of sight. It was difficult to decide what was best for me to do. Should I wait, trusting to my rough clothing, and pass myself off as a countryman, or take advantage of the brief time left in which to escape? If I essayed the first choice I could explain the situation, and start these troopers on the trail; if not they might fail to understand and ride on thoughtlessly. What such a body of mounted men were doing in the neighborhood I could merely guess at—either they were riding through to New York on some matter of importance, or else had been sent out hurriedly to discover what had become of Delavan's foragers. This supposition was the more likely, and they had taken the wrong road, thus missing Grant and his men in the darkness.

They must have cut through the orchard, leaping the low fence, for I heard the thud of hoofs even as I drew back into the upper hall. Then a voice gave a sharp command.

"Circle the men about the house, Simmons. There is something wrong here, and I saw a fellow at that upper window as we came down the hill. Move quick, now!"

I must face them, and went forward to the head of the stairs, anticipating an easy explanation of my presence within. Already quite a squad was inside the front door bending over the bodies and staring about curiously.

"Pine Robbers, eh, colonel?" said one contemptuously. "That fellow has cutthroat written all over him. Don't see any signs of our men here."

"Queen Ranger lying back of the stairs, sir," reported a soldier briefly; "Irish lookin' mug."

The man addressed as colonel, a Ranger himself from his green uniform, looked up quickly and saw me. He called out an order, and three or four men sprang up the stairs, grasping and leading me down. I made no resistance, not realizing I was in any danger. The colonel, a tall man with gray mustache and goatee, and dark, searching eyes, faced me sternly.

"What are you doing here, sir? Come, speak up! What does all this mean?" and he swept his hand about in gesture.

"I came along about thirty minutes ago," I explained, beginning to appreciate my situation, from the suspicious glances cast at me, and recalling how disreputable my appearance must be. "I found things just as they are now, sir. There's been a fight and robbery."

"That's plain to be seen; are these all the bodies?"

"Yes, sir, but the house is upside down from end to end."

"You saw no one? No British soldiers?"

I shook my head, conscious of the fierce grip with which I was being held. A couple of the men dragged out the body from behind the stairs, and as the face came into the light, the colonel's eyes saw it. I heard the sharp breath expelled through his lips, as he stared down into those ghastly features.

"Good Lord! Mike! What in the name of heaven does this mean? He was supposed to be with Claire!"

"There must be some mistake, Colonel Mortimer," insisted the other officer gravely. "Perhaps we can get the truth out of this bumpkin, if we take the lash to him."

I understood in a flash, and as swiftly chose a course of action. This gray-headed colonel was her father, and I would serve her in this emergency without thought of my own danger. No threat of a whip would open my lips, but memory would.

"Come, you dog!" burst out the colonel fiercely. "You know more than you have told. Speak up, or we'll skin you alive."

"I will, Colonel Mortimer," I said, looking him straight in the eyes. "Not because of your threats, but because I wish to serve you. Now I know who you are, and I will tell you all I know about this whole affair."

"Was—was my daughter here?" he interrupted.

"Yes, sir."

"My God! And Eric?"

"Not to my knowledge—there was a man called Peter, this fellow, and a black slave or two. They were all I saw."

"But why should Claire have been here," he asked as though dazed, "unless she came to meet her brother? I supposed her safe in the city."

"I do not pretend to understand the cause of her presence. But if you listen to my story perhaps you may know what to do." I paused an instant to get a grip on my thoughts. I need not tell all, confess my identity, or mention my personal relations with the daughter. "I am a soldier, Colonel Mortimer, in Maxwell's brigade of Washington's army. What brought me here has nothing to do with the present story. I was in the fight over yonder near Mount Laurel night before last when we captured Delavan's forage train—"

"What!" burst in the dragoon officer. "Was Delavan defeated, then? Hadn't Grant joined him?"

"Yes to both questions, sir. Delavan was killed, and Grant surrendered. He and his men were paroled, and started for Philadelphia last evening from here."

"From here!" incredulously. "That must be a lie, colonel, for Mount Laurel is between here and the city."

"Nevertheless, it is no lie," I retorted promptly, looking the young fool in the eyes. "I was hiding here for reasons of my own when they came tramping in along that road about the middle of the forenoon yesterday. There was near a hundred Hessians and Rangers, with two German officers, and Grant. I heard them tell Mistress Mortimer this was the nearest place where they were sure of finding provisions, and that they intended to remain until night. I don't know what happened after that, except that the officers went inside, and the men marched around to the back to eat their breakfast."

"What became of you?"

"Oh, I had other business, and never got back along here until just at daylight this morning. Then I found things this way."

"You don't know what occurred, then?"

"No more than you do. But I've got my opinion. It's this—Grant and his fellows must have left an hour or so it was dark, taking the west road, which was the cause of your missing them. It is likely from this man Mike's body, that your daughter and her party were still in the house. It couldn't have been much later when these others got here and made the attack. Mike must have fought them at the front door, but that was all the fight made; there's no sign of any struggle inside."

"Then they never got Claire," declared Mortimer positively. "That's a certainty, Seldon."

"She would have fought, sir."

"Like a tiger. I know my little girl. And, besides, Peter would have died before the hand of one of those villains was ever laid upon her."

"But," I protested, "I have searched the house, colonel."

"I imagine your acquaintance with the house is somewhat limited," he replied coldly, turning away. "Seldon, place this fellow under guard in the library here. We will learn later what his business might be in the Jerseys."

CHAPTER XVIII.

At Cross Purposes.

It could not be considered an unpleasant place of imprisonment, yet it was useless for me to contrive any plans of immediate escape, for the door was securely locked, and two heavily armed dragoons sat within eyeing me rather malevolently. My attempt at approaching the window was instantly checked by a threatening gesture, and I sat down in the reading chair to await developments. They could not muffle my ears, however, and I heard the swift hoofbeats of an approaching horse being ridden furiously up the gravel driveway. At the door he was hastily checked, and a voice spoke peremptorily:

"Here you, take the rein!"

The fellow came up the steps hurriedly, almost ignoring the sentry at the door.

"I haven't time to stand here, you fool," he exclaimed roughly, "my uniform is pass enough. I wish to see Colonel Mortimer at once—at once." There was a pause, and then the same voice, and I recognized it now as Grant's beyond a doubt. "Ah, colonel, what in God's name has happened here? I heard that you were out hunting us at Farrell's blacksmith shop, and came back as swiftly as I could ride. But I never suspected this. Who were the miscreants?"

"That is a question not yet answered, Captain Grant," replied Mortimer slowly. "It looks like the work of Pine Robbers. Do you recognize this fellow?"

"Ay," and from the muffled tone he must have been bending over the body, "that is 'Tough' Sims, a lieutenant of 'Red' Fagin; there's one more devil gone to hell. But when did the attack occur? We left here after dark, and all was quiet enough then. Claire—"

"She was here, then? I hardly believed it possible."

"I talked with her—quarreled with her, indeed. Perhaps that was why she refused to accompany us to Philadelphia. But what did you mean, colonel, when you said you hardly believed it possible she was here? Did some one tell you?"

"Yes; we caught a fellow in the house when we arrived. He had no time for escape—rough-looking miscreant, claiming to be a Continental. We have him under guard in the library."

"He confessed to the whole story?"

"Not a word; claimed to know nothing except that Claire was here. Said he saw you, and then went away, not getting back again until this morning."

"The fellow is a liar, colonel. Let me see him; I'll lash the truth out of his lips. Where did you say he was—in the library?"

I had barely time to rise to my feet when he entered. His eyes swept across the guard, and then centered upon me. Instantly they blazed with excitement, although I noticed he took a sudden step backward in the first shock of surprise, his hand dropping to the butt of a pistol in his belt.

"By all the gods!" he exclaimed sharply. "If it isn't the spy! I miss the red jacket, but I know the face, Mister Lieutenant Forteseque."

"Major Lawrence, if you please," I returned quietly.

"We'll not quarrel over the name. I've had occasion to know you under both; bearing one you were a spy, beneath the other a leader of banditti. I'll hang you with equal pleasure under either." Suddenly he seemed to remember where we were, and his face flushed with newly aroused rage. "But first you'll explain what you are doing here at Elmhurst. Do you know whose home this is?"

"Most assuredly," determined not to lose my temper, or to be moved by his threats. "It is the property of Colonel Mortimer, of the Queen's Rangers."

"And—and you—you came here again, see the daughter?" he questioned, dr. though half regretting the indiscretion of such a suspicion.

"Oh, no, captain; you do me but a grave injustice. I came here, unprovoked, very against my will, to rescue your private property from the Jersey militia, sir, as Captain Grant can testify," I answered coolly.

"And Captain Grant is over, too anxious," broke in that officer impatiently. "If you will listen to me, colonel, I'll tell you what I know in two minutes or less. It will settle this fellow's status."

Mortimer glanced from my face to that of the speaker, evidently attracted by the vindictiveness of the voice.

"All right, Grant, go on," he said shortly, "only I shall pass judgment as a soldier, and not because of any personal quarrel. What is it you know?"

"That this man came into Philadelphia three days ago dressed as an officer of British infantry. He claimed to be Lieutenant Forteseque of the Forty-second Foot, with despatches from New York. Howe vouched for him, and furnished him with a pass and orderly. He put in the whole day studying the positions of our troops, and in the evening was a guest at the Mischianza—André gave him a card, I heard—and danced there with your daughter. I doubted the man from our first meeting, and later picked up certain rumors which convinced me he was a spy. Some words passed between us on the dancing floor, and as a consequence I asked the man to meet me below. Some one either told him he was suspected, or else he had the heart of a coward, for he failed to appear."

"Did you intend to fight him?"

"No, we planned an arrest. I reported to MacHugh what I had heard, and he had Carter close at hand with a squad of the guard."

"A very pretty trick on mere suspicion," commented the colonel in some disgust. "But go on with your story."

Grant sucked in his breath quickly, evidently surprised at the remark.

"Claire was waiting for me upstairs in the dining room, but after Carter had scattered his men to the outposts, I took a turn about the grounds in hope of thus running across the fellow. Luck favored me, but, damn him, he jumped into me like a fighting cock, struck me in the face, and taunted me into meeting him there and then."

"Good boy! the right stuff, eh Seldon?"

"I supposed it all a bluff," went on Grant, paying no heed to the interruption, although his cheeks flushed, "but we went at it, behind the pavilion, and I had pricked him twice, when the guard came up and separated us. At that the fellow took to his heels, and by Gad! got away—swam the Delaware, while we were beating the west shore. The next I saw of him he was in command of those ragamuffins who attacked us out yonder. Now he shows up here looting this house on the trail of 'Red' Fagin. I'd hang him offhand if it was me."

Mortimer looked across at me earnestly, but with an expression of doubt

"Come, You Dog!" Burst Out the Colonel Fiercely, "You Know More Than You Have Told!"

in his eyes. As for myself I hardly knew what to say or do. Grant had no corroborative proof of his assertions, unless I was returned to Philadelphia. I could emphatically deny that I was the man, insist on my right to a fair trial. But how could I account in any reasonable way for my presence at Elmhurst, or even successfully sustain my claim to being a Continental officer. I could not tell Colonel Mortimer that I had been taken prisoner by his daughter, masquerading as a lieutenant, of dragoons. Apparently he knew nothing of this escapade, and she would scarcely forgive me for exposure; besides, for all I knew to the contrary, the girl might have thus been attempting to serve the colonies, and a mystified betrayer might seriously injure my cause. All this flashed over me before Mortimer spoke.

be done; he is a spy, and here for some infamous purpose."

"Well, I've sent for the fellow, Grant; what more do you want? I'll give him five minutes in which to explain, and that is all. Seldon, have the men go on ahead along the trail."

"Yes, sir, they are off already."

"Very well. Have our horses outside; we can catch up within a mile or two." He wheeled sharply about and looked at me sternly. "Well, sir, I have very little time to waste on you at present, but I advise truthful answers. What is your name?"

"Alan Lawrence."

The village tailor only received occasional orders from the vicar for such articles as hats, collars, or handkerchiefs. "You see," remarked the vicar one day, having called with his usual order, "when I want a suit I go to London. They make them there."

Farms for Children.

Perhaps the smallest farms in the world, each four by eight feet, have been devised by Mrs. Henry Parsons for the International Children's School Farm league, and demonstrated in New York. Each child becomes owner of his diminutive farm, in which he works, grows and harvests seven different kinds of vegetables, and these are borne by him in triumph to his family. About each farm is an 18-inch path, which he keeps in order; under his instructor it becomes a tiny object lesson in good roads.

Lot of Money Well Spent.

Arthur Blanchard, who spends much of his time traveling over the country, for the government, was seated behind a bride and groom in a Pullman car one afternoon when the train went through a long tunnel. As it emerged into the light of day the bride was grabbing desperately at her hat and fighting three fast rounds with one or two hairpins which had become loosened.

In order to relieve the situation and inject some harmless conversation into the gap Blanchard remarked:

"This tunnel cost $12,000,000."

"Well," said the bride judicially, "it was worth it."—Popular Magazine.

SCOFFERS
Often Make the Staunchest Converts

The man who scoffs at an idea or doctrine which he does not fully understand has at least the courage to show where he stands.

The gospel of Health has many converts who formerly laughed at the idea that coffee and tea, for example, ever hurt anyone. Upon looking into the matter seriously, often at the suggestion of a friend, such persons have found that Postum and a friend's advice have been their salvation.

"My sister was employed in an eastern city where she had to do calculating," writes an Okla. girl. "She suffered with headache until she was almost unfitted for duty.

"Her landlady persuaded her to quit coffee and use Postum and in a few days she was entirely free from headache." (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.) "She told her employer about it, and on trying it, he had the same experience.

"My father and I have both suffered much from nervous headache since I can remember, but we scoffed at the idea advanced by my sister, that coffee was the cause of our trouble.

"However, we finally quit coffee and began using Postum. Father has had but one headache now in four years, due to a severe cold, and I have had my headaches and sour stomach which I am now convinced came from coffee.

"A cup of good, hot Postum is satisfying to me when I do not care to eat a meal. Circumstances caused me to locate in a new country and I feared I would not be able to get my favorite drink, Postum, but I was relieved to find that a full supply is kept here with a heavy demand for it." The First Thanksgiving.

One hundred and eighty-nine years have come and gone since the governor of the little colony at Plymouth proclaimed the first Thanksgiving Day. The first feast of the famous out of deliverance from peril. The summer of 1623 brought drought; the skies were like iron and the earth dry as ashes; the crops were a total failure; the friendly Indians also went beyond the Hudson in pursuit of game, and the deer and wild birds retreated into the forest. New York. But when the little colony was threatened with starvation a ship appeared in the harbor loaded with food for the winter. It is recorded also that very day Miles Standish and his hunters returned after the chief's absence, bringing news that the wild game was again moving down from the ocean. And so the feast was turned to feasting, and the people gave thanks. In recognition of their blessings the great Thanksgiving Day was held. And from that providence has come the most genial of all American customs, the festival of the family—Thanksgiving.

Many may have sorrows, all have joys, and these are the supreme reasons of thanks. "Oh, give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever!" exclaims the psalmist, who at another time declares: "Out of the depth cried I unto the Lord and he heard me."

A PUMPKIN PIE VISION

By WILBUR D. NESBIT.

Old Doddridge ate his frugal lunch
Of milk and pumpkin pie,
And fell to musing, as he ate,
Of days that were gone by.
The pie a rich aroma sent
To his reflective brain,
And, oh, the pictures it called up—
An old-time country lane.

An old-time country lane, with grass
All straggling by the side;
A boy, who trudged along the path,
With basket at his side—
A jolly boy, whose eyes were keen,
Who felt inclined to sing,
And saw the glory of the fall,
And fun in everything.

And then he saw a comely girl,
With cheeks of honest red,
Who smiled at him with sunny glance,
And tossed her shapely head.
He saw the old schoolhouse again,
And heard the teacher speak;
And on the roads of frozen snow
He heard the wagons creak.

He saw the shellbark hickory tree;
He saw the kitchen door;
He saw the pantry shelves again—
With pumpkin pies galore;
He sniffed the tang of cider sweet—
The bloom of days gone by—
And then old Doddridge wakened up
And ate his pumpkin pie.

IN EVERYTHING GIVE THANKS

Knowledge of God's Love and Power Is the Supreme Cause for Thanksgiving.

Abundant harvests, national prosperity, peace and security under a government of our own choice—these are certainly grounds for thanksgiving in which every citizen can and should take part. But it is quite possible—in fact it is a common mistake—to accentuate these and other outward blessings in such a way as to make it appear as if, without them, we would as a nation have little or no ground for thanksgiving; whereas the strongest reason for universal thanksgiving would still remain if none of these were present.

The knowledge that God loves the world, that he reigns supreme and controls all forces, and is overruling all events to the ultimate overthrow of everything that is evil and establishment of absolute righteousness—that is the supreme cause for thanksgiving in as far as the things of this world are concerned.

But national thanksgiving can never be anything more than a hollow sham unless the hearts of the worshipers are warmed by personal gratitude to God for his personal love and care and protection, and for the precious and exceeding great promises which he has given us. No heart can be truly grateful to God that has not learned to trust God and to see his hand and his love in all the experiences of life.

Thanksgiving Favors.

For Thanksgiving favors there are "natural-looking" peanuts, about three inches long, containing paper caps and toys. Ears of corn contain automobiles and airships; oranges, apples and pears contain paper caps and musical toys. A novelty is a large yellow crepe paper bag containing a dozen little bonbon snappers. There are also gilt paper snappers, with pictures of fruit on the outside, which hold little charms of gilt vegetables and fruits.

Paper ramekins are made in the shape of turkeys with outspread wings. Roasted turkeys, strutting turkeys, "natural" looking nuts, cranberries and wedges of pumpkin pie form pasteboard and chocolate candy box candies.

Confectioners are showing such novelties as sugar oil cranberries, sugar pumpkins and nuts.

While a traveling man was waiting for an opportunity to show his samples to a merchant in a little backwoods town in Missouri, a customer came in and bought a couple of nightshirts. Afterwards a long, lank, lumberman, with his trousers stuffed in his boots, said to the merchant:

During the late campaign an Illinois candidate for the legislature was driving through the country, seeking votes among the farmers, when he met a young man in farmer's garb, walking by the roadside.

Having in mind a prospective vote, he stopped his horse, and saluting him in a familiar manner, inquired:

"Are you paying any attention to politics nowadays?"

The young man stopped, looked at him suspiciously, and drawled out:

"No, stranger; that don't happen to be my gal's name; but ef it was, I wouldn't think it was any of your durned business."

This ended the interview as well as the prospect.

Mollie, a light-colored mulatto housemaid who has been in the employ of a South Side family for a number of years, recently gave up her position to get married, relates the Kansas City Star. A few days ago she returned and asked to have her old place back. The woman of the house was glad to have her return, but surprised that she came so soon after being married, and questioned her as to her reason for waiting to return. In reply the maid said: "My husband's folks is all jealous of me because I'm so light colored. You know my husband is very dark and all his folks is dark, too; and was mad because he married me. Why, one of his sisters told me, 'You's so bright you make a spot in our family.'"

"No, confound it!" replied her husband, "I put in the quarter."—Judge.

"What got you into trouble with this policeman?" demanded the New York judge.

"Just trying to ask him a civil question, your honor," said the visitor, "nothing more."

"What was that question?"

"I just asked him when the next official murder would be dragged off."

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Today one week; let's all give THANKS.

Wilson has decided to call an extra session of Congress before the Fifteenth of April to adjust the tariff. Good!

Governor Comer has gone to Mississippi duck hunting; perhaps in the near future he will return to Alabama vote hunting. May he be successful in each of his enterprises.

Clanton needs an opera house and opera house patrons; it needs water works and sewerage. All these things could be secured by co-operation.

It is a misdemeanor, punishable by fine, to hitch teams on the sidewalks, but the law seems to be violated every day. It's kept only in its breaking.

It was the irony of fate that Taft had to issue his Thanksgiving proclamation two days after having received the worst drubbing ever given a presidential candidate. But all those things come to the great, the near great and the small alike.

We have received several notices recently asking that papers be discontinued. Of course we do not wish to "push" the paper upon any one, but the proper, decent thing to do is to PAY UP first and then have the paper discontinued.

The attempt of Congressman Hobson to select for the people whom they should have for their Senator, their Governor and the Representative from the Sixth District, was abortive. It brought forth nothing save comment unfavorable to Hobson.

Neither Comer or Seed seemed to like the arrangement suggested by Hobson. Many a politician has been forced into retirement by his efforts to forestall the people in the selection of officials. Will history repeat itself in the case of Hobson?

It was assnredly bad politics on the part of Hobson to try to ring in old issues which have been settled by the people and which they are now content to leave alone.

Not a few of our subscribers have sent us in messages asking that we change the address of their papers. We are always glad to accommodate our friends, but tn order to make the requested change it is necessary for us to know the OLD address as well as the NEW.

One subscriber sent us in the following message: "Please send my paper in the future to Maplesville, route two." There was no name signed, nothing to indicate from whom or from where the letter came. That party is no doubt "cussing" the Press man because he does not receive his paper reglarly at Maplesville, route two. How can we; we are not mind readers in the mailing department.

The road proposition, the fearful condition of the public thoroughfares, was what put the democrats of Chilton on the blink. Look for the reason elsewhere if you will, but you'll fail to find it. Look for it there and you'll find it in box car letters. Yet the democrats were not and are not now to blame for the condition of the roads. There are three republicans on the board of County Commissioners; there were three republicans on that Board for the past two years or more, nevertheless the democrats were charged with the failure.

Would it not be well to get together in some way and inaugurate a system of road improvement that will give our people relief? They are not going to be satisfied and should not be, till substantial relief is given. Cannot the present Board devise some means hyhere by which this greatly to be desired end can be accomplished?

While the Press is for a bond issue, believing that to be the only sensible, or feasible way to build roads, it is willing to side step its own theories and assist with might and main in any other way that will give passable roads to our friends in the rural sections.

All over the State, all over the United States, others are issuing bonds for the betterment of roads, and find it an economical and practical way for constructing them, but if Chilton county has a better way let it be brought forward—we are willing, yea, anxious to help.

CIRCUIT COURT

The Fall term of the Circuit Court convenes next Monday morning, at which time a Grand Jury will be organized. We understand that the docket is quite a heavy one, there being three murder cases for trial, besides numerous other cases of minor importance.

A NEW BANK

A subscription for signatures is being circulating in and around Clanton for the organization of a new bank here. The bank, if organized, will be a State institution and will have an authorized capital stock of fifty thousand dollars and will be called the "Farmers and Merchants Bank of Clanton," Already several thousand Dollars of the capital stock has been subscribed for with bright prospects of the full amount being taken within a short time. Judge S. M. Adams has the matter in charge, which assures success.

NO CLOSING THANKSGIVING

Tho' in all other places in the United States the merchants will close on Thanksgiving day and devote their time to actual thanksgiving or to diversions of some kind; in Clanton this will not be the case. The merchants will not close, even tho' the President of the United States requests it. Clerks will have to work here as usual. There'll be no Thanksgiving in Clanton except by the bankers—they, of course, will close, but they only. This sad state of affairs has been brought about by the refusal of several merchants to close on former occasions of this kind and also by others who, promising to close, kept their side and back doors open for the transaction of business. Well, that's Clanton.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the debt secured by mortgage executed to the undersigned on the 9th day of November, 1905, by W. E. Lucas and his wife, Minnie P. Lucas, which said mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Probate Judge for Chilton County, Alabama, on the 17th day of November, 1905, in Book 78 of the Record of Mortgages on page 227, and in the office of the Probate Judge for Shelby County, Alabama, on the 16th day of April, 1906, in Book 74, Pages 22-25 of the Record of Mortgages, I will proceed to sell under the powers contained in said mortgage, in front of the store house of George Krohl, in the town of Montevallo, Alabama, on

Mr. Whit Gullaborn of Birmingham, an old Clanton resident, was here Sunday visiting relatives.

NOTICE

Hon. N. R. Baker, State Rural School Superintendent, will visit Chilton county, three days, week beginning December 2nd., 1912. He will address the people at Verbena, Mondav, Dec. 2nd, at 7:30, p.m.; at Clanton, Tuesday, Dec. 3rd., at 7:30, p.m.; at Thorsby, Wednesday, Dec. 4th, at 7:30, p.m.

"WOMAN A CHRONICALLY CONSTIPATED ANIMAL"

French Scientist Makes Rude But True Statement.

It is a well-known fact that women are very much more subject to constipation than men. This is especially unfortunate for them, because women's internal organs are so much more delicate than men's. For this reason they should exercise the greatest care in selecting the laxatives they take.

In woman, neglected constipation frequently leads to many other more serious troubles which often wreck their entire health and happiness. No woman should ever allow herself to go for a single day without a good, healthy bowel movement. Sooner or later a terrible price must be paid for such neglect.

BEARLAX, liquid laxative, is especially adapted to the chronic, stubborn constipation with which the majority of women are afflicted. The taste of BEARLAX is pleasant to even delicate palates. It does not make you sick, its action is mild and gentle without griping or straining, and its after effects are pleasant, healthful and strengthening. A few doses of BEARLAX will put your liver and bowels in such a natural, active condition as to make you feel better than you have in months.

Price, 50 cents—money refunded if BEARLAX does not please you. On sale everywhere.

The railroads of the State are deserving of great credit in having come to the relief of the State Treasury at the time they did, under the law they are not required to pay taxes till January; yet, to relieve the strained condition of the treasury, they paid up in October. This meant hundreds of thousands of dollars in the State treasury for which the State would ordinarily have had to wait till January.

By the way, the L. & N. paid into the County Treasury considerable money in October, but the published statement did not show it. Wonder why?

MONEY IN HAY STACK.

Corn Fodder a Splendid Substitute for Hay—Other Forage Crops Valuable—Hay Prices Promise to Remain Good.

[By J. E. Waggoner, of I. H. C. Service Bureau.]

Few farmers realize the importance of studying the reports sent out by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in making their plans for the future. It seems that the old habits cling to us, and we year after year sow or plant corn, oats, wheat, barley, etc., without any special concern regarding what the future price may be as based upon the supply carried over from the year before. This method of farming certainly does not show a practical application of business principles to agriculture. There are reasons, perhaps, for this indifference in planning our farm operations. Farm lands have been increasing in value very rapidly, also farm products, and it has not been necessary for the farmer to figure so closely as the business man in order to make a profit on his products, nevertheless the man who does meets with the greatest success. Very few and perhaps no other line of business could be engaged in successfully without a careful study of the conditions of that business. Just recently, the writer knew of a case where a coal dealer had planned to go into business for himself the first of March, but after he had resigned his position he began studying conditions and found that a coal strike was inevitable. A strike of this kind, to a man just starting in business, would be extremely disastrous and probably result in failure—a fate which this man avoided by studying conditions.

Every farmer should study carefully the reports, facts and figures sent out by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. We find in going over the records that the farm value of $14.64 per ton for hay in 1911 was higher than has ever occurred before in the history of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. At no other time, excepting in 1871, did the price anywhere near approach the price for 1911. At that time it was $14.30 per ton on the farm.

	Farm Value per ton	Production in tons
1908	$ 8.98	70,798,000
1909	10.62	64,938,000
1910	12.26	60,978,000

E. A. Davis, 627 Washington St., Connersville, Ind., is in his 80th year. He writes us: "For years I suffered untold pains and aches in back and liver. That Eighteen thousand dollars in the Treasury the day of the election, which was not there the day before the election, has not yet been explained. The people want to know just how that happened and will not be content until some kind of explanation is made.

Twinges of rheumatism, backache, stiff joints and shooting pains all show your kidneys are not working right. Urinary irregularities, loss of sleep, nervousness, weak back and sore kidneys tell the need of a good reliable kidney medicine. Foley Kidney Pills are tonic, strengthening and restorative. They build up the kidneys and regulate their action. They will give you quick relief and contain no habit forming drugs. Safe and always sure. Try them. Alred Drug Co.

Superintendent of Education Says They Should Get Married After That Time.

Montgomery.—Compulsory education in Alabama practically is inevitable, says H. J. Willingham, Superintendent of Education in his annual report.

Mr. Willingham draws the conclusion from figures, which declare that not only does a relatively small proportion of the enumerated school children of Alabama attend school, but the percentage of attendance is diminishing, and that the total attendance for white children is sufficient only to represent about half the number attending, and for negro children only 27 per cent of the number attending.

Public schools must be maintained with longer terms; to effect this, local taxation is necessary, the Superintendent writes.

"Local initiative, local interest, and a keener regard for the methods and management in each public school would be fostered if the citizens of the community and of the county were made a vital part of its support through the privilege of voting upon themselves a supplement for its maintenance," he says.

Consolidation and concentration of forces in the smaller schools he recommends.

Superintendent Willingham declares the incomes for teachers in Alabama are so low as to be pitiable. Setting forth figures showing that the average salaries are: White male teacher, $413; white female, $340; negro male, $169; female, $150, he declares.

"True, these salaries are slightly more than they were a few years ago, but every man in America knows that each dollar buys much less of the necessities of life than it did some years ago. Alabama receives today more than $40 a month for her convicts, or an income of approximately $500 gross from each convict hired. This is considerably more than is paid for the services of the average public school teacher in Alabama. This statement of fact is not made as a suggestion that teachers should leave off teaching and become convicts, but it shows plainly that too low an estimate is placed by the public on the value of the services of good school teachers.

County boards of education should pay more attention to the needs of negro children, the Superintendent remarks.

"Through the oversight of the boards in failing to erect better rural schools for the negroes," he says in his report, "in my opinion, can be traced one of the causes for so many of the negroes moving with their families to the towns and cities where the children may have the privilege of better educational opportunities."

Teachers' Institutes, attendance on which is compulsory each year, do much to enhance the efficiency of teachers, the Superintendent writes.

"The teachers are growing in efficiency each year," he says. "They are, in the main, doing a higher grade of work than in former years, and, with few exceptions, they are earning more than they are receiving. Any measure which strengthens them strengthens the schools. Our records show that about two-thirds of the teaching force are women. Their average tenure of service in the school room is about four years. Most of them, by that time, consent to get married and to leave the school rooms. Thus it will always be. Thus it ought to be. Institute work, therefore, is necessarily continuous 'trough all time to come."

CANNING CLUB GROWS.

Has Taken the Aspect of a State-wide Movement.

Auburn.—The growth of the Girls' Canning club movement has grown to such an extent since its introduction in 1911 that it has taken on the aspect of a state-wide movement, and the interest shown in it has necessitated the editing of a bulletin giving the organization purposes, etc.

The canning club was introduced in Walker and Pike counties in the spring of 1911, the total number of members enrolled being 361. These two counties met with such success, that 12 other counties enrolled, and the membership went up to 2616, this membership including only members in organized counties, although a girl can join if she lives in a county not organized. The movement is steadily gaining ground. On a trip last week Mrs. Robinson, who is the local agent, organized and enrolled St. Clair, De Kalb and Etowah counties.

109,000 ACRES INVOLVED

Mobile and Ohio Says Statute of Limitations Blocks Action of State.

Montgomery.—A land fraud of large proportions, with which the names of Alabama State officials of reconstruction days were connected, was aired before the State Supreme Court, when the case of The State against the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, was argued and presented. The case involves the title to 109,000 acres of the so-called swamp and overflow land of Mobile and Washington Counties, claimed to have been purchased legally by the railroad in 1872, and claimed by the trustees of the Alabama Insane Hospital as their property through legislative enactment of 1903.

That a fraud was perpetrated in the so-called Chardavoyne patents to the Swamp and Overflow lands is admitted by both parties to the case. That the sale of 109,000 acres of the land to the Mobile and Ohio Railroad company under the fraudulent patents was validated by an act of Governor Houston's Legislature of 1877 is a point at issue, and one which the Supreme Court must decide.

The swamp and overflow lands, given to the State of Alabama by the Federal government, were placed on sale 1861. On February 26, 1872, the Carpet Bag Legislature, of Governor Robert Lindsay passed a bill taking the lands off the market. Shortly after the passage of the act, it is charged Governor Lindsay's private Secretary, Chardavoyne, secured a number of patents to the lands, dated February 20, which were afterward vended by John R. Tompkins, regularly appointed agent of the swamp and overflow lands. Of $263,000 secured by Tompkins from the sale of the lands, he appropriated more than $13,000 as fees, turning the remainder into the State Treasury.

Fraud suspected, the sale of the lands under the Chardavoyne patents was investigated when Governor Houston went into office. T. H. Price, Commissioner appointed for the investigation, revealed Tompkin's part in the proceedings, and his earnings. The question arose as to whether the sales should be declared void, and annulled, and the money returned to the fleeced purchaser or whether the sales should be validated. The latter course was adopted and an act of Legislature passed, making good the transactions.

For more than thirty years the matter was dropped. In 1903, the State gave over toward the support of the insane hospitals the swamp and overflow lands yet unsold by the State. The hospital trustees, considering that the specification had application to lands unsold or illegally sold, laid claim to the 109,000 acres purchased by the railroad company, which had subsequently been sold to a great number of persons so that only 23,000 acres remains in the possession of the railroad.

The railroad company claims that the 1877 act of Legislature confirmed all sales made by persons acting or professing to act as agents or receivers for the State, whether fradulently or otherwise.

FIFTH DIVISION CALLED.

Montgomery.—The call of the Fifth judicial division is taken up by the supreme court. That division comprises the counties of Chambers, Coosa, Chilton, Elmore, Lee, Macon, Talladega and Russell. The second call of that division during the present term of court will be on April 14.

The supreme court was engaged the past week on the call of the First division, and adjourned over from last Thursday until Monday, November 17, when the Fifth division cases wer taken up.

ARCHIVES TRUSTEES MEET.

Montgomery.—The annual meeting of the trustees of the state department of archives and history was held November 18, the date selected in the state code. The trustees heard the annual report, and plans for the future of Dr. Thomas M. Owen, director of the department. Dr. Owen stated in his report that the year had been one of the most profitable of the department's history. Much extension work has been done.

GOVERNOR PAROLES TWO.

Cleve Duke, of Calhoun; Jim Cooper, of Jefferson, Go Free.

Montgomery.—Cleve Duke, of Calhoun county, and Jim Cooper, of Birmingham, State convicts, were granted their freedom on paroles by Governor O'Neal upon recommendation of the Board of Pardons. Duke was sent up in 1910 for larceny, and his parole was conditioned on his payment of the amount stolen, and on his good behavior. Cooper was convicted for grand larceny.

ELMORE ACCOUNTS IN SHAPE.

Montgomery.—Charles L. Townes, examiner of public accounts, submitted to Governor O'Neal a report on his examination of the books, accounts and vouchers of officials of Elmore county. Examiner Townes found the books of most of the officials in good shape, though there were a few technical errors in the accounts of some of them. Mr. Townes left for Jackson county, where he is making an examination of the books of that county.

A PENALTY OF AGE

The tendency of advancing years restrict activity and exercise is responsible for the constipated condition of most elderly people. The weakness years impairs the action of the bowels and the digestive organs are more sensitive to the demands upon them and rebel more quickly. Cathartics and purgatives are violent and drastic in their action and should never be used to correct constipation. A mild yet positively effective remedy is one that is recommended by physicians as well as by thousands who have used it, is the compound of simple laxative herbs with pepsin prescribed by Dr. W. B. Caldwell thirty years ago and now sold by druggists everywhere under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Dr. Caldwell wants everyone troubled with constipation to try Syrup Pepsin and will send a trial bottle, free of charge, to all who write for it. Address W. B. Caldwell, 203 West St., Monticello, Ill. Adv.

Some Names Easily Remembered.

"Now, children," asked the teacher addressing the class in United States history, "who was it that shot Roosevelt?"

"Why—er-ah!——" hesitatingly answered the brightest pupil. "I think it was a crank by the name of Smith or Prank, or something like that."

"What surgeon attended the case and—"

Thereat, they all arose and exclaimed as with one voice: "Scurry L. Terrill, M. D.!"

From this we should learn that unforgettable name is rather to be chosen than great riches.

WILSON OWES NOTHING TO THE "POLITICIANS"

If there ever was a man who is indebted to the public press of a nation, that man is Woodrow Wilson. He appealed directly to the people, and those papers which voiced the sentiments of the people responded to his appeal, and probably in no previous election has the press been so closely identified with a presidential candidate.

Wilson's greatest debt in this respect is to Colonel Geo. Harvey, the brilliant editor of Harper's Weekly, who can probably claim to be the original Wilson man. He was the man who put the first wind in Wilson's sail and he showed himself to be a big man with sincere motives when Wilson objected to his support. He did not pout and turn against the candidate whom he had made, as Col. Watterson, but calmly desisted in his active support, remaining friendly the while to the eminent democrat. If Harvey wants any Wilson pie he should have it.

Another editor who deserves favor from Wilson is Frank P. Glass, editor of the Birmingham News. Even though he lived in Mr. Underwood's district, and home town, it was hard for Mr. Glass to cease his agressive support of the New Jersey governor, and he did not cease to look out for Wilson's interests after he had entered the Baltimore convention. His paper was the first in Alabama to start a Wilson-Marshall campaign fund, beginning one day ahead of the Anniston Hot Blast before it became a part of this paper, and in this respect he did signal service for the party. He has been mentioned for the post-mastership of Birmingham, and if he wants it he should have it.

Editor Horace Hood of Montgomery, mentioned for postmaster of that city, editor Craig, of the Mobile Register, and editor Gray, of the Atlanta Journal, are others who gave of their brains, their time, their newspaper space, which costs money, and liberal contributions in cash for the Wilson campaign. They too, deserve reward.

Wilson's election came direct from the people. He owes little to the professional politicians and he should dispense his favors to those who have merrited them, for one good turn deserves another.—Anniston Hot Blast.

On last Sunday Misses Mary Daniels, Ruby Downs and Elna Sartor, accompanied by Prof. Pickens and Dr. Hance Alred motored to the Old Soldier's Home, where they entertained the old veterans delightfully with several music selections.

There has been, of late, owing to old age and the change in the weather, quite a lot of sickness among the old soldiers but Dr. Ellsberry thinks he now has all cases under perfect control.

Mr. Thos. Robertson, the recently appointed Adjutant, has recovered from his recent illness and is now at work.

The old men are already talking Christmas and looking forward with much pleasure to the reception of many presents at that time for they are usually most bounteously remembered by their friends and acquaintances during the holidays.

ONE TRUE GOSPEL, MANY PERVERSIONS

The Gospel of Social Uplift Among the Perversions.

Pastor Russell Also Points Out That the Gospel of Faith Healing Is Another of the Many Substitutes For the Greatest of All Gospels.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 15.—In Providence Opera House Pastor Russell took for his text St. Paul's words, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from Him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another Gospel, which is not another; but there be some that trouble you and that would pervert the Gospel of Christ; * * * let him be accursed."—Galatians i, 6-8.

When we remember that there is but one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism presented in the Bible, we are astounded to find many faiths, many "Gospels," presented by many denominations, all bearing the name of Christ.

Although the Apostle was one of the pioneers of the Church, even in his day the brethren in Galatia had turned away to a perverted Message. No wonder, then, that the true Gospel had become almost buried under human tradition!

It will not do to say that we have many denominations, but only one Gospel. Denominations were not organized for amusement, but because the founders of each believed that they saw sufficient reason to justify them in forming a new sect.

Galatians' Perverted Gospel Prevalent Today.

The perverted Gospel which the Galatians were disposed to accept is very prevalent today, and is as much to be reprehended. The so-called Gospel about which St. Paul took them to task consisted of an admixture of the restraints of the Jewish Law and the Grace of God.

This perverted Gospel was that in addition to believing on Christ it was necessary to become Jews.

Many Christians are still making the same mistake; they do not appreciate the Master's statement, "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

Pastor Russell charged that from the most prominent pulpits of Christendom the Gospel of Christ respecting the forgiveness of individual sin, the reconciliation of the individual heart, the individual begetting of the Holy Spirit and the personal walk in newness of life has been discarded.

"Many of the preachers, having had no such experiences themselves, were loath to talk about them. But salaries must go on and something must be said. The message of the hour, therefore, is athletics, manliness, position in society, attention to political duties, attainment of high positions in the world—and money withal!"

Far be it from me to teach inattention to the duties and responsibilities of life. The Gospel of Jesus, however, distinctly impresses upon all His followers that their consecration to walk in His steps means their separation from worldly ambitions and from giving of chief concern to the preservation of their earthly lives. It exhorts that these are to be considered secondary to the new ideals set before them in the Gospel of Christ.

Elect to Bless the Non-Elect.

At this point Pastor Russell struck to the root of his subject. He pointed out the almost complete failure to recognize the great "Divine Plan of the Ages"—hidden for 4000 years—and in the days of the Apostles made known. He recognizes that God is now conducting an Election according to fitness; and that after this He will use the Elect in the work of blessing the non-elect.

The followers of Jesus are not at liberty to adopt theories, either of their own or those of others in respect to the way in which the great work of uplifting the world is to be accomplished. They are colaborers with God—and not with men.—II. Corinthians vi, 1.

Pastor Russell then proceeded to outline the Divine Plan as recorded in the Scriptures. He showed that God's purpose is, first, to select the Church, and then to uplift all those of the non-elect awaiting the summons to "Come forth * * * to a resurrection by judgment," for "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust."—Acts xxiv, 15; John v, 28, 29, R. V.

The resurrection by judgment will prove to be successful beyond the fondest hope. In proof of this we have, for instance, the Scripture, "When the judgments of the Lord shall be in the earth the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness."

The greatest perversion of the Gospel of Christ is the Gospel of Purgatory and eternal torture. And the Gospel of Faith Healing is opposed both to the letter and spirit of Jesus' teachings. But end of the Lord's Kingdom any a People was healed miraculously.

The miracles which Jesus performed were upon outsiders and were but illustrations of how life and His Kingdom, in Kingdom glory, will in the coming Age uplift and restore all the willing and obedient.

Constipation, if Neglected, Causes Serious Illness

Constipation, if neglected, leads to almost innumerable complications affecting the general health.

Many cases of typhoid fever, appendicitis and other severe diseases are traceable to prolonged clogging of the bowels. Regard the effects of constipation, C. E. Ayers, 6 Sabin St., Montpelier, Vt., says: "I was afflicted with constipation and biliousness for years, and at times became so bad I would become unconscious. I have been found in that condition many times. Physicians did not seem to be able to do me any good. I would become weak and for days at a time could do no work. Not long ago I got a box of Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, and after using them found I had never tried anything that acted in such a mild and effective manner. I believe I have at last found the remedy that suits my case."

Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, yet neglect too long to employ proper curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your bowels clean," and it's good advice.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory, your money is returned.

SERVICE

The service afforded the traveling public by the Passenger Department, and the shipping public by the Freight Department, of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company is not excelled by any railroad in any section of the world.

The Passenger Department operates trains with as much frequency as conditions warrant. The schedules are as fast as is consistent with safety. The coaches are made as comfortable as possible. No trouble or expense is spared to give maximum service at minimum cost to the public.

The Freight Department makes a careful study of agricultural and industrial conditions in the territory through which the road operates. Freight facilities are placed at the disposal of the shipper to enable him to develop the resources of his locality. The L. & N. anticipates the needs of the territory and always co-operates to have those needs supplied. Fast freight, low rates and personal service have contributed much to making the territory one of the most prosperous in the union.

The L. & N. is a public service organization, dependent for prosperity of the people it serves. It entertains for the people a cordial good will, similar to the good will entertained by the manufacturer or jobber for the merchant who is his customer. It endeavors in every possible way to merit the approval and secure the good will of farmer, merchant and manufacturer, all of whom are valued customers of the L. & N.

That, in a measure, accounts for the exceptional freight and passenger service; the good will of our customers, and their liberal patronage, makes it possible for us to give that service.

It is true y to do this is based pon experience and that we cannot require experience as a juror as a qualification; nevertheless, it can be said that the visionary and the thoughtless with reference to the every day affairs of life do not possess the sound judgment contemplated by the law as a qualification for jury duty; while, upon the other hand, a young man of only 21 years is thoughtful, careful, cautious and successful in his own affairs, may possess the sound judgment required by law.

No habitual drunkard, and no one afflicted with a permanent disease is competent as a juror, nor is any man who has been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude.

Having the qualifications which I have tried to make clear to your minds, and having taken the oath to diligently inquire into all indictable offenses given you in charge as well as those committed or triable in this county, and true presentment make of the same; the next consideration is your method of procedure. In the first place you are all sworn to keep secret what transpires in the jury room. If you should let it be known that a bill has been found against A, he might have urgent business in Texas or Oklahoma, and frustrate the execution of the law. If you should let it be known that a case is being considered against B, he might throw stones in your way by getting witnesses out of your reach, or by artfully introducing witnesses into the jury room poisoned by the virous of tainted money. If it should be known that some of you voted for a bill against C, he might seek opportunity to do personal violence to every man who voted against him. It is patently best to have all your members present when you vote on the question whether a bill shall be found. It is better for the foreman to appoint committees of members fitted for the work to examine the books and bonds of county officials, the condition of the treasury, and the property of the county, and have such committees report to you, which report you can adopt or amend and make it a part of your general report.

In the consideration of the question whether a bill shall be found, you have solemnly sworn not to present any person by reason of hatred, envy, or malice, nor leave any one unpresented by reason of fear, affection, reward, of the hope thereof.

ROCKY MT. ITEMS.

The people have about all their cotton out at last.

The ribbon cane patches have been entertaining many of the farmers this week; from the amount of syrup made in this district one would think there would be many sweet folks here, and, of course, there are.

Rev. Mr. Snipes preached a very forcible sermon at Mt. Pleasant on last Sunday on the subject of Tithing. He used for his text the 9th verse, 3d chapter of Proverbs. Brother Snipes will leave us on Christmas; he expects to be a couple of years in school at Busc, Ala. We dislike to see him leave here but we wish him success in his work.

Our school at Rocky Mt. is moving along nicely under the new management of Prof. F. E. Williams and Miss Tolestie Woodly. After so long a time we are glad to report that we have our school house nicely painted white, trimed in green. Mr. Strand, of Thoseby, had the honor of painting it. The school is steadily increasing, and we are looking forward to the time when it will be the best we have ever had.

We will put in a nice library this winter, over $10 has already been deposited in the bank, and we are now anxiously waiting for the counties and states $10 each to complete our $30 library. Our school has just put in a nice set of maps, eight in number, and a nice twelve-inch hanging globe. We are glad to give our teachers the honor for these improvements. The School Improvement Association is beginning to wake up, and so we are expecting still more good things to come our way very soon. Cynthia.

Notice!

A thanksgiving tea and musical under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society will be given at the residence of the [illegible] Mountain View, A good social time is assured. Everybody invited. Come one, come all.

A START TO BE MADE

CLANTON MAY SOON SEE HER HOPES REALIZED.

The Press has almost won one race riding old hobby horse "Sewerage," and is making a neck and neck race with old hobby "Waterworks." If reports that come to this office can be relied upon—and they can be for they come from authoritative sources and are dependable in every respect.

After the Press submitted the proposition tentatively suggested by the L & N railroad, some enterprising young men of the town "got busy;" In fact they got real busy, for they had been figuring somewhat on a system of water works previous to the appearance of the Press article—that merely stirred them to "fast action"

Just what these young men propose to do is not yet ready for publication, nor is the Press authorized to give out the names of those who are engineering the scheme. However, matters have gone so far that the system of waterworks is well nigh assured within a reasonably short time—provided, of course, that these young men can get the proper encouragement from the citizens of Clanton—that's all it takes to insure the installation of a nice up-to-date system of water works.

But, some one will say, what use have we for water works till a system of sewerage has been installed?

Well, didn't we say in the very beginning that old hobby-horse "Sewerage" had been in the race too and had almost, if not altogether, won a race? That means, of course that "Sewerage" is a good sprinter and will make "Water-works" hard to catch unless he adds a little to his speed. To be sure we are not authorized to tell "everything" we know—just couldn't do that if we tried, but there is a Mayor in this town who is as anxious for the development of the town as anyone, and is doing all that can be expected of him to secure whatever will advance the interests of the town and its citizens.

As we passed by the Mayor a day or two ago riding old hobby "Sewer" the Mayor gave the nag a gentle rap on the funny bone and said, "If you install water works by your persistent efforts, I'm going to install sewerage by the same method." In other words, he mounted our old hobby and is preparing to canter down to Montgomery or up to Birmingham securing one or the other of these two villages in search of an expert engineer to come to Clanton and "lay out" a feasible route for a sewerage system.

His opinion is that the town needs it; that the town can secure it, and that the town must secure it. There's no use waiting till the state health officers pounce upon us and require it of us; there's no common or business sense in waiting to be forced into a thing that is not only desirable but absolutely necessary.

Dr. Matthews is going to take the matter up and unless he makes his first failure in such matters, means to have sewerage within a short time.

Of course two systems will have to be worked out, one for the east side and one for the west side; but this will not be more expensive than would one big system, which would require so much excavation, pumping, and half an expensive happy.

The Press is not boosting but it is optimistic to a degree; it needs a little encouragement itself however, for we have hammered in season and out of season and we have yet to hear the first business man or professional man, except the mayor, lend the least bit of encouragement, Its been a hard fight for we've had often to stand the jeers and adverse criticisms of those who would be most benefitted by riding "Water-works" and "Sewerage" a little.

A start to be made

When the fight is won, and it will be soon, the Press is going to claim no more credit than the humblest of the humble citizens provided that humble citizen does not knock—but boosts.

No town was ever built by knocking—we ought have a law against the knockers and put them to work on the sewer; many towns, not half as good as Clanton, have been made a city by BOOSTING, everlasting boosting.

That's what the Press is here for; its the mission of a newspaper to boost, though some papers we know of never go out of the regular beaten path to say a word about the material development of the town—its like lots and lots of people—willing to weed its own little row and let the others scratch along as best they may.

Certainly those in authority will take steps to compel each and every citizen to connect with the sewer when completed; let there be no law for the rich and influential and another for the poor and down- trodden; let one law cover every citizen alike and make them all ameanable to that law. If the rich citizen does not connect willingly and gladly, then put the law to him and make him connect unwillingly; if the poor plead poverty let him sell his property at a reasonable figure to those who will connect; if he is able to own property he is also able to make sewer connections, and the sooner he is made to understand this, the better. Let the surface closets be abandoned as soon as possible, the pig pens relegated to the suburbs or further if possible, and let all join in making Clanton the best and cleanest town in the state.

Now, lets all get on those hobbies, "Water-works" and "Sewerage" and ride till we win the victory; its in sight.

Who's going to be BOOSTERS? Who will KNOCK?

CLANTON MAY HAVE A PLAY HOUSE.

The building now being erected just east of "John's Place" on Main Street, by Mr. W. H. Wright, will soon be completed, and, if everything works smoothly, will be converted into a moving picture show, with conveniences for staging light opera, comedy casts and other shows which do not require expensive stage furnishings or a very large stage.

For small favors let us be thankful the larger ones will come later.

TO THE TEACHERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

All members of the School Improvement Association and county officers, are requested to meet at the court house in Clanton, on the first Saturday in December, at 10 a. m., for the purpose of [illegible] plans for our work.

ALABAMA NEWS IN SHORT ORDER

TELEGRAPHIC TAPS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE STATE BY OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

WOULD HOLD MINERAL LAND

Martin's Recommendation—State has Recovered Possession of $150,000 Worth of Property.

Montgomery.—Recommendation that the State maintain its possession of mineral lands which are its property under the sixteenth section Federal grant, will be embraced in a report to be filed with Governor O'Neal by W. J. Martin, State Land Agent, in the recovery of these lands. By lease of mineral lands, rather than by sale, profit can be derived to the State. Sale of the sixteenth section lands may be profitable in other instances, thinks the agent, where homestead sites or farm lands are involved, but not in the case of mineral lands.

The report to Governor O'Neal will reveal a remarkably successful application of the authority to recover the sixteenth section school lands which have been lost to the State by unlawful titles, actual trespass, and pre-emption by squatters.

Within the eighteen months since the work has been established, Mr. Martin declares, land whose value aggregated almost $150,000 has been recovered and the State's title cleared. Much of the land has been sold. In many instances, in which the value of the land amounts to something between $50,000 or $75,000, the land is yet in the possession of the State.

A feature of the report to which Mr. Martin points as indicative of greater success even than is represented by the financial returns, declares that the work has aroused the co-operation of the leading citizens in each part of the State, many of whom are volunteering information which leads toward the recovery of land lost to the State.

NEW KIND OF AN IRISHMAN

Definition That by His Own Confession Was Very Little Far From the Truth.

Apropos of the very telling retorts that Sam Schepps made to Cross-Examiner McIntyre in the Becker case, Jerome S. McWade, the Duluth connoisseur, said:

"I like to see anyone get back at an impudent lawyer. I got back at such a lawyer myself the other day.

"The man was my counsel in a customs dispute over some Gobelin tapestries that I'd imported. His name had, like my own, a 'Mick' in it, and I said to him, as I settled his very large bill:

"'Are you an Irishman, sir?'

"'No,' he answered, with a pompous laugh, 'but I've made a lot of money out of Irishmen in my time.'

"'Oh, I see,' said I. 'I suppose we might call you an Irishman by extraction, then.'"

Why He Wept.

At a reception one night, says the Woman's Home Companion, a loud-voiced young man was invited to sing Desultory applause followed, and he responded with a vociferous rendering of "My Old Kentucky Home." The hostess was passing among her guests beaming at the success of her entertainment and sure that everybody was having a good time, when suddenly, to her surprise, she came upon a middle-aged man but slightly known to her, who was weeping silently but bitterly in a secluded corner. Thinking that his heart had been touched by the old song, she asked sympathetically:

'Why do you weep? Are you a Kentuckian?"

"No, madam," he replied. "I am a musician."

SENATOR RAYNER OF MARYLAND DIES

NOTED LAWYER OVERCOME BY EFFORTS SIX WEEKS AGO IN THE CAMPAIGN.

CONDUCTED SCHLEY CASE

Active Democratic Member Won Fame in the Upper Body of Congress.

Washington, D. C.—Isidor Rayner, of Maryland, one of the leading democratic members of the United States senate and a man whose name was offered to the Baltimore convention by William J. Bryan as a suitable candidate for the presidential nomination, died here as the result of continued attack of neuritis.

Senator Rayner had been in a coma since early last week, with only one or two slight rallies. His severe illness covered a period of about six weeks. He was exhausted by his efforts in a political debate with Bourke Cochran at Baltimore, late in September.

Physicians compelled him to retire from the campaign immediately after that and he returned to his Washington home, where he died. For over five years Senator Rayner had been a sufferer from neuritis, the attack often making his work in the senate arduous and painful.

His death creates a vacancy in the senate that probably will be filled by a republican through appointment by Governor Goldsborough, of Maryland. While the legislature of that state is democratic it does not meet this winter and the republican governor's appointment will hold through the opening session of the next congress.

Senator Rayner was one of the striking figures of the senate. He had been a member of that body for almost eight years and was one of its strongest debaters and a recognized authority on constitutional law.

Before he entered the senate he had attained a national reputation because of his vigorous conduct of the late Admiral Schley case before the naval court of inquiry that investigated the action of American officers in the battle with Admiral Cervera's Spanish fleet.

Mr. Rayner was a native of Baltimore and was 62 years old. He was a member of the Maryland legislature when 28 years old and served three terms in the National house of representatives in the period from 1886 to 1892. He was electede to the United States senate in 1904 after having served a four year term as attorney general of Maryland.

As a member of the committee on foreign relations and judiciary Senator Rayner devoted especial attention during the last few years to America's foreign problems and constitutional and legal questions. He was a strong advocate of the abrogation of the treaty with Russia because of that country's discrimination against passports presented by American Jews and exercised a marked influence in getting the senate to endorse such action.

ECZEMA ON CHILD'S FACE

R. F. D. No. 5, Lexington, Tenn.—"My little boy broke out on the face with that terrible disease, eczema, when he was just one month old, and I just thought sure it would kill him, as it killed our other baby at five months old. It would break out in pimples and scab over, and he cried day and night. I thought that there was no cure for him at all. His face would itch and burn so bad that I had to tie his little hands down so he could not scratch his face.

"We began at once to have him treated until he was seven months old, and he got worse all the time. I sent and got a box of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap. BOSTON CHILD KEPT DIGNITY

Matron Meant to Be Kindly, But Youngster Was Not Conversationally Inclined.

This story has been going the rounds of Boston about the ten-year-old son of Director Russell of the Boston opera house.

One evening during an entr'acte at the opera house Master Russell was promenading alone in the foyer, in faultless evening dress—a very glass of fashion. A Boston matron, seeing that he was lonely, began to make herself "agreeable."

"You are Director Russell's little boy, aren't you?" she asked, with patronizing sweetness.

Master Russell resented this intrusion on his dignity, but his courtly maners were unruffled. "Yes, madam," he replied, with an elaborate bow.

"Where were you born?"

"In France, madam"—Slightly more frigid.

"What part?" continued the lady, feeling the conversation well started.

"All of me, madam."

And he bowed and walked away.—Judge.

Suicide Among German Children.

Why do so many German children commit suicide? No one seems to know, but there is no dispute about the fact. Indeed, it has been said that the majority of suicides are those of children, and experts seem inclined to connect the grisly epidemic with the educational system. That "the weak must go to the wall" has become an axiom that has been extended to the schools, and the undeveloped mind of the child seeks relief in suicide from the discouragement of failure. It would be interesting to know if any of the so-called heathen countries of the world have ever experienced such a horrid social phenomena as that of child suicide.

Worth Three Times a Diamond.

Nearly all the emeralds mined today come from Colombia. And, in spite of the supposed higher value of diamonds, the emerald is the most precious of gems. Carat for carat, a flawless emerald would bring perhaps three times the price of a flawless diamond in the jewelry market. India, the storehouse of precious stones, is credited with producing the first emeralds, but the Oriental emerald is not identical with the modern gem, as it is a variety of the ruby, of green color and extremely rare.

Poor Girl.

"How long have you been married?"

"It will be six months next Thursday."

"And do you still regard your husband as the most wonderful man who ever was born?"

Then the poor girl broke down, says the San Francisco Star, and sobbed piteously. When she could trust herself to speak again she said:

"No. Charles has disappointed me terribly. I'm afraid I have wrecked my life. Last night when I asked him to get up and see if there wasn't a burglar in our room he bumped his nose against the edge of the open door and he said three simply awful words just as if they came natural to him."

Much of our news matter this week is crowded out by court news and becnuse of the fact that one of our printers is on the Grand Jury.

The probability is that Governor O'Neal will call an extra session of the legislature somatime next summer, perhaps in August, at which time the finances of the state will be readjusted and other matters of importance will receive attention.

For the extra session which is to be called the Governor should include in his call the reducing of courts and the extention of term times. Altogether too much time "goes to waste" by the three weeks terms and too much litiga- is piled up for adjusdication.

Give us fewer courts and more court.

The Press does not undertake to reply to the article of Collecter Dennis this week; in fact we have not yet read the article but have been informed of its contents. We,re just loading up our old blunderbuss for next week, when perhaps, a few stray shots may be fired. His explanation of that eighteen thousand dollars is not altogether satisfactoy if our information is anything like correct. We're inAestigating; thats the reason we are waiting.

A WOMAN IS AS OLD AS SHE LOOKS

Thousands of women owe their youthful appearance to Newbro's Herpicide. No matter what may be her age, a woman with a nice head of hair, hair that is soft, glossy and fluffy, always looks younger than she is.

Herpicide makes the hair beautiful with that sheen and shimmer which is so attractive and always indicates a healthy, natural growth. It keeps the scalp free from dandruff and the hair from falling out.

There are remedies said to be "just as good," but Herpicide is the genuine original dandruff germ destroyer.

NO CALOMEL AND SALIVATION

Use Bearlax for Torpid Liver.

Not only is calomel (chloride of mercury) a dangerous drug, but the relief it affords is entirely temporary, and later on you will become even more bilious than you were before. Calomel frequently salivates, and its continued use is liable to cause a softening or decay of some of the bones. Avoid it if you would any other poison.

The best and most satisfactory remedy for biliousness or constipation that you can possibly use is Bearlax, liquid laxative. This remedy is pleasant and agreeable to take, delightfully easy and prompt in action and does not gripe or sicken. Bearlax is absolutely safe in every way. This vegetable preparation is Nature's own remedy for removing bile from the system and strengthening and building up activity of liver and bowels.

Purchase a bottle of BEARLAX at once, and if you do not find it the best medicine of its kind you have ever used, your dealer will return your money without question. 50 cents per bottle—sold everywhere.

Appropriation Bills and Archbold Trial Come Up—Resolution Limiting Single Term.

Washington.—Congress will reconvene for the last short session of republican control in national legislation. Comparatively few senators and representatives had reached Washington, but discussion has been active during the last week among those early on the scene over plans for the winter's work and the prospects for the special tariff session next spring, when all branches of the government pass into the hands of the democrats.

While the vexing question of the tariff is not scheduled for consideration this winter, the three months of the short session will be crowded with legislative work. In addition to the annual grist of appropriation bills Congress will be forced to dispose of a quantity of general and special legislative matter left pending with the adjournment of the long session in August.

During the early part of the session the House will be busy shaping appropriation bills, while the Senate is disposing of the impeachment trial of Judge Robert W. Archbold of the commerce court, set to begin December 3.

Several important measures will be pushed for early action in the Senate, among them the resolution of Senator Works of California to limit the President to a single six year term; the Sheppard-Kenyon bill prohibiting the shipment of liquor into prohibition states, and the vocational education bill of Senator Page of Vermont. The bill of Senator Borah creating a department of labor is also scheduled for early consideration.

The department of labor bill has passed the House, but that body would still have to act upon the vocational education bill and the six year presidential term measure if they passed the Senate. The prohibition liquor measure will be pushed in the House by Representative Sheppard of Texas who will succeed Senator Bailey in the next Congress.

Congressmen now in Washington do not expect any action on currency legislation during the short session.

In addition to these measures, the calendars of both House and Senate are crowded with bills of more or less importance, most of which will die with the passage of the Sixty-third Congress without even having been seriously discussed.

ENGINEERS GAIN CONCESSIONS

Board of Arbitration Grants Engine men on Roads Increased Wages.

Washington.—Thirty thousand locomotive engineers on fifty-two eastern railroads gain a partial victory in their demand for more wages, under the award announced by the board of arbitration.

In its decision, however, the board holds that the public, which had no voice in the controversy, and no choice but to abide by the decision, had more at stake than either engineers or railroads; and the report emphasizes the necessity of plans to safeguard the public against the possibility of a future strike whose consequences it depicts in sombre vein.

Following are the more important of the board's award and the requests of the engineers:

In passenger service, a minimum wage was granted of $4.25 for 100 miles or less; and an overtime rate of 50 cents per hour with an average speed of 20 miles per hour. The engineers asked $4.40 and $4.60 per day of 100 miles accordingto the size of the locomotive cylinder, with an overtime rate of 70 cents per hour after five hours.

In through freight service, a minimum was granted of $4.75 per day of 100 miles or less, with overtime pro rata after ten hours. The engineers requested rates of $5.25, $5.50 and $5.75 per day of 100 miles, according to size of the engine; and $7.00 for Mallet engines, the same rates to apply to mine runs, work, wreck, helper or pusher, milk and circus trains.

All existing rates higher than the minimum granted by the board are continued in force.

FIFTY KILLED IN PANIC

Bilbos, Spain.—A terrible panic was caused by the cry of "fire" at a moving picture show here. About 50 children and others were killed. Only one woman was found among the dead. The number of injured is not known as most of them were taken home by friends. The scene of the accident is a large circus, which had been converted into a continuous cinematograph show. As the price of admission was only 2 cents,

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete where he saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blendid Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidence of a battle and a dead man across the threshold. Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once.

CHAPTER XVIII.—Continued.

"Have you any proofs, sir, that you are an officer of Maxwell's brigade?"

"Not here," and I glanced down at my rough clothing, "yet with a little delay that could be easily ascertained."

"On what service are you in the colonys?"

"I must decline to answer."

"Were you in Philadelphia, wearing British uniform three days ago?"

"If I should say no, it would be merely my word against Captain Grant—you would doubtless prefer to believe him."

Grant whispered in his ear, the colonel listening quietly.

"I am informed that you have already acknowledged being concealed in this house yesterday."

"I have, sir."

"Did anyone know of your presence here?"

"I was brought here—a prisoner."

"What!" in decided surprise. "Prisoner to whom?"

"I was captured by three men, dressed as Queen's Rangers, on a road some miles to the west. They made no explanation, although I have some reason to believe I was mistaken for another. I was held in a strong room in the basement overnight."

"You were not there when I searched the house," broke in Grant hoarsely.

"No," and I turned and smiled at him. "I had been brought upstairs before you arrived."

"Then you saw your captors by daylight!"

"Two of them, yes—a man called Peter, and an Irish fellow, with a chin beard."

"What!" and Mortimer started forward. "Peter and Mike in uniform! This is beyond belief. Were they alone?"

"They were apparently under the orders of a young lieutenant—the same who had command of Delavan's advance guard. I was unable to distinguish the lad's face."

"Delavan's advance guard!" and the colonel turned toward Grant. "What do you know about this, sir? Who was he?"

The captain hesitated, shifting uneasily on his feet.

"I—I do not know, sir," he explained loudly, driven to answer. "I merely had a glimpse of the boy when I first entered the column. I—I thought I recognized him, but was not sure."

"Who did you suppose him to be?"

"Your son, Eric, sir."

CHAPTER XIX.

Again the Cellar Room.

The father sank back in his chair, breathing heavily.

"Eric here, making use of this house, and my servants," he muttered. "I can scarcely believe it true. Was—was he here yesterday morning when you came?"

"I found no trace of his presence, sir."

There was a moment of silence, broken unexpectedly by the rustle of dress. I turned in surprise, and saw Claire standing quietly in the doorway.

"Pardon me, gentlemen," she said softly, "but perhaps I can explain much of this mystery, and establish the identity of Major Lawrence."

Seldon sprang forward and offered her a chair, but she merely thanked him with a bow, and remained standing, her eyes upon her father. Not once had she even glanced toward either Grant or me, but I noticed the slight flush of color on cheek evidencing her excitement. What was she going to explain? How account for the strange actions of the past few days? How came she to be here at all? Would she confess the truth immediately before us all, or would she feel justified in concealment? I could not, would not, doubt the honesty of the girl's heart, and yet was it possible for her to compel these men to accept her version of all which had occurred? Would she venture a falsehood to protect me, or to save herself?

"I—I have already explained much," I hastened to say, thinking she might wish to know.

"I overheard what has already been said," she returned quickly, but without looking toward me, "and appreciate the care with which my name has thus far been guarded. Now I am ready to make my own explanation."

"But, first, Claire," said her father soberly, "how does it happen you are here? We supposed you in the hands of 'Red' Fagin, and a squadron of my men are out now tracking the fellows."

"I was not in the house when they came, father; Peter and I were back of the stables, fortunately mounted. We were obliged to ride hard, as we were chased several miles, and returned as soon as it appeared safe."

"And Eric?"

"He departed before Captain Grant arrived," she replied unhesitatingly, "and must be already safe within his own lines."

"It was Eric, then?"

"Who else could it be? Surely Captain Grant told you as much."

The colonel's eyes wandered about the little group, and his doubt and bewilderment were clearly evident.

"Do you know Eric's purpose in coming here? in presuming to act as an officer in Delavan's company?"

"He did not inform me, sir."

"You know this man?"

She turned, and looked at me for the first time, a silent plea in her blue eyes.

"I do—he is Major Lawrence of General Washington's army," her voice low, but distinct. "I have known him since the Continental troops were first quartered in Philadelphia."

I started slightly, yet as instantly recovered my outward composure, realizing that this strange girl again purposed protecting me from exposure, even at the expense of a falsehood.

"Indeed; you were doubtless aware then that he was within Sir Henry Clinton's lines as a spy?"

"Far from it," she laughed easily, not glancing toward me, but permitting her eyes to rest upon the bewildered face of Captain Grant. "Why, that idea is perfectly absurd. Did you tell my father so ridiculous a story, captain?"

"Did I! What else could I say?" he growled indignantly. "He was within our lines in British uniform."

The Ranger scowled at him in sullen response, his face dark with passion.

"Hell's acre! This thing may touch your humor, but not mine. What is the meaning of your words, Mistress Claire? Are you shameless, forgetting the pledge between us?"

She turned her face toward him as a queen might, her head held high, her cheeks flaming.

"You have said your answer once for all, Captain Grant. There is no pledge between us."

"But, daughter," broke in the colonel, still bewildered by this sudden explosion. "I can scarcely comprehend; surely it was understood that you were affianced to this son of an old neighbor."

"Understood, yes, by those who kindly arranged the affair, but the fact that I might possess a heart of my own was entirely overlooked. As a child I permitted you to plan my future without protest. I am a woman now; I have been out in the world; the war has taken all girlhood from me. If this were not true the way Captain Grant has watched my every action in Philadelphia would have disgusted me with the thought of ever intrusting my happiness to him. He has openly quarreled with every man I have spoken to, or danced with. He has made me the sport of all the city gallants by jealous wrangling. Now it is done with. 'Tis in shame that I am driven to say all this here in presence of these gentlemen, but I will not stand in silence while Major Lawrence is being condemned as a spy. He was at the dance to meet again with me, and for no other purpose."

Colonel Mortimer's face had expressed many emotions, while she was speaking, but now it hardened into military severity, his hand clinched on the arm of the chair.

"Do I understand, then, that this officer was there at your request?"

"I think," hesitating slightly, "he knew he was not unwelcome."

"And," his voice breaking slightly, "he came here also to meet you?"

"Certainly not," her head lifting indignantly. "I am your daughter, and am guilty of nothing unworthy our family name. I have no shame to confess. Major Lawrence is an officer and a gentleman, the friend of Washington, and my friend also. At any other time he would be a welcome guest at our table. If he risked his life to meet with me in Philadelphia it was done openly and honorably in the midst of acquaintances. There has been nothing hidden or clandestine. He was brought to Elmhurst a prisoner, bound to his horse, guarded by armed men. In the morning I learned his identity, and at once had him released. That is all," and she gave a gesture with her hands, "and I trust, gentlemen, my explanation will be sufficient."

"And you warned him of my suspicions in Philadelphia," exclaimed Grant, "causing him to attack me, and then released him from arrest here!"

"That is partially true; you endeavored to provoke a quarrel the moment you met. I put an end to that, as I did not fall into your hands as a prisoner. When you appeared at this house I assisted his escape."

"But, Claire, how came you here? Why did you leave Philadelphia?"

"Because I have a brother, sir, whom I can only meet in secret," she replied quietly. "I came without thought of danger, for war has not cost us friends in this country; our home has remained until now untouched by vandals, and I felt amply protected by those who accompanied me upon the ride—our old house servants." She knelt at the side of his chair, her head bowed upon his arm, and his hand stroked her hair. "I regret if I have seemed unmaidenly, or done what you may deem wrong, father, for it has all seemed right to me."

The colonel looked at us silently for what seemed a long while, his fingers fondling the tresses of the girl's hair.

"This situation leaves me in an embarrassing predicament," he admitted at last slowly. "I hardly know what is my duty either as a father, or an officer of the king. No matter what his purpose may have been this man penetrated our lines in disguise; he admittedly exercised command of those irregulars who attacked and routed Delavan's column, and has since been prowling about disguised as a countryman. Merely because my daughter confesses to a friendship between them can hardly justify me in setting him at liberty."

He paused, rising to his feet, his eyes on my face. The girl lifted her head, looking up at him.

"Major Lawrence, I shall hold you prisoner of war, referring your case to Sir Henry Clinton. In the meanwhile you shall receive every consideration possible in accordance with your rank. I am now going to join my men in pursuit of Fagin. Captain Grant, you will accompany me, and, Mr. Seldon, I shall leave you in charge of the prisoner until we return."

He took a step toward the door; then turned to his daughter.

"I shall expect you to be ready to ride with us on our return to Philadelphia, Claire," he said kindly. "It is evidently not safe for you to remain here alone."

"Very well, father."

"Come, Grant, we shall have to ride hard to overtake our men."

The captain started reluctantly, scowling at me as he passed.

"I should enjoy having the privilege of being left in charge here," he said, for my benefit.

"No doubt, sir," returned Mortimer coldly. "But I have already selected Mr. Seldon for that duty."

They left the house together, and I watched them ride past the window, followed by a dozen soldiers. As they disappeared Seldon turned his eyes to my face. He was rather a pleasant looking young man, but possessed an aggressive chin.

"While I have no orders to that effect, major," he said quietly, "I would take the responsibility of accepting your parole."

"Are you not rather reckless?"

"Oh, I think not," smilingly. "I would have you give it to Mistress Mortimer—surely under those conditions you would never run away."

She stole a swift glance at me, shaking her head.

"That would be too strong an imprisonment," I responded instantly. "Under all conditions I prefer not to give my parole."

"Very well, sir," more stiffly, his geniality vanishing with my rather curt refusal. "Then I shall take all necessary precautions to prevent escape." He stepped aside to the hall door. "You may send two men in here, Ferguson."

They entered quietly, glancing about with some curiosity, but taking position on either side of me at Seldon's command. Claire stood beside the table in silence, her glance out the window. Only as we wheeled about to leave the room did her eyes meet mine. That swift glimpse beneath the dark lashes caused me to leave the room with swiftly beating heart. At the door I stole another glance backward, but she had sunk into a chair, her face concealed in her hands. With Seldon ahead, and the two guards behind, I tramped down the stairs into the basement, and was again locked within the walls of the strong room.

As the lock clicked I sat down upon the bunk far from being disheartened. Fate had been playing strange pranks, but I was not left without hope, for I felt assured I had read correctly the swift message of those uplifted blue eyes. She had not wished me to accept parole; then there must be some plan of escape already formulated in her mind. I could only wait quietly, striving to solve the meaning of those suddenly uplifted blue eyes, and the promise they contained.

CHAPTER XX.

The Ladys Plan.

I must have remained there an hour undisturbed, listening to faint sounds in the rooms above, and pacing out between the iron bars at a little distance, the blue sky, and green waving branches. Once, with my ear pressed against the door, I could distinguish the regular steps of a sentinel pacing back and forth, and out of the window I caught the silhouette of a cocked hat and brown gun barrel. Seldon was evidently guarding me with the utmost care.

By the light I judged the time somewhat beyond noon, when the door opened suddenly, and Peter appeared bearing a tray. He was as mysteriously silent and professional as upon his first visit, not even favoring me with a glance, his mind apparently intent upon his duties, moving about noiselessly, wiping the table, and placing his load of dishes thereon with great care that all should be arranged in perfect order. The door remained ajar during these preparations, a Queen's Ranger standing there motionless, leaning on his gun, and eyeing us steadily. At last Peter drew up a chair, dusted it, and with wave of the hand invited me to be seated.

"Quck, Now, Yer Damn Rebel," He Said Hoarsely; "Be Up an' Lam Me One, an' Here's the Rope!"

I ate as slowly as possible, while he stood over me, anticipating my every want. He might have been a wax figure, so mechanically did he operate, and the sentinel never for an instant relaxed his scrutiny.

I had picked up almost the last crumb, toying with it in desperation, when a voice spoke apparently from the head of the stair. The Ranger turned his head to answer, and at the instant a paper pellet was crushed into my hand. Instinctively my fingers closed over it, and as the guard turned back again, gruffly ordering us to hurry up, Peter was at the opposite side of the table gathering up the dishes, his bald head shining brilliantly, his eyes as dull as those of a fish. I leaned back watching him, clutching the paper pellet in the palm of one hand, until he passed out with his tray, and the door clicked behind him. Not once did he glance toward me, or acknowledge my presence. Fearful lest I might be spied upon, my heart beating wildly in anticipation, I lay down in the bunk with face to the wall, and unrolled the pellet. It contained but a few words, hastily scribbled, in a lady's delicate handwriting. "Don't despair; if they are away until after dark I will arrange. Can do nothing before." There was no signature, but I needed none to know.

The hours of that afternoon dragged themselves along with exasperating slowness, as I listened for hoofbeats, imagining every sound the approach of returning horsemen. With no longer any doubt of her intention, my apprehension riveted itself on the possibility of the British getting back before darkness gave opportunity for putting her plans into execution. Darkness closed me in, but no one came with food or wood.

I pressed my face against the bars striving to look into the night, my only reward the glimpse of a few distant stars. Suddenly, as I stood there, voices sounded at a distance, the words indistinguishable, and then footsteps crushed along the graveled footpath, as though a number of men were running toward the back of the house. They were below my range of vision, but a moment later I heard the sounds of scattered shots, and saw the sharp flash of firing. I was still clinging to the bars, trying to determine what it all meant, when the door was opened. The light of a lantern in his hand revealed a green and white uniform, and the deeply seamed face of a man of fifty.

"Quick now, yer damned rebel," he said hoarsely. "Be up an' lam me one, and' here's the rope."

"What!"

"Didn't yer hear? or wasn't yer told the game? Sufferin' Moses, it's got to be played swift, or you'll be here an' me. That's what that bald-headed skunk is out there leadin' 'em off for, I'm ter come in wid yer supper; yo slug me first sight, bind me up wid the rope, and skip. 'Tis a dirty job, but the friends of yo pay well for it, so come on now."

(To be continued.)

"Pardon Me, Gentlemen," She Said Softly, "but Perhaps I Can Explain Much of This Mystery."

New One.

"When I saw Speedem today he was on the qui vive."

Marriage.

The couple were being married by an out-of-town justice of the peace.

"Until death do you part?" the magistrate asked, in the usual form.

Suiting Himself.

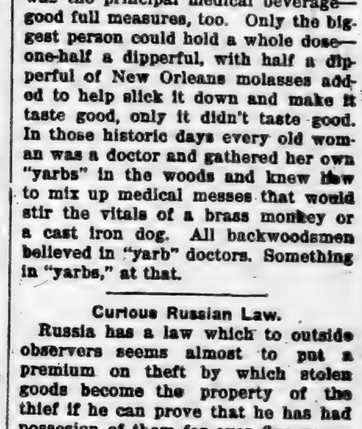
The modern small boy is painfully cautious.

"Would you like to come to our bonfire on the 5th of November?" one was asked.

Back came an answer worthy of a cabinet minister: "Well, if I haven't a bonfire of my own, and if my father doesn't take me to Belle Vue, and if I'm not asked to a better bonfire, I'll be awfully glad to come."—Manchester Guardian.

Turkish Counting of Time.

Through the center of the mosque of St. Sophia runs the theoretical meridian which gave the Turks true local time—one hour and fifty-six minutes fifty-two seconds fast on Greenwich—until, two years ago, the new government fell in with the standard system of time zones, and came into the eastern European zone, exactly two hours ahead of Greenwich time. For religious purposes, however, 12 o'clock always happens at sunset, and noon thus wanders with the seasons all round the clock.—Westminster Gazette.



Frontier Medical List.

In good old frontier days castor oil was the principal medical beverage—good full measures, too. Only the biggest person could hold a whole dose—one-half a dipperful, with half a dipperful of New Orleans molasses added to help slick it down and make it taste good, only it didn't taste good. In those historic days every old woman was a doctor and gathered her own "yarbs" in the woods and knew how to mix up medical messes that would stir the vitals of a brass monkey or a cast iron dog. All backwoodsmen believed in "yarb" doctors. Something in "yarbs," at that.

Curious Russian Law.

Russia has a law which to outside observers seems almost to put a premium on theft by which stolen goods become the property of the thief if he can prove that he has had possession of them for over five years. In the thieves' market—which is, of course, licensed by the police—goods that admittedly have been stolen (more than five years before) are openly offered for sale, and the place is a veritable Mecca for the light fingered gentry and their enterprising friends, as also for the more honest members of society, who secure many a tempting bargain.

CLANTON LITTLE KNOWS

HER PROSPECTS BRIGHTEN AS THE DAYS GO BY.

Right on the outskirts of Clanton, northern and eastern capital by the millions is being poured into our channels of trade, yet Clanton seems not to appreciate its opportunity, or the possibilities that are coming our way. The Alabama-Interstate Power Company is expending thousands upon thousands of dollars in the erection of the dam across Coosa river, near our eastern gate, and with the completion of the dam and the installation of machinery such as they propose to install, Clanton will be the most favored town in the state.

The company is anxious to secure workmen; they will not turn down any applicant who is able to work; they are scouring the north, south, east and west for men; they come and go; sometimes a hundred arrive in a bunch and then a few leave; we are informed that of the many idle workmen in Clanton, but one or two have applied for work at the plant. To be sure we do not refer to carpenters, for quite a number of Clanton carpenters are at work out there. But day laborers; men who want to work one day and remain idle the other six—but few of this kind have applied.

When the plant is completed, Clanton will have the cheapest electric light and power supply in all this section; our rural friends may then abandon the old kerosene lamp and adorn their homes with electric bulbs, turn their corn shellers and other machinery with "greased lightning" and feel the progressive impulse which the Interstate Fower people are infusing into the veins of others all around them,

The railroad from Ocampo to the dam has been completed; the company is now receiving large supplies, shipped out from Birmingham and transmitted to the camp over the Ocampo road, yet hundreds of dollars are being spent in Clanton. Would it not be well for our merchants to organize a "sort" of co-operative society among themselves and "go out after" this trade? We throw it out merely as a suggestion, but we are confident that if our merchants would go after this trade systematically it would all be secured, in which event large slices of money, which now go to Birmingham, could be kept at home.

THEY HAVE COMMENCED THEIR WORK.

The following named gentlemen were organized into a Grand Jury for Chilton County by Judge W. W. Pearson, last Monday morning to whom he delivered an exceptionally strong charge, after which he turned them over to Special Bailiff Best. The Jury organized with Mr. T. L. Elam, as foreman, and went immediately to work.

It will be noticed that the Grand Jury is composed of fifteen farmers, two merchants and one printer; it will also be observed that the body comes from nine of the sixteen precincts in the county, as follows: One each from six, ten and fourteen; two each from two, three nine and fifteen; three from five and four from four.

There are no representatives on the Jury from precincts one, seven, eight, eleven, twelve, thirteen and sixteen.

In another column will be found a part of the able charge rendered by Judge Pearson, (time and space precluded giving the entire charge in this issue); the balance of this charge will be printed next week and every line of it should be read with care. It is an exceptionally able charge and will prove interesting as well as instructive reading. We are also printing the lists of Juries number one, two and the additional jurors drawn for this week of the court.

Unfortunately four of the jurors drawn could not be served with summons, one was discharged (Mr. C. W. Cox) for good and sufficient reason, so the Judge had to resort to the jury box to complete the venirie. One of these drawn, Mr. John W. Baker, is kept at his home by the serious illness of his mother, and he too was excused.

Hon. Edmund W. Pettus, grandson of Senator E. W. Pettus, and a brilliant young attorney of Selma, is here attending court.

Mr. Ed. Driver has sold his interest in the barber shop heretofore conducted by him and Mr. Walter Driver. the latter becoming sole owner of the "plant." Mr. Driver will engage in other business in Clanton.

DO THE PEOPLE APPROVE THIS POLICY?

Honest men frequently have honest differences of opinion. In such cases the questions involved are submitted to experts for decision. Good business and good morals demand the decision be accepted as final.

Asserting that they were working unselfishly in the interest of the general public, certain active individuals sought to secure a sweeping reduction in the freight and passenger rates charged by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in the state of Alabama.

The officials of the road, men qualified by years of practical experience, knew that the rates charged were as low as consistent with safe business methods, and in many instances too low. As men trained in operating a railroad in the interest of the public they submitted their arguments in the interest of both the state and the railroad.

They were over-ruled. Sweeping rate reductions were put into effect. An experiment was engaged in with disastrous results to the treasury of the company and the ability of the company to supply to the people of Alabama the satisfactory service to which the people are entitled.

After two years the old rates were restored, and the questions involved submitted not alone to a duly constituted court of law, but to men of known integrity and unquestioned ability who served as special masters

The results of the judicial decision of the findings of the special masters proved the position of the L. & N., taken on the advice of men of expert knowledge, to be correct. The result of the rate reduction experiment was also eloquent testimony to the correctness of that position.

To one not inspired by other than patriotic and unselfish motives it would seem that the rates of the L. & N. had been subjected to sufficient test. It would seem that the agitation would stop, and that the men engaged in the operation of the L. & N. be permitted to devote their undivided effort to giving prompt and satisfactory service.

We suggest these facts to the people, because we believe that once the policy as outlined is fully understood, it will be repudiated by the people. We do not believe the people will permit a property operated in the integrest of the development and prosperity of the people to be used in this way to gratify personal political ambitions.

JUDGE PEARSON'S CHARGE TO THE GRAND JURY.

GENTLEMEN OF THE GRAND JURY:

Any one who is moved by passion is not fitted to deliberate fairly and weigh the guilt or innocence of him who has caused such passion, and the same thing is true of fear, affection and reward, or the hope of reward. A juror should fear to do wrong, but he should not fear anything. Just as fear might operate as a barrier to justice on the one hand, so affection would likely do on the other hand. It has been said that a man who has plenty money and is willing to use it can influence courts and juries is the subject of discussion in America though he may be steeped in crime. I fear that guilty men are too rarely indicted and convicted, and that the hope of reward in some form is largely responsible for the miscarriage of justice in such cases. The law can never be supreme or worthy of support unless its execution is placed in the hands of men who cannot be bribed directly or indirectly.

All crimes are divided into felonies and misdemeanors; felonies are punished by death or imprisonment in the penitentiary; all other crimes are misdemeanors. It is the duty of the Grand Jury to return a true bill against every defendant charged with felony where the evidence convinces it or one of its number that such defendant is guilty as charged. The Petit Jury has no discretion in such cases by reason of the enormity of the offense. The same thing is true of a large number of misdemeanors set out in Section 7286 of the criminal code. Of these misdemeanors I call your attention especially to:

1. Violations of the prohibition law.

2. Carrying pistols concealed or on premises not owned or in the possession of the defendant.

3. Gaming.

4. As to all misdemeanors not mentioned in Section 7286 of the Criminal Code, you may return an indictment or not, as you think best for the county.

You will carefully examine all cases of felony and return indictments wherein the evidence justifies it.

I will not mention all of the misdemeanors cited in Section 7286 which are to be treated by you in the same manner that you treat felonies, but there are one or two to which I call your attention.

In speaking with your Sheriff this morning with reference to those things which he thought I should stress in my charge, he stated that the violations of the prohibition law should receive special attention. My understanding is that this law is not violated with so much frequency as formerly, and I hope this is true, but your Sheriff is in position to know better than any one of these violations and I trust you will give the matter faithful attention.

Carrying concealed weapons:—It has been charged to our section (the South) that many lives are lost because of the handy use of weapons upon the person of those engaged in altercations. If we could stop the carrying of concealed weapons many lives would be saved yearly which are snuffed out by the ever present pistol or knife.

The only place where a man has a right to carry a weapon is on his own premises, or upon premises under his control or upon the public highway, and even then he is not permitted under the law to carry such weapons concealed.

It is not always best to find indictments against every one upon whom information is given, or proof is positive. Act for the best interests of your county and for society. For instance, if you should find two darkies out in the bushes engaged in crap shooting, or two white men engaged in an altercation where no great injustice or injury has been done, it is with you as to the return of an indictment. Perhaps the best interests of the county do not warrant an indictment in every case.

My attention has been called to the inadequate water supply at the court house. You gentlemen should consult with the Commissioners and remedy this evil at once. An extra well has been suggested; it is for you to determine whether this is necessary, or if not, then what is best for the interests of the county.

It is also your duty to see that adequate space is provided for the use of your officials. It was suggested that the strip of land just to the east of the Court House be purchased, but it has since been determined that sufficient space can be secured for building an addition to the Court House in the rear of the present building, which land is owned by the county. This is for your investigation.

It has also been reported that by the expenditure of a few dollars all the offices of the lower floor can be heated by the present system used in this room. Quite a large sum can be saved to the county each year if this system is extended to the other offices and rooms. Look into this matter, gentlemen, after consulting with the several officers and if you think it a saving to the county recommend its installation.

If any Grand Juror knows or has reason to believe that the law has been violated in this county it is his duty to inform his fellow jurors, who must investigate such violation.

A grand juror must not be present at or take any part in the deliberation of his fellow jurors respecting any public offense with which he is charged, or which was committed against his person or property, or when he is a prosecutor, or where he is connected by blood or marriage with the person charged.

The solicitor will examine witnesses in your presence, give you legal advice touching matters connected with your duties, but must not be present when you vote on any matters before you or express your opinion on such matters.

Every citizen is invironed with private and public duties. The State furnishes as best she can protection to our lives, our property and reputation, thus assuring to us the peaceful pursuit of happiness. Hence we owe to the State the observance and maintenance of her laws. When empanelled as Grand Jurors you owe the State a higher duty. As a private citizen you may not be called on to disclose violations of the law known to you. As a grand juror you are bound to disclose to your fellow-jurors your knowledge of all violations of law.

I have promised the citizens of Chilton never to charge a Grand Jury without referring to one thing in which you are all vitally interested or until you have accomplished something tangible in the direction indicated. I guess it is useless to say that I refer to your public roads. You have permitted one or two men who are indiscreet to lead you off in one direction or another and have given rise to such an outcry that you are calling your own friends in the matter of public roads. I do not refer to any individual, they are, perhaps, on both sides, but you have permitted politics to enter into the discussion of road building. This ought not to be; politics should never enter into religion, schools or public roads. There is no room for politics in either of these. Yet when the proposition for the issuance of bonds to build roads is mentioned your nerves are so unsettled that you do not look at the matter in the proper light.

A man starting from Maplesville with a two mule team could scarcely reach Clanton with three bales of cotton; why is this? Because your roads are not such as you should have. A bond issue, properly expended, would forever settle this question for you.

I have asked your Tax Commissioner (Mr. VanDerveer) to figure out for me what proportion of the bond issue tax the farmers of the county would probably have to pay; he states that it would not be over twenty-six per cent, or in other words, every time you farmers put twenty-six cents into the building of your public roads the corporations and large industries would have to put seventy-four cents, yet you are to be large beneficiaries, and the same man above mentioned under good road conditions could come from Maplesville with his two mule team and bring seven bales of cotton.

Again you say, when this proposition is broached, that you are unable to pay for a bond issue. It would be vastly cheaper to you and to your children if good roads should be built by the issuance of bonds. Let's see for a moment. Montgomery, Elmore and Autauga have issued bonds and have built excellent systems of roads; no one in these counties complains of the additional taxation for they have received much more in return than they paid for the roads.

You are the richest county in the entire judicial circuit. I have not mentioned other counties which have built roads with bonds because I am confining myself to this judicial circuit.

You are in better financial condition than any one of these counties; you have progressed forty per cent in population in the last decade, whereas the best or foremost of the other counties has progressed but fourteen per cent.

Look to your own interests, gentlemen; let prejudice and politics stay out of your road questions and soon you will have a system of roads which will be the pride of every citizen within the county.

More than 2700 years ago one of the kings of Judea delivered substantially the following charge to his judges:

"Consider what ye do, for ye judge not for man only, but for the Lord, and he is with you in the judgment. Now therefore let the fear of the Lord be upon you, take heed and do right, for there is no iniquity with the Lord our God, nor respect of persons, nor taking of gifts. Do right in the fear of the Lord faithfully, and with a perfect heart. Deal courageously and the Lord be with the good."

If you and the Court follow the behests of this charge, we shall merit from the patriotic citizens of Chilton county the plaudit, well done, good and faithful servants!

J. C. JONES & CO.

GO INTO VOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY.

The firm of J. C. Jones & Company, composed of Messrs. James C. Jones and Ross Mullins, went into voluntary bankruptcy Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. George W. Stuart of Montgomery was appointed Trustee and is now busily engaged in taking an inventory of the stock and going over the assets of the firm.

The schedule filed in Montgomery shows liabilities of about $40,000 and assets of approximately $42,000.

The majority of the creditors are Montgomery, Birmingham, Atlanta and Clanton firms.

The failure is attributed to poor collections and over purchases of stock in contemplation of a heavy Fall trade.

CONFIDENCE IN WILSON AND MARSHALL

IF COTTON GOES DOWN YOU WIN; IF IT GOES UP YOU WIN TOO.

With an enthusiasm born of faith in the democracy to "make good" in every respect and as an effectual stop to the old cry of "Cleveland prices," which, by the way, was a democratic inheritance of republican misrule, Mr. F. A. Gulledge has made the following proposition to those who are fearful of results, he being himself so optimistic that he proposes to take all the chances and leave the other fellow with nothing but profit, no matter which way "the cat hops"

His proposition is this—

He will sell or rent land in any quantity to those who are willing to work the purchase money or rent to be paid in cotton at ten cents per pound; if cotton goes to a higher price at anytime during the rent year or during the purchase season, he is to give full market price as shown by cotton quotations at the time of delivery; at no time will he give less than ten cents per pound, whether the market goes under that price or not.

The above is fair. The lands are good. Conditions obtaining in the cotton belt are such that the farmer who has a little money can buy land cheap and on easy terms. Cotton is bound to go higher. Now is the time to buy land. Don't wait for the democratic administration to fulfill its promises.

Now let those who are fearful of democratic success "get busy;" if cotton goes down you get a homestead at high prices regardless of the market; if it goes up you get the full market price.

This looks like a snap to those who wish to purchase desirable farm land upon which to build a home.

Such opportunities do not knock at one's door often; its an excellent opportunity for industrious young men to make for themselves a home, at a price which will net them a neat income.

THE OLIVETTE COMPANY

THE NEXT ATTRACTION; HELP THE BOYS; HELP CLANTON.

On Saturday evening, December 14th, the "Clanton Amusement Association" will present the Olivette Company as an attraction to Clantonites. The Company comes highly recommended as an amusement company. It is a neat, clean performance, to which Clanton's most exclusive and most exacting can go without the least fear of becoming "tainted"

The young men having the entertainment in charge have gone to considerable expense to secure this company; upon the patronage accorded it will largely depend other attractions for Clanton.

If they are handed a "lemon" as has been the case recently, Clanton need not expect other attractions to be booked; if expenses are paid the probability is that other attractions will be secured to help while away the long, dull, Winter hours.

GOOD ROADS WITHIN REACH

ORGANIZED EFFORT WILL SECURE THEM.

The Press publishes this week several clippings from state exchanges showing what others are doing in the way of securing good roads. We have no intention or desire to try to rejuvinate the bond issue question; that is a matter to which our people will have to be educated by slow growth.

It is none the less obvious, however, to those who have made a study of good roads and the way to secure them, that a bond issue must eventually come, if Chilton is to enjoy the blessings which other counties have secured.

Judge Pearson has made that clear in his charge to the Grand Jury, the latter part of which we present this week.

But, just out on the river, at the dam station, is an inexhaustible supply of rock and gravel; there is, at this same point, a tremendous rock crusher, powerful enough to crush the largest rock.

With something like organized effort, this rock and gravel can be secured and the crushing machine can be bought, rented or otherwise secured to crush sufficient rock to lay a two foot rock foundation upon every road in Chilton county. When the road beds are made ready for the reception of the rock it will be an easy matter to have it distributed, provided there is organization and no bickering.

The matter is well worth investigation. Now lets have a "get together" meeting and embrace this opportunity.

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidence of a battle and a dead man across the threshold. Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once. Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war.

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

I comprehended the plan in a flash. She had discovered a sentry money would buy; to lead the others away long enough to effect my escape, Peter had taken to the woods with a gun. Whether he escaped or was captured, the delay would be short. With the knowledge came action. I bore the unresisting Ranger to the floor, hurling down the tray of food he bore in a mass of broken crockery, and bound him hand and foot, leaving the fellow lying across the open doorway. He was without arms, except his heavy gun, which I left beside him. An instant I paused to ask a question, holding aloft the lantern so as to see his face.

"Now, man, speak quick; you were given some word for me? Some instructions how I was to get away?"

"Sure; but ye drew those cords tight! You are to go upstairs, out the front door, and turn to the right; there's a horse in the thicket beyond the summer house. Damnation, loosen that ankle rope, will ye?"

I gave it a twitch, but felt little compassion for the fellow, and ran up the steps, leaving the lantern below. I knew the way even in the dark, and experienced little trouble in feeling my passage. I met with no interference, and heard no sound, the house seemingly deserted. Only as I opened the front door could I hear distant, irregular firing to the northwest. Assured that no guard remained, I flung myself recklessly over the porch rail onto the smooth turf of the lawn. The dim outlines of the latticed summer house could be discerned not thirty feet distant, and I started toward it unhesitatingly. I had made half the distance when a horse neighed suddenly to my right, and, startled at the sound, I fell flat, creeping cautiously forward into the shadow of a low bush. I had risen to my knees, believing the animal must be the one left there for my use, when I heard the growl of a voice, a man's voice, from out the summer house.

For an instant I could not locate the sound nor distinguish it clearly; then a sentence cut the air so distinctly that I recognized the speaker. Grant! What was he doing here? Had we delayed too long? Had Fagin's pursuers returned? If so, why was he there in the summer house, and with whom was he conversing? I crouched back listening, afraid to move.

"I saw the gleam of your white skirt as I rounded the house," he exclaimed. "By Gad, I thought the horse was going to bolt with me. Fine bit of luck this, finding you out here alone. What's going on out yonder?"

There was an attack on the horse guard, and Mr. Seldon is in pursuit. But how does it happen you have returned alone? Has anything occurred to my father?"

I judged from the sound that he seated himself before answering, and there was a flintiness sufficiently noticeable, so as to cause the girl to ask anxiously:

"He has not been injured?"

"Who, the colonel?" with a short laugh. "No fear of that while pursuing those fellows; they ride too fast, and are scattered by now all the way from here to the Atlantic. Probably a pound of the same gang are there fighting Seldon. Trouble with the colonel is he takes the affair too seriously; imagines he is actually on the trail, and proposes to remain out all night. I became tired of such foolishness and rode back."

"You mean you left? Deserted?"

"Ca, hardly that," lazily. "You see I was sent out with a detachment to ride down the Lewiston road. I merely left my sergeant in command and turned my horse's head this way. I can be back by morning, and I wanted to see you."

"To see me, Captain Grant! You disobeyed my father's orders to ride back and see me? I hardly appreciate the honor."

"Oh, I suppose not," his tone grown suddenly bitter. "But I am here just the same, and propose carrying out my intention. What do you think I am made of—wood? You treat me as though I possessed no feelings to be hurt. See here, Claire, don't draw away from me like that. What has got into you lately? You have led me a merry chase all winter in Philadelphia, but now you have even dared to flaunt me to my face, and in the presence of your father. Do you suppose I am the kind to stand for that? What is the matter, girl? Who has come between us? Is it that rascally rebel? No; you stay where you are, and answer me. That is what I came back alone for, to find out."

She was upon her feet, and I could even see her hand clasping a lattice of the summer house.

"Why do you ask this? What right have you? There was never a promise between us."

"The understanding has existed for ten years; never denied until now," he protested hotly. "You knew I loved you; I've fought a dozen men on your account—"

"True enough," she broke in, "you have challenged every gentleman who has dared address me. Did you think such swashbuckling was going to win my heart? Any girl possessing self-respect would revolt at such methods. Whatever affection I may have felt for you as a boy has been driven from me by these actions. You wanted a slave, a servant, not a companion, and it is not in Mortimer blood to yield to every whim, to every crack of the whip. I never loved you, never confessed I did. I tried to be obedient, endeavored to like you to please my father, but this past winter has so thoroughly revealed your real character that I will pretend no longer."

"My character! We have known each other from childhood. I know well enough what has made the difference in you."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, indeed; it's that damned Continental spy."

"It has been some one all along, according to your theory—any gentleman who has shown me ordinary kindness. You have called out Captain Kincade, Lieutenant Mathieson, Major Lang, and others, just to prove your ownership of me. You have made me the laughing stock of Philadelphia. Now it pleases you to select Major Lawrence with whom to associate my name. Because he danced with me once you feel justified in quarreling with him in my presence, in goading him into fighting you. It was the act of a cowardly bully. Whatever respect I may once have had for you, Captain Grant, has been dissipated this past winter."

"Can you tell me it is not Lawrence?"

"I could tell you, and very plainly, but I refuse to be questioned."

"Well, by Gad! I know without asking," and he sprang to his feet, gripping her hand. "You've helped that fellow against me from the first. I'll put up with it no longer. I came back here tonight desperate, prepared to resort to any measures. I meant to give you a chance, and, by heaven! I have. Do you think I am the sort of man you can play with? If I can have you only by force then it is going to be that. Oh, don't try to pull away! I've got you now just as I wanted you—alone! Your father is not here, did that fool Seldon is busy enough out yonder. There is not even a guard to this place. Do you know what he made me do?"

She made no answer, but the silence seemed to fan his anger.

"Why, we must work. Walk, will you? Just the same. There's a parson in the village, and I've got a special license in my pocket. I'm wanting none of your tantrums, and by tomorrow you'll have come to your senses. Now will you go quietly, or shall I make you?"

She wrenched away from him; and there was a moment's struggle, and then her white-robed figure sprang forth into the starlight. I saw him grasp her, tearing the shoulder of her dress with the fierce grip of his fingers. I was already upon my feet, crouched behind the bush, prepared to spring. She drew back, her face white as marble.

"You coward! You cur!"

"Hold your temper, mistress," with a snarling laugh. "I know how to conquer you."

That moment I reached him.

CHAPTER XXI.

Words of Love.

In spite of the fact that he was armed the advantage was all with me. His grip on the girl dragged her to the ground with him, but she rolled aside as we grappled like two wild beasts, my fingers at his throat. I knew the strength of the man, but my first blow had sent his brain reeling, while the surprise of my unexpected assault gave me the grip sought. He struggled to one knee, wrenching his arms free, but went down again as my fist crashed against his jaw. Then it was arm to arm, muscle to muscle, every sinew strained as we clung to each other, striving for mastery. He fought like a fiend, gouging and snapping to make me break my hold, but I only clung the closer, twisting one hand free, and driving my fist into his face. At last I gripped his pistol, wrenched it forth, and struck with the butt. He sank back, limp and breathless, and I rose to my knees looking down into the upturned face. Almost at the moment her hand touched my shoulder.

"Is he dead? Have you killed him?"

"Far from it," I answered gladly. "He is merely stunned, and will revive presently, but with a good headache. I doubt not have his fun, but he is a stronger man than I."

"Oh, how wise-spoken! It reminds me to speak to me. I hope you must be somewhere near."

"Can you ride?"

"And Erie is the son of a loyalist," laughingly, "and wears a Continental uniform. I am not privileged to go so far, restrained by the limitations of sex, yet I may be equally a rebel."

"Which would seem to mean that all your kindness toward me would have been similarly given to any patriot soldier."

"Why—why, yes; I—I think so."

"And I do not, Mistress Claire; I refuse to so believe." Her eyes flashed up at me, and I lost all restraint in their swift challenge. "I am going to speak—just a word, yet I must give it utterance before I ride out into the dark, swift from you. I love you. It makes no difference to me where your sympathies may be in this struggle, you have won my heart. Look up, dear, and listen. I am going back to camp, back to the campaign. I know not what the night, what the morrow may bring. But I know forever I love you, and that if I live I shall surely come back. Will you be glad? Will you promise me welcome?"

I could feel her tremble, yet there was no shrinking in her face, no alarm.

"Oh, why were you compelled to say that! I tried so hard not to let you. I—I cannot make the promise, it would not be right."

"Not right!"

"No, you do not know me. I told you before I was a sham, a fraud, not what I appeared to be. I will not explain even to you, and you must not ask me. Only it hurts me to hear you say what you have, and be compelled to return this answer."

"You care then—you do not disguise that?"

She threw her head back proudly, making no attempt to withdraw her hands.

"Yes, I care; any woman would. It is not true that I have served you merely because you were a soldier of the Colonies. I think it was true, perhaps, at first, but—but later it was different. Oh! why do I say this! Why do I delay your departure by consenting to remain here in conversation! Major Lawrence, cannot you realize that my only desire is to have you get away safely?"

"But that is not my only desire," I protested. "It must be weeks, months, before I can hope to see you again. I am a servant of the Colonies, and must go where I am sent; we are upon the verge of a campaign involving exposure and battle. I may not even come forth alive. Must I go without a word, without a hope? Claire, Claire, sweetheart, you have no right to turn me away, because of some phantom of imagination—"

"But it is not, it is terribly real."

"I care not; I would still love you in spite of all; you may be a spy—a British spy—but the fact would mean nothing to me. I would trust you, Claire, your womanhood; I should know that whatever you did was in accordance with your conscience, and be content—if you but love me. And, thank God! I know you do."

"I—I—no! You cannot mean that!"

"Ay, but I do. Have you supposed I could not read the message of those eyes? Oh, it may be dark, dear, but there is a star-gleam, and when the lashes lift—they confess a thousand times more than your lips acknowledge. Yet I insist on the lips! Now tell me," and I held her to me, "tell me!"

"What—oh, major, please!"

"There are but three words to speak; whisper them, dear, and I go."

"Three words!"

"Such easy words; they are trembling on your lips now—I love you."

"But if I do not; if they are false. Hush! There is some one on the veranda—Seldon must have returned."

"All the more reason why you should speak quickly," I whispered, without releasing her.

"Will you go, then? At once?"

"I pledge my word."

She drew a deep breath, her eyes shadowed, but I could hear the swift pulsing of her heart.

"It—it will mean nothing—nothing."

"Of course; only a memory to dream over."

Her lashes lifted, her head tilted back upon my shoulder. For a bare instant I gazed down into the depths.

"Then—I will—I love you!"

With the words I kissed her, pressing my lips to hers; an instant they clung, and I felt the pressure of her arms, the hot blood rioting through my veins.

"Sweetheart," I whispered, "sweetheart."

"No, no!" and she thrust me from her. "You forget. I am not that. You must not think it even. See, that man is coming down the steps. He will discover Captain Grant, and it will be too late—Oh, go, major, please go!"

I turned without another word, fully realizing the danger, the necessity of action. Her hand touched mine as I grasped the rein.

"We part friends," she said softly. "Some day you may understand and forgive me."

"I understand now more than you think," I returned swiftly, "and I am coming back to learn all."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

In Spite of the Fact That He Was Armed, the Advantage Was All With Me.

Well-Chosen Words.

The Rev. R. J. Campbell, at a farewell luncheon in New York, told of a famous bishop who had married a tremendously rich widow.

"I suppose he proposed to her in appropriate and well-chosen terms. I suppose he said:

"'Dear madam, will you exchange the widow's mite for the mother?'"

The Blaine schoolhouse in Mare Hill up on the hill, the one James G. Blaine honored years ago by giving a bell, which still hangs in the belfry, is no more. It has been converted into a storeroom and moved to another site. A good many bright boys and girls, now old men and women, graduated from this historical building, and no doubt there is a feeling of sorrow as the old schoolhouse leaves the foundation it was builded upon years and years ago.—Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

Reason for Inquiry.

The following after-dinner story was related by Dr. Henry Churchill King, president of Oberlin college, before the Chicago Congregational club banquet:

"I was standing out in front of one of the big exposition buildings at the St. Louis fair, when a man came out of the building much the worse for liquor.

"'What's the name of thish here building?' he asked as he reeled away.

"I told him the name of the building.

"'Thanks,' he said. 'I was just in it and I wanted to check it off.'"

A DOCTOR'S SLEEP

Found He Had to Leave Off Coffee.

Many persons do not realize that a bad stomach will cause insomnia.

Coffee and tea drinking being such an ancient and respectable form of habit, few realize that the drug—caffeine—contained in coffee and tea, is one of the principal causes of dyspepsia and nervous troubles.

Without their usual portion of coffee or tea, the caffeine topers are nervous, irritable and fretful. That's the way with a whisky drinker. He has got to have his dram "to settle his nerves"—habit.

To leave off coffee or tea is an easy matter if you want to try it, because Postum gives a gentle but natural support to the nerves and does not contain any drug—nothing but food.

Physicians know this to be true, as one from Ga. writes:

"I have cured myself of a long-standing case of Nervous Dyspepsia by leaving off coffee and using Postum," says the doctor.

"I also enjoy refreshing sleep, of which I've been an utter stranger for 20 years.

"In treating dyspepsia in its various types, I find little trouble when I can induce patients to quit coffee and adopt Postum."

The Dr. is right and "there's a reason." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in concentrated powder form called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown.

Instant Postum is convenient, dispenses no trouble, and the flavor is always delicious. Sold by grocers—50 cup tin 30 cts.

A generous trial tin mailed for grocer's name and 2-cent stamp for postage. Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

Selma.—The stock of the Makoff-Liebermann Dry Goods Co., the Smith grocery company, the Selma Journal and the Kincey Power Printing company were all damaged by fire. The total loss is estimated at $5,000, which is fully covered by insurance. The fire originated in the establishment of the Makoff-Liebermann Dry Goods Co., and was caused by the pipes of a stove burning some ceiling. The blaze smouldered evidently for several hours before it was discovered. The Journal carried a stock of about $5,000, and their loss is estimated at about $3,000. The Smith Grocery company's stock was damaged to a small extent by smoke as was the paper stock of the Selma Journal and the Kincey Power Printing company.

to be a success from every standpoint, especially is this true when the attendance on the opening day is considered. A large number of people from all parts of the county were present.

Following is the program of the first day as carried out, which was good roads day:

Meeting called to order by President C. W. Daugette, at 11 a. m. Address by State Highway Engineer Keller of Montgomery. Address by Senator V. B. Atkins of Selma, member state highway commission. Address by James J. Smith, Birmingham.

ALABAMA DEFEATS TENNESSEE.

Birmingham—Outweighed 15 pounds to the man, and outplayed throughout three of the four quarters of the contest, the Crimson-jerseyed warriors of the University of Alabama fought their way to a 7 to 0 victory over the University of Tennessee on Rickwood Field. The contest was a spectacular example of determination and versatality pitted against brawn and power. In speed the two teams were well matched, but the superior weight of the Tennesseeans coupled with the aggressive power of their drives for three quarters kept the Alabamians fighting grimly to stave off a defeat. Three times before Alabama's open defence they rushed the pig skin within the shadow of the Crimson goal, but three times the Alabamians braced and the Tennesseeans were held for downs.

O'NEAL ADDRESSES GOVERNORS.

Richmond, Va.—Governor O'Neal, of Alabama was one of the governors who delivered an address before the conference of governors, who assembled here on December 5. His address was well received.

COURT DOCKET LOST.

Anniston.—A docket for the circuit court of Calhoun county for the year 1903 figured in the case of the Anniston City Land company, who were being sued by the state for taxes on the property of the Anniston Ins. Both Mr. Davis, general manager of the land company, and Chief Tax Commissioner Martin testified that the docket could not be found. It is said to have an important bearing on the case in question.

O'NEAL APPOINTS JUSTICES

Montgomery.—Governor O'Neal is busy making appointments of justices of the peace and constables who were elected in the recent primary, but were not run in the regular election. This situation arose as a result of the new constitutional amendment which provides that justices of the peace and constables shall be elected every four years instead of every two years as heretofore. The governor has appointed good republicans to all of the offices, but says he will not make any more appointments to these offices, as he thinks the people should have the right to elect their own officials.

THE BEST TREATMENT FOR ITCHING SCALPS, DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR

To allay itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove crusts, scales and dandruff, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, the following special treatment is most effective, agreeable and economical. On retiring, comb the hair out straight all around, then begin at the side and make a parting, gently rubbing Cuticura ointment into the parting with a bit of soft flannel held over the end of the finger. Anoint additional partings about half an inch apart until the whole scalp has been treated, the purpose being to get the Cuticura Ointment on the scalp skin rather than on the hair. It is well to place a light covering over the hair to protect the pillow from possible stain. The next morning, shampoo with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Shampoos alone may be used as often as agreeable, but once or twice a month is generally sufficient for this special treatment for women's hair.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Perils of Overdelicacy.

A bridegroom gave his best man an envelope.

"Hand it to the parson after the ceremony," he said, "but don't do it ostentatiously."

The best man followed instructions, but it seems that he performed his task too covertly, for the father of the bridegroom, after the pair had departed, believed that an omission had occurred and quietly pressed a banknote into the minister's hand. But he also was too secretive about it, and before the party broke up the bride's brother felt called upon to drag the minister aside and thrust a $10 bill upon him.

King George Superstitious.

An incident which occurred while the king was out shooting recently over the Hon. John Ward's preserves at Woolley shows that the monarch shares with many other persons the superstition about the number thirteen. The eight guns were joined at luncheon by five women of the party staying at Chilton, and the king noticing the unlucky number would not sit down until Donald Harding, the acting agent upon the estate, was called in to make the number up to fourteen.—New York Herald.

The Real Problem.

"Well, dear," said the young husband to his bride, 'I'll make out the deposit slip in your name and all you have to do is to take it to the bank."

"Yes," she responded, "but suppose I want to draw out some money some day, how will they know which is my money?"—Harper's Bazar.

Patent Discourteous.

Stranger (looking at the taximeter) —Nine dollars and fifty cents! I told you I wanted to come in the most direct way, and I think you've been driving me round about.

Cabby—Round about, eh? You ought to have hired an aeroplane.—Judge.

WOMEN SHOULD NEVER USE HARSH PHYSICS

Women are especially susceptible to constipation and their more delicate organisms rebel at the violence of cathartics and purgatives. Drastic medicines like salts, mineral waters, pills and powders may afford temporary relief, but their violent action on the stomach and bowels tends to upset the entire system.

A mild laxative is far preferable and more effective. The combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin prescribed by Dr. W. B. Caldwell, and sold in drug stores under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is ideal for women, being gentle in action, positive in effect and pleasant to the taste. A spoonful of Syrup Pepsin at night will bring natural relief next morning and, used regularly for a brief period, will so strengthen and tone the muscles of the stomach and bowels that there will be little, if any, further need for medicine.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be procured in any drug store. Your name and address on a postal to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 West St., Monticello, Ill., will bring a free trial bottle by return mail. Adv.

Wireless Map.

A novelty in the way of maps has just been issued by the German imperial post office, which has compiled a chart showing the principal wireless telegraph stations in the world. The object is to advertise the facilities now afforded in Germany for "draht-lose" telegraphy. German stations are, of course, given special prominence on the map, and in this connection it is interesting to note that the station at Neuen is claimed to be the most powerful in existence, its range being 2,100 miles. This is two hundred miles more than that of Eiffel tower.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means most important discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1. No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by druggists or mail $1.00. REPORT OF GRAND JURY

State of Alabama, Chilton County.
In the Circuit Court of said County, Fall Term, 1912.

To the Hon. W. W. Pearson, Judge of the 15th Judicial Circuit:

We, the Grand Jury, duly empanelled and sworn at the Fall Term, 1912, of the Circuit Court of Chilton county, Ala., beg leave to submit this our final report:

We have investigated ninety-eight cases alleged violations of the law and have returned into your Honor's Court fifty-three true bills.

GENERAL CONDITION OF THE COUNTY.

We find the general condition of the county as to prosperity good. The county treasury shows a substantial sum of cash on hand The report of the County Treasurer which has been verified by the committees appointed by this grand jury is hereto attached marked Exhibit A, and asked to be taken as a part of this report.

The roads of the county are in a fairly good condition, but we attribute this largely to the ideal weather we have had during the Fall rather than to any special work that has been done on the same.

Violations of the prohibition law in the county seem to be on the decrease, but disturbances of religious worship and public assemblages on the part of thoughtless young men seems to be general, and we call on all good citizens everywhere to take due notice of this and report all such violations to the proper officials and take such steps as are necessary to cut down and counteract this evil.

THE COUNTY POOR.

We find that there are seventeen inmates in the county poor house, eleven females and six males, all white except one negro female. They are well provided for as to comfort and food, and the premises are neatly and cleanly kept. We would suggest that the County Commissioners, however, provide two closets which are needed, so as to prevent inmates from having to go out in bad weather to answer calls of nature.

A fire place should be placed in the room used as a dining room as at present there is no way to provide fire in this room.

COUNTY PROPERTY.

We find the court house and jail nicely kept. The jail and court house are clean and sanitary so far as same can be kept, but there is not a sufficient watersupply for the court house or jail, and we would suggest that the Court of County Commissioners at once provide a water supply adequate for the demands. This should be attended to at once as it might cause sickness among the prisoners at the jail unless same should have immediate attention. It might be secured by digging another well, or perhaps the present well might be deepened. The Court should look into this at once and take such steps as are necessary to provide an adequate water supply.

We would also recommend that at least two more more rooms be added to the rear of the court house, so as to provide the necessary office room for transacting the work of the county. As it now is, the court house is not ample for the business of the county.

BUILDING COUNTY ROADS.

We have carefully investigated as to the sentiment of the county looking towards the building of better roads in Chilton county, and we find that the general sentiment of the county is that we need and should have better roads throughout the county, that the present roads are neither in keeping with the general progress of the county, nor are they adequate and fit for the business of the county, but there is no fixed idea among the people as to what is the best manner of securing good roads. We have carefully inquired as to the sentiment of the people as to a bond issue for the purpose of building roads, and while the majority favor a bond issue, and believes that that is not only the quickest way to secure good roads but it is at the same time the cheapest and best way, still we are constrained to say that from what we can gather from the sentiment of the people over the county at the present time we do not believe that a bond issue would carry if submitted to a vote of the people just at this time. We do believe, however, that the minds of the people are open to conviction, and that if the matter were properly submitted to them so that they might have a proper understanding of the cost, manner and meaning of a bond issue, in other words, if they properly understood it, that they would vote for a bond issue for building roads. And to the end that the people of the county may fully understand its cost and meaning, we would recommend that the County Commissioners take such steps as are necessary, acting through their secretary, to secure the services of a government expert on road building to come to Chilton county so soon as his services can be secured, and that he make a survey of the principal roads of the county and make a map of the same, and at the same time make an estimate of the cost of building good roads in this county, and that his report be given such publicity that the people may know and fully understand all about it. We believe that the small cost that this would entail on the county would be one of the best investments that the county could make.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Committees of this grand jury have investigated the books and county offices of all the officers of the county, as the law requires, and we find that the bonds of the county officers are ample, and that all books are well and carefully kept so far as we have been able to determine.

In conclusion, we would say that the heating of the court house might be more economically done by extending the heating plant now installed in such a manner as to heat the offices of the court house, this would do away with the grates in several of the offices, and the entire building could practically be heated with very little additional expense, and the saving of coal and janitor service would pay for the expense of enlarging the heating plant in a very short time. We recommend that the Commissioners Court look into this matter with a view of making this change should an investigation on their part convince them that we are right in the premises; and we also recommend that the jail be furnace heated instead of the present way. We desire to thank our able Solicitor for valuable assistance given us in the discharge of our duty, also thank your Honor, Judge W. W. Pearson, for his able charge, and the bailiff for his attendance upon our body.

Having completed our labors, we respectfully ask that we be finally discharged.

T. L. Elam, Foreman.

CAPITAL CASES SET

All of the capital cases to be tried at this term of the Court were set by Judge Pearson on Thursday for trial on next Tuesday, December 10th. Of course all of the seven cases will not be tried that day, or perhaps even that week, but they are set for that day so that those ready for trial may be gone into without unnecessary delay.

Forty-three special jurors in addition to the regular panel have been summoned for that week.

No doubt quite a large crowd will be in attendance upon court next week as several of the cases to be tried have attracted widespread attention.

ITS SECTION OF NATIONAL HIGHWAY TO BE COMPLETED BY DECEMBER 1.

Eufaula, Ala., Nov. 25.—The Barbour county section of the national highway between New York and New Orleans will be completed by December 1. This was the announcement made by the board of revenue at its meeting here Saturday.

Over a year has been spent on the roadway and it is reported as one of the best links in the system. Local automobilists and tourists have congratulated the board of revenue on the results obtained without a great outlay of money through the issue of bonds.

H. A. Woolridge, who lives north of Eufaula, has been selected by the local Commercial club to supervise the improvement work on the river road north to the Russell county line, which will be paid for by a $3,000 fund, one-third of which was appropriated by the county board of revenue and the balance raised by the Commercial club through popular subscriptions. The construction work will be started at once and with the amount to be expended it is said that the roadway can be placed in first-class condition.

Notice—Stock Law Election.

For singles—trap or field—just toss in a shell, press the button and—"PULL." The side bolt makes it easy. You don't have to tug at the barrel or watch an on-and-off device. The action stays open after each single shot is fired.—It always stays open when the magazine is empty. Five shots—three to get the cripples—each under absolute control of the trigger finger. The recoil reloads for you—kicks another shell in; takes the strain off the gun—the discomfort out of the kick—all without diminishing the drive behind the shot.

Simple take-down—a few turns of the readily handled magazine screw-cap makes cleaning, carrying and interchange of barrels quick and easy.

FOREIGN RELATIONS IS TAFT'S SUBJECT

Congress Is Told of Improvements in Consular and Diplomatic Corps and Good Results of Uncle Sam's Efforts in Latin America.

Washington, Dec. 3.—President Taft submitted to congress today the first of several messages. It was devoted to our foreign relations and in part was as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: The foreign relations of the United States actually and potentially affect the state of the Union to a degree not widely realized and hardly surpassed by any other factor in the welfare of the whole nation. The position of the United States in the moral, intellectual, and material relations of the family of nations should be a matter of vital interest to every patriotic citizen. The national prosperity and power impose upon us duties which we cannot shirk if we are to be true to our ideals. The tremendous growth of the export trade of the United States has already made that trade a very real factor in the industrial and commercial prosperity of the country. With the development of our industries the foreign commerce of the United States must rapidly become a still more essential factor in its economic welfare. Whether we have a far-seeing and wise diplomacy and are not recklessly plunged into unnecessary wars, and whether our foreign policies are based upon an intelligent grasp of present-day world conditions and a clear view of the potentialities of the future, or are governed by a temporary and timid expediency or by narrow views befitting an infant nation, are questions in the alternative consideration of which must convince any thoughtful citizen that no department of national policy offers greater opportunity for promoting the interests of the whole people on the one hand, or greater chance on the other of permanent national injury, than that which deals with the foreign relations of the United States.

The fundamental foreign policies of the United States should be raised high above the conflict of partisanship and wholly dissociated from differences as to domestic policy. In its foreign affairs the United States should present to the world a united front. The intellectual, financial, and industrial interests of the country, and the publicist, the wage earner, the farmer, and citizen of whatever occupation must co-operate in a spirit of high patriotism to promote that national solidarity which is indispensable to national efficiency and to the attainment of national ideals.

The relations of the United States with all foreign powers remain upon a sound basis of peace, harmony and friendship. A greater insistence upon justice to American citizens or interests wherever it may have been denied and a stronger emphasis of the need of mutuality in commercial and other relations have only served to strengthen our friendships with foreign countries by placing those friendships upon a firm foundation of realities as well as aspirations.

Before briefly reviewing the more important events of the last year in our foreign relations, which it is my duty to do as charged with their conduct and because diplomatic affairs are not of a nature to make it appropriate that the secretary of state make a formal annual report, I desire to touch upon some of the essentials to the safe management of the foreign relations of the United States and to endeavor, also, to define clearly certain concrete policies which are the logical modern corrollaries of the undisputed and traditional fundamentals of the foreign policy of the United States.

Reorganization of the State Department.

At the beginning of the present administration the United States, having fully entered upon its position as a world power, with the responsibilities thrust upon it by the results of the Spanish-American war, and already engaged in laying the groundwork of a vast foreign trade upon which it should one day become more and more dependent, found itself without the machinery for giving thorough attention to, and taking effective action upon, a mass of intricate business vital to American interests in every country in the world.

The deparement of state was an archaic and inadequate machine looking most of the attributes of the foreign office of any great modern power. With an appropriation made upon my recommendation by the congress on August 5, 1909, the department of state was completely reorganized.

They were created divisions of Latin-American affairs and of far eastern, near eastern, and western European affairs. To these divisions were called from the foreign service diplomatic and consular officers possessing experience and knowledge gained by actual service in different parts of the world and thus familiar with political and commercial conditions in the regions concerned. The work was highly specialized. The result is that where previously this government from time to time would emphasize in its foreign relations one or another policy, now American interests in every quarter of the globe are being cultivated with equal assiduity.

Merit System in Consular and Diplomatic Corps.

Expert knowledge and professional training must evidently be the essence of this reorganization. Without a trained foreign service there would not be men available for the work in the reorganized department of state. President Cleveland has taken the first step toward introducing the merit system in the foreign service. That had been followed by the application of the merit principle, with excellent results, to the entire consular branch. Almost nothing, however, had been done in this direction with regard to the diplomatic service. In this age of commercial diplomacy it was evidently of the first importance to train an adequate personnel in that branch of the service. Therefore, on November 26, 1909, by an executive order I placed the diplomatic service up to the grade of secretary of embassy, inclusive, upon exactly the same strictly non-partisan basis of the merit system, rigid examination for appointment and promotion only for efficiency, as had been maintained without exception in the consular service.

Success.

Successful efforts in promotion of Peace.

In the field of work toward the ideals of peace this government has endeavored, but up to now without success, to consummate two arbitration treaties which set the highest mark of the aspiration of nations toward the substitution of arbitration and reason for war in the settlement of international disputes. Through the efforts of American diplomacy several wars have been prevented or ended. Notably by the successful triparite mediation of the Argentine Republic, Brazil and the United States between Peru and Bolivia, the halting of a war in Nicaragua; the halting of internecine strife in Honduras. The government of the United States was thanked for its influence toward the restoration of amicable relations between the Argentine Republic and Bolivia. The diplomacy of the United States is active in seeking to assuage the remaining ill-feeling between this country and the Republic of Colombia. In the recent civil war in China the United States successfully joined with the other interested powers in urging an early cessation of hostilities. An agreement has been reached between the governments of Chile and Peru whereby the celebrated Tacna-Arica dispute, which has so long embittered international relations on the west coast of South America, has at last been adjusted. Simultaneously came the news that the boundary dispute between Peru and Ecuador had entered upon a stage of amicable settlement. The position of the United States in reference to the Tacna-Arica dispute between Chile and Peru has been one of non-intervention, but one of friendly influence and pacific counsel throughout the period during which the dispute in question has been the subject of interchange of views between this government and the two governments immediately concerned. In the general easing of international tension on the west coast of South America the tripartite mediation, to which I have referred, has been a most potent and beneficent factor.

China.

In China the policy of encouraging financial investment to enable that country to help itself has had the result of giving new life and practical application to the open-door policy. The consistent purpose of the present administration has been to encourage the use of American capital in the development of China by the promotion of those essential reforms to which China is pledged by treaties with the United States and other powers. The hypothecation to foreign bankers in connection with certain industrial enterprises, such as the Hukuang railways, of the national revenues upon which these reforms depended, led the department of state early in the administration to demand for American citizens participation in such enterprises, in order that the United States might have equal rights and an equal voice in all questions pertaining to the disposition of the public revenues concerned. The same policy of promoting international accord among the powers having similar treaty rights as ourselves in the matters of reform, which could not be put into practical effect without the common consent of all, was likewise adopted in the case of the loan desired by China for the reform of its currency.

Central America Needs Our Help in Debt Adjustment.

In Central America the aim has been to help such countries as Nicaragua and Honduras to help themselves. They are the immediate beneficiaries. The national benefit to the United States is two-fold. First, it is obvious that the Monroe doctrine is more vital in the neighborhood of the Panama canal and the zone of the Caribbean than anywhere else. There, too, the maintenance of that doctrine falls most heavily upon the United States. It is therefore essential that the countries within that sphere shall be removed from the jeopardy involved by heavy foreign debt and chaotic national finances and from the ever-present danger of international complications due to disorder at home. Hence the United States has been glad to encourage and support American bankers who were willing to lend a helping hand to the financial rehabilitation of such countries because this financial rehabilitation and the protection of their custom houses from being the prey of would-be dictators would remove at one stroke the menace of foreign creditors and the menace of revolutionary disorder.

The second advantage to the United States is one affecting chiefly all the southern and gulf ports and the business and industry of the south. The republics of Central American and the Caribbean possess great natural wealth. They need only a measure of stability and the means of financial regeneration to enter upon an era of peace and prosperity, bringing profit and happiness to themselves and at the same time creating conditions sure to lead to a profitable interchange of trade with this country.

COURT DISSOLVES HARRIMAN MERGER

COURT HOLDS UNION AND SOUTHERN PACIFIC DEAL IS ILLEGAL.

JUSTICE DAY READS OPINION

Wickersham Elated by Decision—Influence on Railroad World Will Be Wide Spread.

Washington.—The great Harriman merger created when the Union Pacific Railroad company bought 46 per cent of the stock of the Southern Pacific Railway system was split asunder by the supreme court of the United States as a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. Then, with the end of the merger before it, the court sent forth its portentious declaration that "while the law may not be able to enforce competition, it can reach combinations which render competition impracticable."

Justice Day announced the unanimous opinion of the court. Justice VanDeventer took no part in the consideration of the case, but his personal feeling, when he was a judge of the Utah circuit court, to the effect that the two roads were not competitors, and therefore not violation of the law, had resulted from the purchase, was reversed and annulled. Instead of following the reasoning of Justice VanDeventer and Judges Sanborn and Adams, the court in substance approved the minority holding of Judge Hook that the roads were competitors and that it was just as much a violation of the law for one road to buy the controlling stock of a competitor as it was for a holding company, as in the Northern Securities case, to buy the controlling stock of two competing companies. As the Northern Securities company plan failed nearly 10 years ago, so the Harriman plan fell.

The circuit court for the district of Utah was directed to supervise the separation of the two roads after hearings, and in emergency to appoint a receiver to sell the stock. The Union Pacific, if the circuit court sees proper, may retain control of the old Central Pacific line from Ogden to San Francisco. The decision of the lower court that there was no violation of the law in the attempt to acquire the Northern Pacific stock and the stock of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway company, afterwards abandoned, and a certain interest in the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad company, was allowed to stand.

It is the general belief here that the application of the decision to the railroad situation of the county will be wide-spread, placing a powerful precedent in the hands of the Attorney General to prevent consolidation of competing roads.

Department of justice officials, however, were not prepared to discuss the full effect of the decision. Attorney General Wickersham, elated over the outcome, issued a statement in which he simply declared the case extended principles of the Northern Securities case and reaffirmed those of the Standard Oil and St. Louis Terminal association cases.

Justice Day in his opinion first dealt with the law in the case. He spoke of the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases of last year as the final authority on the interpretation of the Sherman anti-trust act. He pointed to the decision before the Standard Oil and Tobacco case as being approved in those cases, and then proceeded to apply to this merger the principles discussed in all these decisions.

CARMORRISTS' VERDICT UPHELD BY COURT.

Rome.—The court of cessation, which has had under consideration the 15 reasons for annullment of sentence in the case of members of the Camorra recently convicted at Viterbo, of the murder of Genaro Cuccolo and his wife, has rejected all of them. Thus the judgment of the trial court has been confirmed.

End of a Great Folly.

The monocle has long since been out of fashion in England, and is soon to disappear from Paris, which has been its last stronghold. It was invented by a fop, a dandy, and its evil effects upon the eye were at once noted by oculists. The monocle first appeared at the congress of Vienna in 1814, when it was worn by its inventor. One folly, at least, has had only about a century of life.

The Sinking of the Great Titanic

WAS as nothing compared with the severe strain under which the farmers of this section were compelled to go.

On the great steamer it lasted but a few hours at best; with our people the terrific strain extended itself over weeks.

WISDOM OF SILAS.

Don't pin your faith to nothin', my son. If it won't stick without a pin it ain't worth stickin' tew.

Some fellers' necks reminds me o' hosses. They ain't no airthly use o' nobody ontil they're broke.

The great trouble with a lot o' fellers I know is that after they've laid down their principles they lay down onto 'em.

Some habits, gentleman, is like eggs—ye don't never have no idea about how bad they be till ye try to throw off the yolk.

The trouble with livin' these days as I sees it is that every time a feller earns a dollar out o' somebody else, somebody else earns a dollar and a quarter out o' him.

The chief trouble with the general run o' road commissioners, gentlemen, is that they spend more time thinkin' about the commissions than they do thinking about the roads.

The Pres'dent o' the United States ast me to be the postmaster o' this here town. But, shucks! I'm too busy swattin' flies to read all them postill cards the summer boarders sends out.

Seems to me they'd be a powerful pile o' money lying around loose for the feller that 'ld in event some kind of an inkybater arrangement whereby a hired man could hatch out suthin wuth while while he was a-settin'.

I tell ye, Bill, I've lived round these here parts goin' on to 63 years now, and I hain't never sold my vote to nobody, but all the same my time's allers been wuth from $2 ter $6 a day to somebody on 'lection day.—Harper's Weekly.

LOVELY WOMAN.

Devotion is the last love of women. —Charles de Saint-Evremond.

A woman's lot is made for her by the love she accepts.—George Eliot.

The laughter, the tears, and the song of a woman are equally deceptive.—Latin proverb.

The weaknesses of women have been given them by nature, to exercise the virtues of men.—Mme. Necker.

With soft persuasive prayers woman wields the scepter of the life which she charmeth.—Friedrich Von Schiller.

In life woman must wait until she is asked to love, as in a salon she waits for an invitation to dance.—Alphonse Karr.

The beauty of some women has days and seasons, and depends upon accidents which diminish or increase it.—Miguel de Cervantes.

The woman who plays with the love of a loyal man is a curse; she may close his heart forever against all confidence in her sex.—Anonymous.

It is the male that gives charms to womankind, that produces an air in their faces, a grace in their motions, a softness in their voices, and a delicacy in their complexions.—Joseph Addison.

GATHERED TRUTHS

Better one hard hitter than a dozen good quitters.

Many a man who knows his place is unable to keep it.

You can't always measure a good time by what it cost.

Every man declares he likes to work, but he can't prove it.

You may fail, but you might try to love your neighbor as yourself.

It takes faith to enable a man to enjoy a meal in a cheap restaurant.

Some men never get a gait on them until they see a bill collector coming.

No, Alonzo, you can't always bring a girl to time by carrying her picture in your watch case.

The first time a small boy gets into a fight and licks his opponent he loses all interest in little girls.

It is far easier for a man to hide his light under a pint cup than it is for a woman to hide her jealousy under a bushel.

JUST THOUGHTS

Some men mistake a golden opportunity for a gold brick.

No bride can see herself as her husband's mother sees her.

It doesn't pay to do favors for a man who has a poor memory.

A ball team can't win in a walk; it must have at least one run.

The history of a woman proves the matter is far too old to get a bumbling lot.

It is usually always a bitter disappointment to a girl when she learns to power man down, and he doesn't turn to drink.

CALOMEL IS ONLY SAFE WHEN YOU LET IT ALONE

Make up your mind right now that you will never again take calomel for biliousness, headache, constipation, or any other serious or slight liver trouble. "Calomel" is but a popular name given to chloride of mercury, and as you probably know, mercury is one of the most deadly and treacherous drugs—it salivates, makes bones ache and decay, hair fall out and teeth become loose.

Follow the example of the best physicians and use a pure, harmless vegetable remedy. BEARLAX will give you the results you wish painlessly, gently but positively, and without any bad after effects. BEARLAX will tone and stimulate your liver, cleanse your system and build up and strengthen your digestive organs. The price is but 50 cents per bottle, everywhere.

DR. SIMMONS Squaw Vine Wine

A Palatable Medicine especially prepared to relieve and cure the diseases which affect women

This excellent medicine is not only successful in conquering the painful and prostrating diseases that attack the female generative system but it is exceptionally pleasant to take. The usual rule that the nastier the medicine the more effective it is, is reversed in the case of Squaw Vine Wine. It is one of the pleasantest of medicines. The fresh juice of a well ripened sweet orange is not more agreeable. It is indeed a happy combination of sweet herbs compounded with just enough spirits to keep it fresh and active in its medicinal effect. Poor, tired mothers, worn out with the cares of a family and household, and suffering from those distressing aches, bearing down pains and nervousness which women only know, revive wonderfully under its strengthening and exhilirating influence. It eases pain, strengthens weakened parts, corrects irregularities, builds up a strong, vigorous body, restores brightness to the eye and color to the cheeks.

Finds Cure for Epilepsy After Years of Suffering

"My daughter was afflicted with epileptic fits for three years, the attacks coming every few weeks. We employed several doctors but they did her no good. About a year ago we heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and it certainly has proved a blessing to our little girl. She is now apparently cured and is enjoying the best of health. It is over a year since she has had a fit. We cannot speak too highly of Dr. Miles' Nervine."

MRS. FRANK ANDERSON.

Thousands of children in the United States who are suffering from attacks of epilepsy are a burden and sorrow to their parents, who would give anything to restore health to the sufferer.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

is one of the best remedies known for this affliction. It has proved beneficial to thousands of children and those who have used it have the greatest faith in it. It is a nerve tonic and antispasmodic, and when the nerves are restored to healthy action the fits disappear.

The Love Letters of a Confederate General

WE begin in the November issue a series of real love-letters written over fifty years ago by one of our national heroes to his sweetheart during the period of '61 to '65. This great general will go down to posterity as having accomplished one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the world. He was as great a lover as he was a general, therefore these letters combine authentic history and exquisite romance. They sound a human note that no other work of literature has done in a decade; it is war, it is romance, it is history, it is literature. You simply can't afford to miss this wonderful series—as a story of the Civil War now published for the first time and containing the freshness of a contemporary happening. These letters will grip you and hold your interest from first to last. Fill out the coupon and send now before you forget it.

ED MARTIN NOW ON TRIAL

COURT NEWS OF INTEREST

On Tuesday morning the Circuit Court took up the case of Ed Martin charged with the murder of C. W. Cox last August. This case has attracted much attention and is being stubbonly fought by both sides. One of the strange incidents connected with the case is that whereas Mr. A. C. Smith appears for the defense, his law partner, Mr. Tipton Mullins, is with the attorneys battling for the prosecution. This strange incident arose by reason of the fact that the co-partnership existing between the two was formed after the murder of Cox and each attorney pursued the course taken previous to the dissolution of the partnership.

The following are the jurors in the Martin case:

Will G. Conway, John H. Davis, Pete Franklin, Jonah N. McKee, J. W. Lett, Stephen A. Pate, Jack Grooms, Tom Driver, Jerry H. Armstrong. Peter Welch, Ben F. Dobbs, Jno. A. Boockhout.

A number of witnesses were examined Tuesday and the probabilities are that the case will be decided before our paper reaches its readers.

The following attorneys appear for the defense: Senator Thos. Curry, Mr. A. C. Smith, and Mr. Lee Smith of Rockford. The state is represented by Solicitor F. Boyd Tate, County Solicitor Sam Latham, Tipton Mullins and Messrs. Middleton & Reynolds.

The prisoner has about him, besides other relatives and close friends, his wife and children, who are giving him all comfort possible under the trying ordeal through which he is passing.

The brothers of Mr. C. W. Cox and his widow are in constant attendance upon the court also.

The following cases were disposed of by the court last week and Monday of this week:

Jessie Harrell, S. L.; fined $75, which has been paid, and sentenced to six months hard labor, but sentence suspended till next term of court

Mike Levy and Max Goldstein, arson; demurrers sustained, case dismissed, but defendants held under bond to next term of Grand Jury in the sum of $500 each.

Paul Shelton, S. L.; fined $150 and costs) and sentenced to six months at hard labor, but sentence suspended till next court.

Henry Bryant, defacing building fined $10 and costs.

Major Johnson,A. to M.; guilty; jury declines to assess fine.

Major Johnson, C. C. W.; pleads guilty, jury assesses fine of $50.

Edgar Edwards, S. L; not guilty.

Will Burnett, A. and B.; appeal, dismissed by defendant.

J. H. Martin, false pretenses; guilty and verdict of guilty; jury assesses fine of $1.

Mose Foshee, S. L.; appeal; jury returns verdict of guilty; jury assesses fine of $200 and recommends hard labor sentence. Court fixed punishment at six months hard labor, and execution of sentence suspended pending appeal to the Appellate Court; bond fixed at $500.

W. F. Culp, S. L.; appeal; continued.

Jack Ramsey, B. and G. L.; jury returns verdict not guilty.

Henry McDade, burglary and grand larceny; jury and verdict guilty of grand larceny.

Arthur Arrington, C. C. W.; jury returns verdict of guilty; fine fixed at $50 and hard labor recommended.

Arthur Arrington, A. to M.; jury assesses to assess fine.

Neal McCall, burglary, continued for defendant.

Mr. Higgins, A. to M.; jury and verdict of guilty of assault and battery; fine assessed by jury at $10.

Boss Young, G. L.; pleads guilty and is sentenced to eighteen months in penitentiary.

Jesse Headley, P. D.; pleads guilty; fined $10.

Mr. Jackson, P. D.; pleads guilty; fined $25.

Walter Northcutt, C. C. W.; pleads guilty and is fined $50.

Jim Reed, murder first degree; case set for Tuesday, but not yet reached.

Ed Martin, murder first degree: now being tried.

Cleve Williams, murder first degree; case set for Tuesday; but not yet reached.

Bill Oden, murder first degree; arraigned in court and pleads not guilty; case set for Tuesday, but not yet reached.

Gene Martin, murder first degree; set for Tuesday, but not yet reached.

Wilson Thomas and Jno. Davis Brown, obstructing railroad, severance demanded and granted. Each arraigned and pleads not guilty; set for Tuesday, but not reached.

Mary Pond, vagrancy; jury and verdict of guilty: jury declines to assess fine.

Rebecca Hanley, vagrancy; jury and verdict of guilty, jury declines to assess fine.

OUR NEW PREACHER

At the annual session of the Alabama Conference held at Union Springs last week, quite a number of changes were made. Two new districts were created—the Greenville and the Thomasville districts, necessitating two additional Presiding Elders. Many of the ministers were sent to new fields, some of them having served their full qaudrennium, while others had served but one year. Clanton, by order of the Bishop, is forced to give up Rev. R. J. Mills, who for three years has labored faithfully and well among the people of Clanton, making friends of all with whom he came in contact—a faithful, energetic, Godly man.

And while Clanton regrets to give him up, we none the less extend to Rev. Laban H. S. Chappelle, our new minister, a most cordial welcome. Mr. Chappelle is a man of experience in the ministry, having been a member of the Conference for twenty or more years; he is a forceful preacher, a man of genial disposition and one who will make himself felt in the religious and social life of Clanton.

Rev. Mr. Chappelle was stationed at Brewton during the last conference year, one of the strongest churches in the Alabama Conference, and Clanton should count herself extremely fortunate in having secured so excellent a gentleman and so forceful a minister.

Just when Mr. Chappell will arrive has not yet been announced, but when he does come he will receive a warm welcome, not only among the Methodists of the town, but among all classes of our citizenship.

Rev. C. A. Cornell remains upon the Prattville district as Presiding Elder, while Rev. R. J. Mills has been tranferred to Panama City, Florida.

SOME ASSIGNMENTS

For the information of those who are interested we publish below a few of the appointments made by Bishops Wilson and Kilgo at the recent Methodist Conference held at Union Springs.

Prattville District, of which Clanton is a part, have the following assignments:

C. A. Cornell, Presiding Elder; Prattville, W. P. Dickinson; Deatsville, B. M. Hurlong; Wetumpka, J. B. Airy; Eclectic, E. W. Coleman; Tallassee, W. B. Segrest; East Tallassee, T. F. Davis; Verbena, W. A. Prince; Clanton, L. H. S. Chappelle; Titus, A. F. Phenix; Randolph, J. C. Phares; Maplesville, J. F. Bilbro; Centreville, M. E. Lazenby; Autaugaville, E. B. Paul; Fort Deposit, C. C. Daniel.

Rev. J. F. Price was sent to Georgiana; S. U. Turnipseed to Thomasville; W. H. Hastings to Franklin Mission.

ED MARTIN ACQUITTED

SLAYER OF C. W. COX FOUND NOT GUILTY.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon the judge charged the jury in the Martin case, charged with the murder of Deputy Sheriff C. W. Cox and left the fate of the unfortunate man with the jury.

The defense sought to get in seventy-two special charges, but the judge allowed but fifty-two of them; the State asked for and was allowed four special charges. Perhaps the largest crowd ever assembled in the court room was present to hear the closing speech of Solicitor Tate; men and ladies from all walks of life crowded into the room and sat in rapt attention as the Solicitor gave his version of the killing and analyzed the testimony of the witnesses.

At ten o'clock last night the jury returned a verdict of not guilty and the prisoner was freed from jail, an acquitted man.

He was immediately surrounded by a large number of his friends, who congratulated him upon his extreme good fortune.

DOES ADVERTISING PAY?

READ THE ANSWER IN THE FOLLOWING:

Some people are hard to convince that persistent newspaper advertising pays. They "dab" in for a day, then "dab" out for two or three weeks. That kind, of course, does not pay handsomely, but listen at this—

Mr. P. T. Hinkle was driving down the street Tuesday morning, as he passed the Press office the Press man was standing on the sidewalk and he called out to him: "Say, Mr. Newspaper man, for goodness sake, take my advertisement out of your paper; I've been running two little three line squibs in your paper and I've about sold out everything I have and loaned out what I didn't sell; take those ads out or I'll be a bankrupt by entertaining people." While the two were talking the matter over two other gentlemen walked up and asked, "Say, Mr. Hinkle, have you got any more pigs for sale?" No, said he, I've sold the last of a lot of sixteen and they didn't go half around; I'm now telling this man to cut me out." Does it pay? Ask P. T. Hinkle what he thinks of printers' ink discretely used.

SOME OLD POET

who wasn't a good judge of human nature, once wrote that in the Spring time a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love. He might have been right for all we know, in so far as his own section was concerned, but when it comes to these parts he wasn't in it on the judging proposition, however good his rhyme and rytnm might have been.

In May and June of last year Judge Deason didn't average one license a week; now just look what he has gone and done this week—and here it is the very middle of Winter too.

The following licenses issued this week prove our contention:—

Mr. G. W. Spivey to Miss Lillie Franklin; Mr. R. G. Corlee to Miss Maude McGraw; Mr. Oscar Anderson to Miss Rhodie Green; Mr. J. M. Roper to Miss Virgie Cox; Mr. Woodie Pate to Miss Naomi Nelson; Mr. S. C. Blalock to Miss Lula Wells; Mr. W. R. Morris to Miss Rosella Smith.

A BEAUTIFUL SERVICE

The ladies of the Methodist church arranged a most beautiful service for last Sunday morning to be held during the absence of the pastor, Rev. R. J. Mills, who was attending the annual Conference at Union Springs.

Mrs. Jas. H. Middleton presided at the organ, Miss Glennie Evans at the piano, while Miss Mary Curry was violinist for the occasion.

A large and select choir rendered beautiful music during the morning hours; several solos were rendered and Mrs. Gamma Anderson and Miss Annie Williams delighted the large audience with splendid recitations.

One of the most beautiful numbers of the entire morning was the grouping of twenty or more little girls who sang in a most creditable manner "Open The Beautiful Gates." A half score of boys marching to the altar sang "Onward Christian Soldiers," thereby reflecting much credit upon themselves and their instructors. Misses Ella Fraser and Ivory Aldridge rendered a beautiful duet which greatly delighted the audience.

All in all it was one of the most pleasant and entertaining services held in Clanton for many a day.

BALD HEAD COVER

The postmaster received thro' the mail Wednesday morning a package without any address upon it except that it was plainly marked "Clanton, Al'.' There was nothing to indicate for whom the package was intended or from whom it was sent. The postmark was so indistinct that it could not be told from what office it originally came.

The package was badly wrapped and showed every indication of rough handling or else of extremely poor packing.

Upon examination—for the purpose of trying to ascertain for whom, or from whom it came—proved that it was a beautiful braid of chestnut brown hair, intended, doubtless, for some young lady of Clanton.

If any one had ordered, or is expecting such a bundle, it would be well for her to inquire at the post office.

A carriers examination will be held in Clanton on Saturday for rural mail carriers, at which time additional carriers will prepare to qualify. The establishment of a new route necessitates the employment of one additional carrier at least, and others wish to be qualifisd in case of removal, sickness, resignation or death of the presedt carriers. The Press had hoped to print the entire call for the examipation but it was crowded out of eace issue.

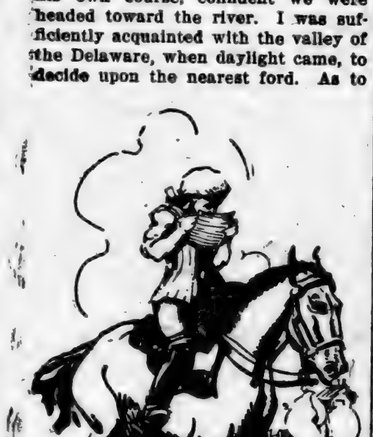
SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidence of a battle and a dead man across the threshold. Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once. Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war. Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by the Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer. Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief and then makes his escape.

CHAPTER XXII.

I Uncover Captain Grant.

The thicket was sufficiently dense to conceal us from the man, who remained standing at the foot of the steps. He was but a mere dark shadow, and I could not even distinguish that he was a soldier, yet the danger of his presence was sufficiently great, for should he advance to the right he would come upon Grant's unconscious form, and in that silence the slightest noise might arouse suspicion. Mistress Claire still clung to my hand, but only to whisper a sentence of instruction.



"Go straight north, major, until you reach the hedge; follow the shadow of that beyond the orchard, and then take the road running westward. Don't mount until you reach there—goodby."

"Goodby, you will not forget me?"

"I—I am afraid not, but—but you must go!"

I left her standing there, a faint gleam of white against the dark shrubbery, motionless.

There is no incident of that night's ride which I recall distinctly. I merely pushed on steadily through the darkness, leaving my mount to choose his own course, confident we were headed toward the river. I was sufficiently acquainted with the valley of the Delaware, when daylight came, to decide upon the nearest ford. As to the British patrols, I must run the risk of dodging these, but felt safe from such an encounter for several hours. In truth I met no one, having no occasion to even draw rein, although we passed through two small villages, and by a number of farms. I could not even determine that these houses were occupied; they were dark and silent, even the galloping hoofs of my horse failing to awaken response.

It was already daylight when I drew up on the bluff summit to gaze down into the river valley. In the middle distance small villages faced each other across the stream, and toward these most of the roads converged—proof of the existence of a ford. I could not be mistaken as to the town—Burlington on the Jersey shore, and opposite Bristol. I should be safe enough in the latter, even if we had no outpost stationed there. I knew homes along those shaded streets, where food would be forthcoming, and where I could probably procure a fresh horse. It was the nearer town, nestled on the Jersey bank, that I studied with the greatest care, but, so far as I could see, the single street was deserted. To the south, certainly a two miles away, a squadron of horse were riding slowly, surrounded by a cloud of dust. Without doubt this was the British patrol that had left the village at daybreak.

It was a hot, close morning, and the padded Ranger's coat heavy and tight-fitting. I took it off, flinging it across the saddle pommel. As I did so a folded paper came into view, and I drew it forth, curiously. My eye caught the signature at the bottom of a brief note, and I stared at it in surprise. Fagin! How came Fagin to be writing to Captain Grant? He pretended to be a Tory to be sure, yet both armies knew him as a murderous outlaw, plundering loyalists and patriots alike. There came to me a memory of Farrell's chance remark that Grant had some connection with this fellow's marauding. I had not seriously considered it then, but now—why, possibly it was true. I read the lines almost at a glance, scarcely comprehending at first, and then suddenly realized the base villainy revealed:

"Have the money and papers, but the girl got away. Will wait for you at Lone Tree tonight. Don't fail, for the whole country will be after me as soon as the news gets out about Elmhurst. FAGIN."

So that was the reason for this raid—Grant's personal affair. He had returned to Elmhurst, leaving his men to trudge on into Philadelphia under their Hessian officers so that he might communicate with Fagin. What a pity it was I had failed to kill the fellow, instead of leaving him unconscious.

The papers! Perhaps they were in the coat also. Surely Grant had no time to change or destroy them, as he must have ridden directly to Elmhurst. I searched the pockets of the garment hastily, finding a note or two, his orders to escort Delavan, and a small packet tied securely by a cord. I felt no hesitancy in opening this, and ascertaining its contents. The lines I read hastily seemed to blur before my eyes; I could barely comprehend their purport. Little by little I grasped the meaning of it all, and then my mind leaped to recognition of Grant's purpose. They were notes of instruction, brief orders, suggestions, memoranda, such as might be issued to a secret agent greatly trusted. These were addressed simply "Mortimer," many unsigned, others marked by initials, but I instantly recognized the handwriting of Washington, Hamilton and Lee. Without question this packet was the property of Eric Mortimer, but why had the boy preserved these private instructions, covering months of operations, I should judge, although scarcely one was dated? And what caused them to be of value to Captain Grant?

The answer came in a flash of suspicion—the colonel. He could be threatened with them, blackmailed, disgraced before Sir Henry Clinton, driven from his command. They were addressed merely to "Mortimer," discovered at Elmhurst, and were sufficient to convict of treason. It was a fiendish plot, well conceived, and Grant was fully capable of carrying it out to the end. I could realize what the possession of these papers meant to him—military advancement, a distribution of the Mortimer estate in which he would doubtless share, and a fresh hold on Claire whereby he could terrify the girl into accepting them.

I stood there in uncertainty, turning these papers over and over in my hands, striving to determine my duty. Should I return to Elmhurst? To do so would only bring me into renewed peril, and would apparently benefit no one. Without this packet Grant was helpless to injure Colonel Mortimer. As to Claire, Seldon would protect her for the present, and as soon as the father returned, he would doubtless compel her to accompany him back to Philadelphia. The best service I could render was to destroy these notes, and then seek out Eric Mortimer, in Lee's camp, and tell him the whole story. All that anyone could do now was to warn the Mortimers against Grant, to let them know his treachery, and this could be best accomplished through Eric. Although in different armies, striving against each other in the field, there must still exist some means of communication between father and son, or, if not, then between brother and sister.

With flint and steel I built a small fire of leaves in a cleft beside the road, and fed to the flames one by one the papers from the packet, glancing over each one again to make sure of its contents; all were addressed alike, simply "Mortimer," but upon two I found the word "Elmhurst." It was easy to see how the discovery of such communications would tempt an unscrupulous scoundrel like Grant to use them to injure another, and win his own end, but why had that young Eric failed to destroy them as soon as received?

When the last paper had been reduced to ashes, I stamped out the embers of fire under my boot heel, and, with lighter heart, rode down the hill toward the ford.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Between Love and Duty.

It was already growing dusk when I rode into our lines at Valley Forge. A brief interview with Colonel Hamilton revealed his appreciation of my work, and that my hastily made notes of the Philadelphia defenses had been received twenty-four hours earlier. They had been delivered at headquarters by an officer of Lee's staff; no, not a boyish-looking fellow, but a black-bearded captain whose name had been forgotten. All Hamilton could remember was that the notes had been originally brought in by an Indian scout. Eager to discover Eric Mortimer, I asked a week's release from duty, but there was so much sickness in the camp, that this request was refused, and I was ordered to my regiment.

Busy days and nights of fatigue followed. Washington, watching like a hawk every movement of Sir Henry Clinton in Philadelphia, convinced by every report received that he was about to evacuate the city, bent all his energies toward placing his little army in fit condition for battle. Some recruits were received, the neighboring militia were drawn upon, and men were taken from the hospitals, and put back into the ranks as soon as strong enough to bear arms. Inspired by the indomitable spirit of our commander, the line officers worked incessantly in the welding together of their commands. I scarcely knew what sleep was, yet the importance of the coming movement of troops held me steadfast to duty. Word came to us early in June that Count d'Estaing, with a powerful French fleet, was approaching the coast. This surely meant that Clinton would be compelled to retreat across the Jerseys, and a portion of our troops were advanced so as to be within easy striking distance of the city the moment the evacuation took place. The remaining commands pressed farther north, near convenient crossings of the Delaware, prepared for a forced march across the British line of retreat. Maxwell's brigade, with which I was connected, even crossed the river in advance, co-operating with General Dickinson and his New Jersey militia. All was excitement, commotion, apparently disorder, yet even amid that turmoil of approaching battle, Hamilton recalled my request, and granted me two days' leave. His brief note reached me at Coryell's Ferry, and, an hour later, I was riding swiftly across the country to where Lee had headquarters.

Not once during all those days and nights had the memory of Claire left me. Over and over in my mind I had reviewed all that had ever occurred between us, striving in vain to guess the riddle. Now I would see and talk with her brother, and perhaps obtain the explanation needed. Yet I have gone into battle with less trepidation than when I rode into Lee's headquarters, and asked his chief-of-staff for Eric Mortimer. He looked at me strangely, as I put the question.

"I should be very glad to oblige you, Major Lawrence," he replied gravely, "but unfortunately I have no present knowledge of the young man."

"But he was attached to General Lee's staff?"

"Only in a way—he was useful to us as a scout because of his intimate knowledge of the Jerseys. His home, I understand, was near Mount Holly."

"What has become of him?"

"All I know is, he was sent out on a special mission, by Washington's own orders, nearly a month ago. We have not directly heard from him since. An Indian brought a partial report of his operations up to that time; since then we have received nothing."

"An Indian" I exclaimed. "The same who brought in my notes?"

"I believe so; yes, now that I recall the matter. I had no opportunity to question the fellow; he simply left the papers with the orderly, and disappeared."

"And you have heard nothing from young Mortimer since?"

"Not a word."

"He must be dead, or a prisoner."

The chief smiled rather grimly.

"Or deserted," he added sharply. "I am more inclined toward that theory. He was a reckless young devil, attracted to our service more, it seemed to me, by a spirit of dare-devilry than patriotism. Lee thought well of him, but I was always suspicious. He belonged to a family of loyalists, his father a colonel of Queen's Rangers. Did you know him, Lawrence?"

"The father, not the son. But I am not willing to believe evil of the boy. I cannot conceive that treachery is in the Mortimer blood, sir, and shall have to be convinced before I condemn the lad. When did he leave here last?"

"About the middle of May."

"Would you mind telling me his mission? Where he was sent?"

The officer glanced keenly into my face; then ran hastily over a package of papers taken from an open trunk.

"I cannot see any harm in giving so slight information," he said, at length. "He was sent to communicate with a British officer in command of Tory's who has connections with Red Fagin, and others in Philadelphia. This officer had, in the past, been considerable information, especially valuable information, concerning young Mortimer, who knew him. He had written us that he had more to sell."

"Where were they to meet?"

"At a rendezvous known as the Lone Tree, not far from Medford."

"Was the Tory officer named Grant?"

He stared at me in surprise.

"I am not at liberty to answer."

"Oh, very well; however, I understand the situation even better than you do probably. Only I advise you one thing—don't condemn that boy until you learn the truth. Grant is an unmitigated, cold-blooded scoundrel, and the treachery is his. You'll learn that, if you wait long enough. Mortimer is either dead, or in Fagin's hands. Good night."

I passed out, and was beyond the guard, before he could call me, even had he desired to do so. I had no wish to talk with him longer. I felt disappointed, sick at heart, and realized this staff officer was strongly prejudiced against young Mortimer. It seemed to me I saw a little light, although not much. Eric had been at Elmhurst, and Claire was not innocent of his presence in that neighborhood. She was shielding him, and it was through her help that his first report to Lee had been sent back by the Indian. Then Eric must have been in the house while I was there. Indeed it must have been Eric who made me prisoner. And to protect him she had told me a deliberate falsehood.

As I rode back through the night, finding a path almost by instinct through the maze of military encampments, I thought of all these things, exonerating her from wrong, and yet wondering more and more at her real connection with the various events. The chief had not stated what information of value Grant had promised to reveal; nor what Eric's first report had contained. In my sudden disappointment I had forgotten to inquire. And where could the boy be? What could have happened to him? Something serious surely to keep him thus hidden for nearly a month. Claire would know, but she was probably long ago back in Philadelphia in the heart of the British garrison. And I?

Farrell Came at the Head of Fifty Men, Well Armed, and I Had a Word With Him.

Well, I was tied hand and foot by discipline; helpless to turn aside from duty now in the face of this new campaign. Every man was needed, and no personal consideration would excuse my leaving the ranks even for a day. It was with heavy heart I rode into the camp of my regiment, and lay down on the bare ground, with head pillowed upon the saddle, knowing the drums would sound in a few short hours.

It was hard to work through the routine of the next few days, although some excitement was given us of Maxwell's brigade by scouting details sent across the valley to observe the movements of the British patrols. On such duty I passed the greater portion of two days in the saddle, and, by chance, met both Farrell and Duval, who were with the Jersey militiamen, now slowly crossing in to aid us, as the enemy, [illegible] Farrell came at the head of fifty men, well armed, and I had a word with him. [illegible] The moment this knowledge reached Washington, he acted. In spite of opposition from some of his leading officers, his own purpose remained steadfast, and every preparation had already been carefully made for energetic pursuit. Our troops fit for service numbered less than five thousand men, many of these hastily gathered militia, some of whom had never been under fire, but the warmth and comfort of the summer time, together with the good news from France, had inspired all with fresh courage. Whatever of dissension existed was only among the coterie of general officers, the men in the ranks being eager for battle, even though the odds were strong against us. There was no delay, no hitch in the promptness of advance. The department of the Quartermaster-General had every plan worked out in detail, and, within two days, the entire army had crossed the river, and pushed forward to within a few miles of Thornton. Morgan, with six hundred men, was hurried forward to the reinforcement of Maxwell, and, relieved from my duties at this front, I was permitted to join my command.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Forcing Clinton to Battle.

I was left behind at Coryell's Ferry, for the purpose of hastening forward any supplementary orders from Washington, when Maxwell, and the Jersey militiamen, pressed forward in an effort to retard the march of the enemy. From the reports of scouts we began to understand what was occurring. Before dawn on the eighteenth of June the British army began leaving the city, crossing the Delaware at Gloucester point, and by evening the motley host, comprising Regulars, Hessians, Loyalists, and a swarm of camp followers, were halted near Haddenfield, five miles southeast of Camden.

The moment this knowledge reached Washington, he acted. In spite of opposition from some of his leading officers, his own purpose remained steadfast, and every preparation had already been carefully made for energetic pursuit. Our troops fit for service numbered less than five thousand men, many of these hastily gathered militia, some of whom had never been under fire, but the warmth and comfort of the summer time, together with the good news from France, had inspired all with fresh courage. TROUBLE IN DINING ROOM

Little Mixup Between Ladies Accentuates Philosophically by the Torpidville Landlord.

"At one time yesterday it looked like we was going to have a little trouble here in the dining room, but I didn't come to nothin' much," related the landlord of the Torpidville tavern. "Maxine and Sylphie, the young ladies that are waitin' table, got to squabblin' about a p'int of etiquette, or the merits of their respective fellers, something that-a-way, as ladies everlastin'ly doin'; and Sylphie, I reckon on it was, told Maxine, or mebby Maxine told Sylphie—anyhow, one told the other that she wasn't no better than she ort to be. And Maxine, or Sylphie, whichever it was, got sort fussy about it, and answered that she was too, and she didn't care who knew it! And then they kind o' tied in each other and went 'round and 'round as it were, and it took 'em quite while after it was over to wash the ketchup and broken glass out of the coffers, as they call their hair. But that's all it amounted to, and there no use in firin' 'em, for ladies will be ladies and there ain't no help for it."—Kansas City Sun.

NEVER TIRES

Of the Food That Restored Her Health.

"Something was making me ill and I didn't know the cause," writes a Colo. young lady: "For two years I was thin and sickly, suffering from indigestion and inflammatory rheumatism.

"I had tried different kinds of diet and many of the remedies recommended, but got no better.

"Finally, Mother suggested that I try Grape-Nuts, and I began at once eating it with a little cream or milk. A change for the better began at once.

"To-day I am well and am gaining weight and strength all the time. I've gained 10 lbs. in the last five weeks and do not suffer any more from indigestion, and the rheumatism is all gone.

"I know it is to Grape-Nuts alone that I owe my restored health. I still eat the food twice a day and never tire of it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The flavour of Grape-Nuts is peculiar to itself. It is neutral, not too sweet and has an agreeable, healthful quality that never grows tiresome.

One of the sources of rheumatism is from overloading the system with acid material, the result of imperfect digestion and assimilation.

As soon as improper food is abandoned and Grape-Nuts is taken regularly, digestion is made strong, the organs do their work of building up good red blood cells and of carrying away the excess of disease-making material from the system.

The result is a certain and steady return to normal health and mental activity. "There's a reason." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

AUTHORITY OVER BANKS.

Chancellor Rules Superintendent May Hold Assets.

Montgomery.—All questions concerning the right of the State Superintendent of Banks to institute suits, the purpose of which is to reduce to his possession the assets of insolvent banks, is dissipated by the decree of Chancellor L. D. Gardner, of the Southeastern Chancery division, a copy of which came to Superintendent A. E. Walker.

"The Superintendent of Banks, it clearly appears from the act, is a trustee, a statutory trustee for the benefit primarily of the creditors, and secondarily for the stockholders," said the Chancellor in the course of his decree.

The Chancellor's ruling came in the suit of A. E. Walker against the Montgomery Bank and Trust Company, suit involving the assets of the Bank of Geneva.

It was urged in the demurrers that if the act authorizes the Superintendent to take charge of the assets of insolvent banks as ascertained by the Banking Board, it is unconstitutional for two reasons, the first, that such provisions, as found in section 10 of the act, are not included within the title of the act; second, that if so, it is the taking of property without due process of law.

Chancellor Gardner held that the title of the act set forth the authority of the Superintendent to enter such suit he declared that the provision for a hearing before he Banking Board and the right of a subsequent appeal relieves the act of the accusation that one operates under it without due process of law. As to the right to bring such suit the ruling further was:

"The Superintendent of Banks is an officer of the State charged with certain duties with regard to insolvent banks. He holds assets in liquidation. Without the power to reduce to possession for the purpose of administration the assets of the bank, he would be a 'man of straw.'"

COMMISSIONERS UPHELD.

Assessment on Property May Be Raised.

Montgomery.—That the courts of county commissioners has the authority to make raises in assessments on property is the substance of an opinion put out by the supreme court in the case of M. L. Patterson vs. H. B. Pitts, tax collector, appealed from the Russell chancery court. The chancery proceedings grew out of an effort on the part of Patterson to enjoin the tax collector from collecting on a higher assessment than that originally returned by the tax assessor.

In the first instance, Tax Assessor A. H. Vann returned Patterson's property at $8340, and a record of it was made in the probate court. The court of county commissioners met and decided that the tax assessor's books were wrong and ordered a new assessment made on the property.

Patterson's property was then returned at $13,900 for real property and at $1235 for personal. Proceedings were then brought to enjoin the county officer from collecting on the basis of the new assessment.

CAPITAL CASE AFFIRMED.

Montgomery.—The supreme court affirmed the judgment of the Talladega circuit court in sentencing Will Macon to life imprisonment for the murder of George Shealy in the spring of 1911.

Gadsden.—The Presbytery of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, in session here, elected Rev. J. A. McCluney, of the Coal City Presbytery, as Moderator. Rev. R. S. Hudson, of Gaylesville, was elected clerk. Every church in the Presbytery was represented with the exception of two.

GREENE FOR ATTY. GENERAL

Montgomery.—Gardner Greene of Pell City will probably run for attorney general in the next state election. In talking to some Friends at the capitol he declared that he had the matter of his candidacy under serious consideration. He stated that his friends are urging him to make the race, though declared that he thought it too early to make any positive announcement on the subject.

Another prominent lawyer in the state who will probably run for the office of attorney general is William L. Martin, who is the first assistant attorney general. Mr. Martin has not yet announced his candidacy, but it is practically agreed that he will do so at the proper time.

Mr. Martin's acquaintance with the work for the attorney general's office extends over several years. His father was one of the ablest attorney generals the state has ever had, and the son's early apprenticeship began in his father's father's office.

Several other well known lawyers in the state have been mentioned for the office, but no definite announcement has yet been made.

NEGROES ARE PARDONED.

Montgomery.—Three negro convicts broken in health were given their freedom by an order issued by Governor O'Neal. Two of the three are from Lyons, and the third, Squire Thomas, went from Dallas county to serve a life term for murder, suffering a broken hip in the service of the state and is crippled for life.

WANTED TO FINISH THE JOB

Pride in His Work, Not Tender Heart, Was What Induced the Chauffeur to Return.

They were going along the public highway at a leisurely rate of forty miles per hour, when a decrepit hen and rooster started to do the chicken special—cross the road.

The front and hind wheels on the right side struck the poor, old, stiff-jointed rooster amidships, and with one squawk he succumbed.

Immediately the man at the steering wheel started to slow down and to look about for a place to turn.

His solicitous wife turned to her seatmate and said:

"Isn't that just like his tender heart? He won't be satisfied unless he goes back and settles for that rooster. He just can't bear to feel he has injured anyone or anything."

Then louder, to her husband, she said: "George, remember that appointment. We haven't any time to go back for anything."

Glancing at the clock near his feet and at the speedometer near by, he sighed and said:

"You're right, Jennie; but I just know if I had turned back I could have killed that old hen just as easy as I did the rooster."—Judge.

ECZEMA SPREAD OVER BODY

R. F. D. No. 1, Lewisburg, Ky.—"Fifteen years ago I was badly affected with eczema upon my scalp first, then it spread all over my body and continued to grow worse for four years. It began with a dry rash. After forming thick scales or scabs the irritation forced me to scratch the scabs off and the hair would come out with them. Upon my face and body the sores would get inflamed and they disfigured my face. It was worse where my clothes irritated them. The eruption was a yellowish watery kind, sometimes bloody. In warm weather it was so bad I was not able to work on account of the raw irritating sores on my head and body.

"After trying various medicines without relief I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using four cakes of Cuticura Soap and four boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of the Resolvent I was entirely sound and well and have been for eleven years." (Signed) W. H. Williams, Mar. 19, 1912.

Push Sale of Red Cross Seals.

The American Red Cross has already printed over 85,000,000 Red Cross Christmas seals and probably the edition will number 100,000,000 before the end of the campaign. If the anticipations of the anti-tuberculosis workers are realized, no less than $400,000 will be obtained from the sale of Red Cross seals. Practically all of the money remains in the state or city where the seals are sold, only a very small percentage of it is going to pay for the cost of the printing and distributing the seals and for the expenses of running the campaign.

In case any persons cannot obtain seals in the community where they live, they can secure them by writing to Red Cross Seal Headquarters, 715 Union Trust building, Washington, D. C. Red Cross seals cost one cent each, and every seal sold is a bullet in the fight against tuberculosis.

Lost Trousers Playing Poker.

William Verne appeared in a Detroit police coudt attired in a dress coat and some underwear—he had bet the trousers in a poker game the evening before and lost. His cash, his watch and his diamonds preceded the trousers into the "bank." The trousers were of good quality, so William bet several blue chips on them. But his luck didn't turn and when he was cleaned out again he broke up the game by quitting. He begged the loan of the trousers to go home in, but the bank took no risks and declined. So William started in dress coat and underwear and was arrested.

Again we ask our friends when requesting a change of address to give the OLD address as well as the new; it saves much time and confusion.

West Virpinia went for statewide prohibition last week by a majority of 91,000. Only three counties in the state voted against the measure.

Don't become alarmed because that water works system has not been installed or the sewerage system placed; they will come, and come in good time.

Rome wasn't built in a day remember. Just shove—that's your duty—shove.

The prposition to divide the inaugural ceremonies into parts is not meeting with favor; it should not. Aside from the expense and worry it would prove a tame affair if divided, whereas the South wishes to make the forthcoming inaugural of Wilson, the first southern man to become president in more than a generafion, one of the greatest events that ever took place at the national capital. Ma divide the ceremonies would make this well nigh impossible. Let the whole affair be pulled off at the regular time and then let Congreas make provision for for future inaugurals to take place at a seasonable season.

We call the attention of our friendly patrons to the fact that we try earnestly to have our paper out "on time" each week; we frequently employ extra help with this end in view but, even then we find it impossible to reach the post office on schedule time.

One of the principal reasons for this is that our good friends who have job work to do invariably wait till the last moment to put in their orders and then they must have the work done immediately; that, of course, throws us considerably behind with the paper.

We appreciate the job work more than we can tell you, but it would be a great saving of time to us and annoyance to you if you would give us your orders just a few days before you actually need it. It will give us more time to do creditable work, permit us to get the paper out on time and give us no excuse for not getting your work out promptly, as promised. Remember, we appreciate the work but if we stop to do job work the first three days of the week, half a thousand patrons "kick" because the paper is late.

Help us and we will assuredly help you.

That Eighteen Thousand

The Press has never yet undertaken to win a vote for its party by deception or misrepresentation. This paper would far rather go down in defeat with the confidence of its readers than to win a victory by playing upon the prejudice or ignorance of the people.

Such practices must, sooner or later, be discovered, and when discovered they invariably work a hardship upon the perpetrator, rather than upon those whom it was intended to deceive.

People, as a rule, like "fair play" in all departments of life; they soon lose confidence in him who takes every advantage or who seeks every opportunity to purposely deceive.

Year before last when the Honeycutt letter, with changed date, was sent broadcast over the county this paper pronounced it as a well played scheme to make it appear that Judge Honeycutt was supporting the very party which he was personally interested in defeating.

To overcome that deception the editor of this paper took an early train to Birmingham and at considerable expense and much loss of time, had the deception uncovered. Others of the democracy worked hard and faithfully to "show up" this deception. Judge Honeycutt made a personal visit to Clanton and denounced the scheme as one intended to use his influence in a direction which the perpetrators knew he did not wish it used.

Later on, in the succeeding campaign, the republican press warned its readers to "look out for circulars, last day letters" and the like, intimating that the Press and its democratic friends would undertake to flood the county with deceptive literature. Thus far, as stated in the beginning, the Press has eschewed such practices. It feels that if it cannot win a political battle without deception, that battle had best be lost; it is confident that the mission of a newspaper is to deal with FACTS; to try as best it can to educate and inform rather than to deceive.

That paper, or that man, who will willingly deceive is unfit for a leader of thought or of action; he who takes advantage of the ignorance of the people to ride into office is not worthy of the office which he seeks.

This is stating the truth boldly yet unequivocally; the Press is accusing no one of willfully trying to deceive but it does say without hesitation, and with no hope of successful contradiction, that there has been deception somewhere, by somebody, in the affairs of this county.

Knowing that the L & N railroad had paid over to the county a large sum of money during the last days of October, it was not prepared for the statement showing that there was no funds to the credit of the General Fund, yet that statement appeared in the republican organ, and stress was laid upon the fact that there was NOTHING to the credit of the General Fund.

This statement went out to the people just a few days previous to the election and, doubtless, influenced many voters for their minds and hearts had been prepared for such a statement.

They never stopped to consider that October is usually a stringent month with all county and state funds which are dependent upon tax collections, for it is in that month that the tax collector begins to gather in the sheckels with which to defray the ordinary expenses of the county.

As a usual thing, in all counties, the General Fund is considerably lower in September and October than at any other time; this is because of the fact that it is practically the close of the tax year and the beginning of another and the funds of the county are at a low ebb. This should have been explanation enough for any reasoning man, but some men do not think; they permit others to think for them and allow themselves stuffed full of prejudice.

To such people no amount of logical reasoning would have availed; they are ruled by tricksters, swayed by prejudice, and have no acquaintance with reasoning of the logical, disinterested kind.

Some were so anxious to accuse the democratic Probate Judge of being the cause of an empty treasury just at the time of the election that they would never have listened to reason nor would they recall that three of the four County Commissioners, whose duty it is to PASS UPON and ORDER PAID every dollar of the county funds that is paid out of the "General Fund", are republicans, and that they had with care, exercised discretion in the allowing of claims to be paid out of that fund.

They forgot, or refused to believe, that the Probate Judge had no more to do with the payment of money out of the general fund than has the most ordinary individual who has no voice in the court proceedings at all.

His duty, under the law, is to be the CLERK of the Commissioners' Court and to do their bidding; he has no VOICE or SAY in the passing of claims; if the Commissioners' Court orders a claim paid it is the bounden duty of the Probate Judge to issue a warrant for tne amount. Only in cases of a tie vote between the commissioners can the Probate Judge exercise any authority whatever. In Chilton county such has not been the case since the democratic Judge took the oath of office, nor will such a condition ever be likely to arise so long as three of the members of the court are republicans and but one a democrat.

We have gone into the case thus minutely, not to defend the Probate Judge or even the Commissioners, Court, for neither needs defense; it was a perfectly natural condition of affairs at the time; the Commissioners had acted with care and discretion; the Judge had acted under instructions and orders from the Commissioners.

Just here let us say parenthetically—the Commissioners' Court MAY sometimes make a mistake and order an account paid which should not be paid but the Probate Judge, when that court has issued its orders, MUST deliver a warrant for the amount ordered paid. He cannot do otherwise; BUT the Treasurer, if he knows that the account is incorrect or fraudulent CAN and OUGHT to refuse payment.

Now, so far so good. What was the condition of the treasury at the time the election statement was printed and broadcasted over the county?

As a matter of simple fact, the General Fund had nothing to its credit on the surface; no money had been turned over to the Treasurer for this fund; the General Fund had been exhausted in paying the honest debts of the county ordered paid by the three republican and one democratic member of the Commissioners' Court but what was the ACTUAL FACTS?

Read the following extract from Judge John Purifoy, State Treasurer, and then judge for yourself. Here it is, the original of which can be seen at any time by anyone who desires to see it:—

"Replying to your favor of yesterday, it was known to the state authorities, the Governor, Auditor and Treasurer, that the L & N railroad had paid large sums in taxes to the several collectors of the counties through which the system passes, and the collectors were urged to make prompt remittances of this tax money to the State Treasury, that it might be used to meet the accruing school claims against the treasury. Under these instructions from the Auditor, Tax Collector Dennis, of Chilton county, remitted to the State Treasurer $10,000, less transmission expenses, $10.00, which was placed to the credit of the Treasurer on OCTOBER 30th, 1912.

On the 6th of November the Tax Collector is credited with an additional amout of $4996.24 as collections for October"

We have nothing more to say except this: If the Tax Collector remitted to the State Treasurer on October 30th, 1912 why was not a remittance also made to the County Treasurer on that date?

Why should he, a republican, have gone to the trouble of paying over money to a DEMOCRATIC STATE Treasurer and refused, or neglected, to pay over money to a republican County Treasurer, the money being collected at one and the same time?

Why should he have felt obligated to assist a DEMOCRATIC state administration and failed to have assisted a republican and democratic HOME administration?

Is he more interested in the CREDIT of the democratic state or the republican county his home?

Why should he have gone to the rescue of the democratic state and failed to uphold the credit of his HOME county?

Does that not look very much like neglecting ones loved ones in order to give assistance to strangers?

Mind you, the remittance to the STATE was made on October 30; the COUNTY statement showing nothing in the General Fund was not printed till the next day; the L & N paid its taxes on October 23rd—seven days before the remittance to the STATE and FIFTEEN days before the remittance to the COUNTY!

To argue that the Collector was within the law is not an explanation at all; he knew or should have known, that the General Fund was exhausted; he knew, or should have known, that the COUNTY, as well as the STATE, was in need of funds.

Why then should a remittance be made to the STATE seven days in advance of the COUNTY remittance, when both were suffering the same?

As well for a father to say with reference to his own sick child, "Let it suffer yet longer till I have gone over to my enemy and rendered aid to his child."

The Tax Collector's explanation does not explain; yet a large number of our citizens will swallow the explanation with gusto; others will roll it under their tongues as a sweet morsel, while others will wink a bleared eye and say, "SLICK TRICK THAT!!"

Now, if the republican paper wishes to put itself "straight" with the voters, it will make some explanation of why it has not commented upon this political trick unless it does "come clean" should never, no never, refer "last day circulars," political tricks and the like except when it refers to the Honeycutt letter, the county statement and such antics cut the republican bosses.

The people will not be deceived ALL the time; of this we may be assured.

Comer Rates Have Cost Alabama Tax-Payers Nearly $200,000

In Spite of This Immense Outlay, Spent For Lawyers and Court Costs, etc., the Status of the Litigation Is Practically the Same As It Was In 1907. Figures Are Taken From the Official Records—And It Seems the End Is Not Yet!

Mr. Hugh W. Roberts, the well known staff correspondent of the Birmingham Age-Herald, made the statement in that paper, issue of October 13th, 1912, in an article dealing with the extravagant expenditure of the tax-payers' money, that the railroad rate litigation—which is still under way—has cost the people approximately $200,000, and that the status of the case is practically identical with the status at the beginning.

As one of the largest individual tax-payers in the State, the L. & N. R. R. Company is interested in the expenditure of the tax-payers' money. It is particularly interested in view of the frequent erroneous statements made by former Governor Comer that the L. & N. R. R. Co. was imposing an unfair tax on the people in the way of freight rates, whereas the former Governor had no statement or criticism to make concerning the enormous tax levied by him on the people to raise the funds expended in his rate litigation.

The official records in the office of the State Auditor show that from the inception of the rate litigation in 1907 to July 25, 1912, the special counsel employed by former Governor Comer to represent the State in these cases exclusively, received $80,497.07. The larger part of this sum was in fees paid direct to the attorneys; two of the attorneys received through most of this time $1,000 a month each. The remainder was paid for the personal expenses of the attorneys engaged in the litigation.

To the above amount must be added the sum of $58,084.02, paid by the State in Court costs and other expenses of this litigation.

To these two amounts must be added the cost of the extra session of the legislature, held in November of 1907, amounting to $20,388.80, and the extra session of the legislature held in July, 1909, amounting to $34,679.82, making the total cost to the tax-payers of Alabama amount to nearly $200,000 out of a depleted treasury, for the conduct of litigation "the status of which is identical with that of 1907."

Since July 25th, this heavy expense has been greatly increased, and may be still more heavily increased.

It should be borne in mind by a just and fair public that a large percentage of this tax money was paid into the State treasury by the L. & N. R. R. Co., the former Governor using that, and the money of other tax-payers, to fight the L. & N. R. R. Co., thus forcing the L. & N. R. R. Co. to the duplicate expense of paying its pro rata share for the fight against it, and paying all the expense for the defense against that fight.

A recapitulation of the expenses incurred is interesting, and is given herewith as information of value to the tax-payers:

Lawyers' fees—to Samuel D. Weakly	$ 41,905.37
" " " H. C. Selheimer	35,044.70
" " " Horace Stringfellow	2,547.00
" " " F. S. White	500.00
" " " R. W. Walker	500.00
Court costs and other expenses	58,084.02
Extra session of legislature in November, 1907	20,388.80
" " " " " July, 1909	34,679.82
Total spent up to July 25, 1912, for rate litigation and legislation	$193,649.71

The L. & N. R. R. Co. has been denounced from one end of Alabama to the other, unfairly and unjustly denounced, for levying alleged unfair freight and passenger rates on the people of the State.

But not one word, not one whisper, of criticism has been vouchsafed by this enemy to the public advancement concerning the enormous tribute he levied on the tax-payers during his administration.

Any citizen can readily imagine the many benefits to be derived for educational and social advancement through the proper expenditure of $200,000 in the interest of the people from whom the payment was exacted.

And remember, please, the treasury was full when he went in, but empty when he went out.

PRESIDENT SENDS ANOTHER MESSAGE

Tells Congress About the Fiscal, Military, Insular and Judicial Affairs of the Nation, Including Panama Canal and Tolls Established.

Washington, Dec. 6.—Congress today received from President Taft the second of his messages to the short session. It deals with fiscal, military, insular and judicial affairs and in part is as follows:

The condition of the country with reference to business could hardly be better. While the four years of the administration now drawing to a close have not developed great speculative expansion or a wide field of new investment, the recovery and progress made from the depressing conditions following the panic of 1907 have been steady and the improvement has been clear and easily traced in the statistics. The business of the country is now on a solid basis. Credits are not unduly extended and every phase of the situation seems in a state of preparedness for a period of unexampled prosperity. Manufacturing concerns are running at their full capacity and the demand for labor was never so constant and growing. The foreign trade of the country for this year will exceed $4,000,000,000, while the balance in our favor—that of the excess of exports over imports—will exceed $500,000,000. More than half our exports are manufactures or partly manufactured material, while our exports of farm products do not show the same increase of domestic consumption. It is a year of bumper crops; the total money value of farm products will exceed $9,500,000,000. It is a year when the bushel or unit price of agricultural products has gradually fallen, and yet the total value of the entire crop is greater by over $1,000,000,000 than we have known in our history.

Condition of the Treasury.

The condition of the treasury is very satisfactory. The total interest-bearing debt is $963,777,770, of which $134,621,980 constitute the Panama canal loan. The non-interest-bearing debt is $378,201,294.80, including $346,671,016 of greenbacks. We have in the treasury $180,000,000 in gold coin as a reserve against the outstanding greenbacks; and in addition we have a cash balance in the treasury as a general fund of $167,152,478.99, or an increase of $26,975,522 over the general fund last year.

Receipts and Expenditures.

For three years the expenditures of the government have decreased under the influence of an effort to economise. This year presents an apparent exception. The estimate by the secretary of the treasury of the ordinary receipts, exclusive of postal revenues, for the year ending June 30, 1914, indicates that they will amount to $170,000,000. The sum of the estimates of the expenditures for that same year, exclusive of Panama canal disbursements and postal disbursements payable from postal revenues is $732,000,000, indicating a deficit of $22,000,000. For the year ending June 30, 1913, similarly estimated receipts were $667,000,000, while the total corresponding estimate of expenditures for that year, submitted through the secretary of the treasury to congress, amounted to $654,000,000. This shows an increase of $76,000,000 in the estimates for 1914 over the total estimates of 1913. This is due to an increase of $25,000,000 in the estimate for rivers and harbors for the next year on projects and surveys authorized by congress; to an increase under the new pension bill of $32,500,000; and to an increase in the estimates for expenses of the navy department of $24,000,000. The estimate for the navy department for the year 1913 included two battleships. Congress made provision for only one battleship, and therefore the navy department has deemed it necessary and proper to make an estimate which includes the first year's expenditure for three battleships in addition to the amount required for work on the uncompleted ships now under construction. In addition to the natural increase in the expenditures for the uncompleted ships, and the additional battleship estimated for, the other increases are due to the pay required for 4,000 or more additional enlisted men in the navy, and to this must be added the additional cost of construction imposed by the change in the eight-hour law which makes it applicable to ships built in private shipyards.

The president then explained at some length the national reserve association system recommended by the monetary commission and urged congress to examine the plan impartially from all standpoints and then to adopt some plan which will secure the benefits desired.

Concerning the tariff he had little to say in view of the fact that a new congress has been elected on a platform of tariff for revenue only.

Army Reorganization.

Our small army now consists of 83,800 men, excluding the 5,000 Philippine scouts. Leaving out of consideration the coast artillery force, whose position is fixed in our various seacoast defenses, and the present garrisons of our various insular possessions, we have today within the continental United States a mobile army of only about 35,000 men. This little force must be still further drawn upon to supply the new garrisons for the great naval base which is being established at Pearl Harbor, in the Hawaiian islands, and to protect the locks now rapidly approaching completion at Panama. The forces remaining in the United States are now scattered in nearly fifty posts, situated for a variety of historical reasons in twenty-four states. These posts contain only fractions of regiments, averaging less than 700 men each. In time of peace it has been our historical policy to administer these units separately by a geographical organization. In other words, our army in time of peace has never been a united organization but merely scattered groups of companies, battalions and regiments, and the first task in time of war has been to create out of these scattered units an army fit for effective teamwork and co-operation.

To the task of meeting these patent defects, the war department has been addressing itself during the past year. A comprehensive plan of reorganization was prepared by the war college division of the general staff. This plan was thoroughly discussed last summer at a series of open conferences held by the secretary of war and attended by representatives from all branches of the army and from congress. In printed form it has been distributed to members of congress and throughout the army and the national guard, and widely through institutions of learning and elsewhere in the United States. In it, for the first time, we have a tentative chart for future progress.

The National Guard.

Under existing law the national guard constitutes, after the regular army, the first line of national defense. Its organization, discipline, training, and equipment, under recent legislation, have been assimilated, as far as possible, to those of the regular army, and its practical efficiency, under the effect of this training, has very greatly increased. Our citizen soldiers, under present conditions have reached a stage of development beyond which they cannot reasonably be asked to go without further direct assistance in the form of pay from the federal government. On the other hand, such pay from the national treasury would not be justified, unless it produced a proper equivalent in additional efficiency on the part of the national guard. The organized militia today cannot be ordered outside of the limits of the United States, and thus cannot lawfully be used for general military purposes. The officers and men are ambitious and eager to make themselves thus available and to become an efficient national reserve of citizen soldiery. They are the only force of trained men, other than the regular army, upon which we can rely. The so-called military pay bill, in the form agreed on between the authorities of the war department and the representatives of the national guard, in my opinion adequately meets these conditions and offers a proper return for the pay which it is proposed to give to the national guard. I believe that its enactment into law would be a very long step toward providing this nation with a first line of citizen soldiery, upon which its main reliance must depend in case of any national emergency. Plans for the organization of the national guard into tactical divisions, on the same lines as those adopted for the regular army, are being formulated by the war college division of the general staff.

Porto Rico, Mr. Taft says, continues to show notable progress and he urges the senate to pass the bill granting the Porto Ricans American citizenship.

Philippines.

A bill is pending in congress, continues the message, which revolutionizes the carefully worked out scheme of government under which the Philippine islands are now governed and which proposes to render them virtually autonomous at once and absolutely independent in eight years. Such a proposal can only be founded on the assumption that we have now discharged our trusteeship to the Filipino people and our responsibility for them to the world, and that they are now prepared for self-government as well as national sovereignty. A thorough and unbiased knowledge of the facts clearly shows that these assumptions are absolutely with justification. As to this, I believe that there is no substantial difference of opinion among any of those who have had the responsibility of facing Philippine problems in the administration of the islands, and I believe that no one to whom the future of this people is a responsible concern can countenance a policy fraught with the direst consequences to those on whose behalf it is ostensibly urged.

Our true course is to pursue steadily and courageously the path we have thus far followed; to guide the Filipinos into self-sustaining pursuits; to continue the cultivation of sound political habits through education and political practice; to encourage the diversification of industries, and to realise the advantages of their industrial education by conservatively approved co-operative methods, at once checking the dangers of concentrated wealth and building up a sturdy, independent citizenship.

Regulation of Water Power.

There are pending before congress a large number of bills proposing to grant privileges of erecting dams for the purpose of creating water power in our navigable rivers. The pendency of these bills has brought out an important defect in the existing general dam act. That act does not, in my opinion, grant sufficient power to the federal government in dealing with the construction of such dams to exact protective conditions in the interest of navigation. It does not permit the federal government, as a condition of its permit, to require that a part of the value thus created shall be applied to the further general improvement and protection of the stream. I believe this to be one of the most important matters of internal improvement now confronting the government. Most of the navigable rivers of this country are comparatively long and shallow. In order that they may be made fully useful for navigation there has come into vogue a method of improvement known as canalization, or the slack-water method, which consists in building a series of dams and locks, each of which will create a long pool of deep navigable water. At each of these dams there is usually created a long pool of deep navigable water. At each of these dams there is usually created also water power of commercial value. If the water power thus created can be made available for the further improvement of navigation in the stream, it is manifest that the improvement will be much more quickly effected on the one hand, and on the other, that the burden on the general taxpayers of the country will be very much reduced. Private interests seeking permits to building waterpower dams in navigable streams usually urge that they thus improve navigation, and that if they do not impair navigation they should be allowed to take for themselves the entire profits of the water-power development. Whatever they may do by way of relieving the government of the expense of improving navigation should be given due consideration, but it must be apparent that there may be a profit beyond a reasonably liberal return upon the private investment which is a potential asset of the government in carrying out a comprehensive policy of waterway development. It is no objection to the retention and use of such an asset by the government that a comprehensive waterway policy will include the protection and development of the other public uses of water, which cannot and should not be ignored in making and executing plans for the protection and development of navigation. It is also equally clear that inasmuch as the water power thus created is or may be an incident of a general scheme of waterway improvement within the constitutional jurisdiction of the federal government, the regulation of such water power lies also within that jurisdiction. In my opinion constructive statesmanship requires that legislation should be enacted which will permit the development of navigation in these great rivers to go hand in hand with the utilization of this by-product of water power, created in the course of the same improvement, and that the general dam act should be so amended as to make this possible. I deem it highly important that the nation should adopt a consistent and harmonious treatment of these water-power projects, which will preserve for this purpose their value to the government, whose right it is to grant the permit. Any other policy is equivalent to throwing away a most valuable national asset.

The Panama Canal.

During the past year the work of construction upon the canal has progressed most satisfactorily. About 87 per cent. of the excavation work has been completed, and more than 69 per cent. of the concrete for all the locks is in place. In view of the great interest which has been manifested as to some slides in the Culebra Cut, I am glad to say that the report of Col. Goethals should allay any apprehension on this point. It is gratifying to note that none of the slides which occurred during this year would have interfered with the passage of the ships had the canal in fact been in operation, and when the slope percentages will have been finally adjusted and the growth of vegetation will minimize erosion in the banks of the cut, the slide problem will be practically solved and an ample stability assured for the Culebra Cut.

Although the official date of the opening has been set for January 1, 1915, the canal will, in fact, from present indications, be opened for shipping during the latter half of 1913. No fixed date can as yet be set, but shipping interests will be advised as soon as assurances can be given that vessels can pass through without unnecessary delay.

Recognizing the administrative problem in the management of the canal, congress in the act of August 24, 1912, has made admirable provision for executive responsibility in the control of the canal and the government of the Canal Zone. The problem of most efficient organization is receiving careful consideration, so that a scheme of organization and control best adapted to the conditions of the canal may be formulated and put in operation as expeditiously as possible. Acting under the authority conferred on me by congress, I have, by executive proclamation, promulgated the following schedule of tolls for ships passing through the canal, based upon the thorough report of Emory R. Johnson, special commissioner on traffic and tolls:

1. On merchant vessels carrying passengers or cargo, $1.20 per net vessel ton—each 100 cubic feet—of actual capacity.

2. On vessels in ballast without passengers or cargo, 40 per cent. less than the rate of tolls for vessels with passengers or cargo.

3. Upon naval vessels, other than transports, colliers, hospital ships, and supply ships, 50 cents per displacement ton.

4. Upon army and navy transports, colliers, hospital ships, and supply ships, $1.20 per net ton, the vessels to be measured by the same rules as are employed in determining the net tonnage of merchant vessels.

Rules for the determination of the tonnage upon which toll charges are based are now in course of preparation and will be promulgated in due season.

Panama Canal Treaty.

The proclamation which I have issued in respect to the Panama Canal tolls is in accord with the Panama Canal act passed by this congress August 24, 1912. We have been advised that the British government has prepared a protest against the act and its enforcement in so far as it relieves from the payment of tolls American ships engaged in the American coastwise trade on the ground that it violates British rights under the Hay-Pauncefote treaty concerning the Panama Canal. When the protest is presented, it will be promptly considered and an effort made to reach a satisfactory adjustment of any differences there may be between the two governments.

Promotion for Col. Goethals.

As the completion of the canal grows nearer, and as the wonderful executive work of Col. Goethals becomes more conspicuous in the eyes of the country and of the world, it seems to me wise and proper to make provision by law for such reward to him as may be commensurate with the service that he has rendered to his country. I suggest that this reward take the form of an appointment of Col. Goethals as a major general in the army of the United States, and that the law authorizing such appointment be accompanied with a provision permitting his designation as chief of engineers upon the retirement of the present incumbent of that office.

The navy of the United States is in a greater state of efficiency and is more powerful than it has been before, but in the emulation which exists between different countries in respect to the increase of naval and military armaments this condition is not a permanent one. In view of the many improvements and increases by foreign governments the slightest halt on our part in respect to new construction throws us back and reduces us from a naval power of the first rank and places us among the nations of the second rank.

A year ago congress refused to appropriate for more than one battleship. In this I think a great mistake of policy was made, and I urgently recommend that this congress make up for the mistake of the last session by appropriations authorizing the construction of three battleships, in addition to destroyers, fuel ships, and the other auxiliary vessels as shown in the building program of the general board. We are confronted by a condition in respect to the navies of the world which requires us, if we would maintain our navy as an insurance of peace, to augment our naval force by at least two battleships a year and by battle cruisers, gunboats, torpedo destroyers, and submarine boats in a proper proportion. We have no desire for war. We go as far as any nation in the world to avoid war, but we are a world power. Our population, our wealth, our definite policies, our responsibilities in the Pacific and the Atlantic, our defense of the Panama canal, together with our enormous world trade and our missionary outposts on the frontiers of civilization, require us to recognize our position as one of the foremost in the family of nations, and to clothe ourselves with sufficient naval power to give force to our reasonable demands, and to give weight to our influence in those directions of progress that a powerful Christian nation should advocate.

Department of Justice.

This department has been very active in the enforcement of the law. It has been better organized and with a larger force than ever before in the history of the government. The prosecutions which have been successfully concluded and which are now pending testify to the effectiveness of the department work.

The prosecution of trusts under the Sherman anti-trust law has gone on without restraint or diminution, and decrees similar to those entered in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases have been entered in other suits, like the suits against the powder trust and the bath tub trust. I am very strongly convinced that a steady, consistent course in this regard, with a continuing of Supreme court decisions upon the new phases of the trust question not already finally decided, is going to offer a solution of this much-discussed and troublesome issue in a quiet, calm and judicial way, without any radical legislation changing the governmental policy in regard to combinations now denounced by the Sherman anti-trust law. I have already recommended as an aid in this matter legislation which would declare unlawful certain well-known phases of unfair competition in interstate trade, and I have also advocated voluntary national incorporation for the larger industrial enterprises, with provision for a closer supervision by the bureau of corporations, or a board appointed for the purpose, so as to make certain compliance with the anti-trust law on the one hand and to give greater security to the stockholders against possible prosecutions on the other. I believe, however, that the orderly course of litigation in the courts and the regular prosecution of trusts charged with the violation of the anti-trust law is producing among business men a clearer and sharper perception of the line of distinction between business that is to be encouraged and business that is to be condemned, and that in this quiet way the question of trusts can be settled and competition retained as an effective force to secure reasonableness in prices and freedom and independence in trade.

ENGLAND'S FORMAL NOTE OF PROTEST

OBJECTS TO EXEMPTION OF AMERICAN SHIPS FROM PAYMENT OF TOLLS.

GROUNDS FOR PROTEST

Document Written By Sir Edward Grey, Declares Hay-Pauncefote Treaty Violated.

Washington.—Great Britain's formal note of protest against the section of the Panama canal act which exempts American coastwise shipping from payment of tolls for passing through the Panama canal, a document written by Sir Edward Grey, British minsented to Secretary of State Knox by the British ambassador.

James Bryce read the note word for word to the Secretary at the latter's home. It is an elaboration of the points of objection in the note presented to the state department last July. In brief these objections are:

That while it was clearly in violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty either to remit or refund tolls on all American shipping using the canal the same objection probably would apply to the coastwise trade shipping in view of the probable impossibility of framing regulations that would not result in a preference to American shipping.

In addition to supporting these points by lond arguments, Sir Edward Grey indicates very clearly that strong resistance will be offered to any attempt to exclude from the canal British ships owned by Canadian railroads or whose owners may be guilty of violating the Sherman anti-trust act. He holds that this section of the act cannot apply to British shipping, but only to United States vessels.

He also indicated in his note that underlying the objection of the exemption from toll of American coastwise ships is an apprehension that in the future the principle might be extended to cover American ships in the foreign trade.

Otherwise the note is devoted almost entirely to an effort to demonstrate that any such exemption of American shipping as is proposed is in direct conflict with the terms of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and that President Taft was clearly wrong when he took the contrary view. Generally the British note might be summed up as a clear definition of the differences between the two governments regarding the construction of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, winding up with a proposal that the issues should be settled by arbitration, provided that they cannot be adjusted by mutual agreement, for which a way remains open.

Secretary Knox listened attentively to the reading of the note and promises to take the matter under careful consideration which he felt would require some time. It has been strongly intimated in official circles, however, that it was the President's intention to settle this important question before closing his administration, either by recommending that the Senate agree to submit it to arbitration, or preferably by the more direct means of an agreement between the two nations, referred to in the British note.

FOURTEEN INCH GUN EXPLODES.

Two Ton Breech Block Is Blown Quarter of a Mile and Muzzle Further.

New York.—A gun of 14 inch calibre and of 50 tons weight, the largest and newest type built by the United States government at a cost of $130,000, exploded at the Sandy Hook proving grounds. While explosion of smaller guns has taken scores of lives, the big 14 incher blew to pieces without causing so much as a scratch to the men around it.

The two ton breech block was blown a quarter of a mile, the muzzle was hurled still farther away, and fragments spread in every direction, but Ordinance Officer Michael Brennen, who was standing on the temporary disappearing carriage, was not struck, although the structure itself was wrecked.

Brennan was thrown many yards but sustained hardly a bruise. Other officers and men in charge of the firing were behind a wall which protected them from injury.

The big gun which hurled a projectile weighing 1600 pounds at a range of 13,000 yards, was successfully fired several times in tests last month, and was believed to be in perfect condition. A charge of 340 pounds of smokeless powder was used.

Speculation as to the cause of the accident brought out the belief that perhaps the sudden drop in the temperature had some effect on the gun. It was reported that experiments were being made to determine how much a charge the gun would withstand.

CHRISTMAS TREE

day scholars and teach- Clanton Methodist ol are to have a Chri e next Tuesday ni

Committees were appointed last Sunday to look after all the necessary arrangements and to secure the hearty co-operation of the parents of scholars to the end that the entertainment may be a complete success.

To do this it will be necessary for each parent to send at least a few of the Christmas presents intended for the youngsters, to be placed on the tree; then, too, there are many children whose happiness will not be complete because of the fact that their parents are unable to supply the necessary presents—that none shall be disappointed let those who are able remember the unfortunate ones.

There is not enough happiness in this old world anyway; we could do much to scatter sunshine and joy if we would but try; a few dimes or dollars judiciously spent by those who can afford it will make the hearts of many little children extremely happy.

The ladies of the church are arranging a special musical program for the occasion, which promises to add much to the pleasure and joyful anticipation of the Christmas tree.

WORRIED ABOUT HIS WEALTH

COULD STAND THE POWDER BURNS BUT UNWILLING TO PART WITH HIS COIN.

Last Sunday afternoon little Artie Palmer suffered quite a painful accident which will, perhaps, deprive him of much pleasure during the holidays. In some way the little fellow secured possession of several shot gun cartridges from which he skillfully extracted the powder: with the high explosives in his possession he secretely dug a hole in the back yard of the hotel premises and proceeded to "celebrate" in the most approved manner. He buried the powder in the hole and attached a string as a fuse, which he lighted and then scurred off to a place of safety. The fuse did not burn quite as rapidly as the young man desired, so he bent over to hasten the explosion, and just as he bowed himself over the hidden mine, the powder was ignited and little Artie Palmer was thrown several feet, his hair burned from the scalp and his face pitted with powder. Bravely the little fellow endured his suffering, while all those about him were crying; at first it was thought he would lose his eyesight; but upon examination it was found that his eyes were not injured greatly.

Just before the arrival of the physician the little fellow said "I'm awful sorry it all happened, but I could get along lots better if you all wouldn't take on so—that's worse than the burning; just don't cry and I'll stand my part of it alright."

Upon the arrival of the physician, the little fellow accosted him thus;—"Look here, doctor, I want you to tell me the truth about this thing, am I going to die? You tell me the truth now, 'cause I've got seven cents saved up for Christmas and I want to know all about this case; if I am going to die I want to know so I can arrange to dispose of my cash. I don't want no fussing over it after I'm gone."

He was assured that he would survive the catastrophe and with a joyous heart the little fellow turned in his bed and said "Well, I'll get a chance to blow in that seven cents yet."

N. A. KICKER, Town Clerk.

NOTE:—The Press is instructed by the Mayor to say that the above schedule will be adhered to strictly in every instance; that the law requires each person, firm or corporation to secure a license on the FIRST day of January, before beginning business, and that it will be to the interest of every one of whom a license is required to secure such license before the expiration of the first day of January, 1913. We are also instructed to say that it is not the duty of the Town Clerk to solicit licenses or to go from place to place for the purpose of issuing them, but it is the duty of all to appear at the office of the Town Clerk and secure the license.

The Mayor has kindly consented to allow fifteen days grace in which to secure licenses, but after that date the law will be enforced to the letter and those who neglect to secure licenses will have themselves to blame for the failure. In case license is not secured in proper time it is the duty of the Mayor to impose additional cost equal to the original amount of the license—and he can, if he deems it proper, impose costs equal to three times the amount of the license. Do not fail to secure your license and then blame the Mayor for discharging his duty.

There will be no favorites in this matter—every one will be required to "toe the mark" on time or bear the consequences.

A word to the wise is sufficient. GET YOUR LICENSE ON THE MORNING OF JANUARY FIRST, 1913, and thereby save yourself extra costs and much annoyance.

BANKRUPT STOCK SOLD

Saturday at noon Receiver Stuart of Montgomery auctioned off the bankrupt stock of goods, wares and merchandise belonging to the late firm of J. C. Jones & Co., which firm recently went into voluntary bankruptcy. For a few moments the bidding was quite lively but after forty five hundred dollars was reached all dropped out except Mr. Bernard Frank of Montgomery and Dr. E. A. Matthews of Clanton, both of whom kept things lively for a few minutes.

The stock was finally bid off to Mr. Bernard Frank for the sum of fifty eight hundred dollars.

The sale did not include the live stock or the book accounts of the firm; merely the stock of goods contained in the store house

Whether or not Mr. Frank was bidding for himself or for local parties was not stated, but it is presumed that the store house recently occupied by J. C. Jones & Co. will not long remain vacant.

ROADS ARE RESPONSIBLE

OF 8215 DERAILMENTS DURING YEAR 1877 CAUSED BY DEFECTS OF ROADWAY.

10,585 KILLED, 169,538 HURT

The Interstate Commerce Commission Makes Recommendations to Prevent Railroad Collisions.

Washington.—"Safety first" is the paramount rule of train operation suggested by the interstate commerce commission in its twenty-sixth annual report submitted to Congress. Discussion of disasters on American railroads during the last year constitutes an important feature of the report.

It is pointed out that many of the accidents resulting in fatalities might have been averted by the exercise of proper precaution or the employment of suitable devices and good equipment. Figures given show that of the total of 8215 derailments during the year 1877 were caused by defects of roadway and 3847 were due to defective equipment. This indicates an increase over the previous year of 652, in the derailments due to bad roadway and 1023 due to bad equipment.

The investigation by the commission itself of railroad accidents involving loss of life, the report says, "has proceeded far enough to indicate the need of more effective measures than thus far have been [illegible] to secure safety of railroad travel." While the previous suggestions of the commission as to the adoption by the railroads of all-steel, or steel-underframe, cars are being adopted "as rapidly as conditions will permit" and "the danger from the use of unsound cars is gradually disappearing" the serious dangers of defective roadway and the use of unsound rails still remain, as a result of which derailments are likely at any time to occur. Concerning its investigations, the commission says:

"Of the 31 derailments investigated 14 were either directly or indirectly caused by bad track. In five of these 14 cases the derailments would probably have been avoided had existing speed restrictions been observed; but in all the remaining cases no adequate speed restrictions were in force, and in three cases the track conditions were so obviously unsafe that derailments were likely to occur even at low speed. In one serious derailment an examination of the track in the vicinity of the accident disclosed 306 rotten ties within a distance of 147 rail lengths. Under many of the rails there were as many as 11 bad ties, and under each of two rails there were 12 ties so badly decayed and broken as to be totally unfit for service. In many of these ties the spikes were so loose that they were easily removed by hand, the wood having no longer any holding power. The track in the vivinity of this accident was poorly ballested and was unsafe for the passage of trains at ordinary speed. This derailment occurred on straight track while the train was running about 30 miles per hour."

TRAIN AND STREET CAR COLLIDE

Six Are Known To Have Been Killed Outright—Others Injured.

Ashtabula, O.—Six persons are known to have been killed and it is believed that six others are buried in the wreckage piled up 50 feet high when a coal train on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern hit a loaded street car at a grade crossing here.

It is said gates guarding the crossing were not closed and that the conductor of the street car got out to look up and down he track just as the crash came, but he and the motorman, A. F. McCutcheon, were not hurt seriously.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

Nashville.—In a bankruptcy petition filed here by Sidney Lasanby, a carpenter, he lists as assets "three beds, six chairs, one bureau, one kitchen safe, two carpets, three tables, one wardrobe, 29 chickens, one wife and four children." He claims the assets as exempt under the bankruptcy statutes.

Paris.—The republican majority is doing its utmost to prevail upon Leon Bourgeois, the former premier, to stand for the presidency of the republic. They are hopeful of success, but in the event his refusal is definite, an urgent invitation will be extended to Raymond Poincare, the premier, to accept the candidacy.

New York.—Suit against Henry Clay Pierce, head of the [illegible] Oil company, brought by [illegible] Ryerett to recover [illegible] which she claims was converted to his own use, [illegible] drawn by him.

Rome, Italy.—An attempt was made by the populace of Palermo to [illegible] the Anti-Socialist demonstration planned by the Reformist Socialists, to investigate stories of the [illegible] Italian troops, made public by Sir Edgar Cassel, British consul general.

The Christmas Tree at Wide Plain

By W. D. Nesbit

WIDE PLAIN is in Saskatchewan. It was so named because it is so. It is wide. The town does not cover the entire plain. Far be it from me to convey such an impression, inasmuch as the plain extends east, west, north and south ostensibly as far as there is anything.

No doubt somewhere in the distance there are trees, and hills, or something to stop the plain from spreading any further. And some day it is the intention of the Greater Wide Plain association to have real trees growing in their thriving little city. But just at present they are so busy getting the town established that the trees must wait.

George Freeman was one of the most energetic young men in Wide Plain. He was one of the pioneers. He was almost the Oldest Inhabitant, although he was but twenty-five years of age. You see, George located in Wide Plain when it was practically nothing but width and plain. He foresaw a future for the town, and became its leading dealer in agricultural implements and groceries and hardware and so on. He became the leading dealer, because he was the only one.

In a few months Wide Plain had a population of 2,500. And so social life became a feature of existence there.

Social life requires two factors. One of them is women. The other is men. You may have thought that one feature would be sociability and the other would be life, but that would be drawing it a bit fine.

Lucy Cleveland was the belle of Wide Plain. She was not the belle because she was the only young woman there, for there were others. Others—young and beautiful, but while some of the others were as young none of them were as beautiful as Lucy.

Consequently Lucy had suitors aplenty. In fact, she had eight suitors, that being the available unmarried portion of the population that she would consider. And she managed to give the eight the impression that she was not considering them very much.

George Freeman endeavored to induce her to consider him. George's policy in life was to get what he wanted by one of two methods. One was to go where it was and take possession, the other was to ask for it. Inasmuch as Lucy was not a building site nor a quarter section, he could not claim her by right of discovery. So he had asked her. And she had assured him that while she esteemed him highly she did not see her way to be his. George had not asked her if there was some one else to whom she had pledged her affection or plighted her troth. He did not care. He went on selling agricultural implements and striped overalls and brooms and nails and putty and canned goods and other groceries, whistling little melodies to himself and wondering how Lucy would want their house painted when they got married.

Every now and then he would propose again to Lucy. By every now and then I mean that he would propose, say, once a week. Some weeks he proposed twice. He saw that it pleased Lucy to be proposed to and George was a gentleman who believed in making himself agreeable to a young lady when he was fond of her.

So it came along toward Christmas.

"We must have a Christmas tree for the children," Lucy said.

Lucy was teacher in the Wide Plain Sunday School. Her pupils idolized her. George and the other seven suitors had tried to join her class, but she had insisted that they must attend the Bible class for older students, which was presided over by Mrs. Henry Gillup, a most capable married lady, who had brought one husband and six children to help upbuild Wide Plain.

The fact that Lucy had demanded a Christmas tree occasioned many smiles, especially from George's rivals.

"A Christmas tree!" laughed William Skidmore. "There isn't a tree for a hundred miles in any direction."

"Let's get one shipped in by freight, then," suggested Lake Morton.

"No time now," Wesley Perkins pointed out. "It's only two days to Christmas."

The seven rivals were not so particular about the tree. Each of them knew that Lucy would be disappointed a bit, but each of them felt that the gift he had selected for her would [illegible]

[illegible] Sunday morning as the children [illegible]

[illegible] Christmas [illegible]

unhappy because the dear children could not have a tree.

"Now, Lucy," he said, "I've arranged it all for you. There'll be a Christmas tree."

"Oh, have you got it? Where is it? I didn't know you could get one."

"It isn't here yet, but there'll be one Christmas eve. Now, don't ask questions. Mrs. Gillup and I will fix it up all right."

"But I must trim it up."

"No. Mrs. Gillup and I have arranged for it all. You are not to worry yourself about anything. Just you gather your class together and be at the church at 8 o'clock that evening, and the tree will be there."

So Lucy, scenting mystery, and too diplomatic to ask anything more, was compelled to content herself with that much information.

Towards dusk of the day before Christmas George was seen carrying several bulky bundles into the church. Mrs. Gillup had spent some time in conference with him that day. The seven rivals had attempted to quiz her, but she would not gratify their curiosity further than to say that there would be a tree. They had asked her—separately—if she would hang their presents for Lucy on the tree, and she had agreed to do so.

She and George, behind the drawn curtains of the church, labored long with curtain poles and string and a profusion of green paper, to say nothing of several bundles of artificial palms and the like, which George had unearthed among his stock.

When the audience was assembled for the Christmas eve exercises Mrs. Gillup slowly drew back a curtain which concealed one corner of the room, and there, with candles glowing and green paper and green palm branches rustling, stood a Christmas tree. It was not an evergreen tree.

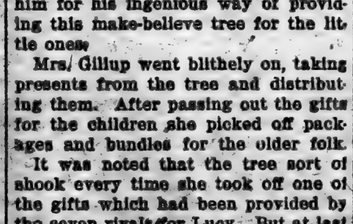
"We Must Have a Christmas Tree."

It was not a genuine fir or cedar, but it looked like a tree. And the candles and the strings of popcorn and glittering ornaments hid many of its faults.

To the surprise of Lucy, George was not in sight. She looked all about for him, in her delight, wishing to thank him for his ingenious way of providing this make-believe tree for the little ones.

Mrs. Gillup went blithely on, taking presents from the tree and distributing them. After passing out the gifts for the children she picked off packages and bundles for the older folk.

It was noted that the tree sort of shook every time she took off one of the gifts which had been provided by the seven rivals for Lucy. But at last the final package had been disposed of. Mrs. Gillup drew the curtain in front of the tree again and the audience filed out, laughing and chatting over the success of the entertainment. Lucy did not hurry away with the rest. She stepped back of the curtain with Mrs. Gillup.



"It was just lovely, Mrs. Gillup!" she exclaimed. "But why wasn't Mr. Freeman here? After his hard work and cleverness in helping you, I should have thought he would have wanted to see how the tree looked."

"I expect he was pretty busy."

"And—of course, I haven't any right to expect such a thing—but he was such a good friend of mine, Mrs. Gillup—I really thought it a little odd that he didn't make me some kind of a present—just a remembrance, or—"

"I didn't forget you, Lucy," said the tree. "You can have me."

And Mrs. Gillup says that Lucy knew all about it all the time, because she had sharp eyes, and no tree that wore shoes could fool her.

A Costly Gift.

"Those Gillyuncairns have been awful proud since Christmas," said the Envious Neighbor.

"What makes them so?" inquired the Curious Friend.

"Oh, their parents filled their stockings with gold coin."

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Don't forget the poor and unfortunate; these you have with you alway, remember, and he who does an act of kindness to them shall in no wise lose his reward.

The death of Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, who for the past ten or twelve years has represented this government at the Court of St. James, leaves a vacancy in the English diplomatic corps for the first time in many years. It is said that President Taft will not appoint a successor to Mr. Reid, as he would have but a short time to serve, since President-elect Wilson will in all probability name a democrat to that post as one of his official acts.

Some how or other or some how else, we don't hear anything from the republicans or even the Bull Moosers about the present price of cotton; the farmers are now receiving a better price for their staple than for years and yet it is just after a democrat has been elected President and the House and Senate are both democratic. Why don't you fellows hustle up some reasou? What in the world are your going to tell the "d-e-e-r p-e-e-p-u-l" to explain away this thing?

REV. L. H. S. CHAPPELLE

TO ARRIVE SATURDAY, DEC. 28.

A letter addressed to the Press man from Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle, our new minister, who is now residing in Brewton, states that he will arrive with his family on Friday or Saturday after the Christmas holidays and will immediately take charge of the church work here.

Mr. Chappelle is a forceful preacher, an elegant gentlemen and a most companionable friend. Clanton is exceedingly fortunate in having secured the services of Mr. Chappelle for the coming Conference year and a most cordial welcome awaits him and his estimable family.

COUNTY FAIR ASSOCIATION

Last Saturday the Directors and Stockholders of the Chilton County Fair Association held a meeting, at which time a dividend of ten per cent was declared on all outstanding stock, officers were elected for the coming year and preparations for holding a larger fair than ever made for next year.

Mr. W. H. Conway was re-elected President; Mr. Marion Foshee, General Manager; and Mr. G. O. Foshee, Secretary and Treasurer.

A new Board of Directors was also elected.

A START MADE

PRESS' OLD HOBBIE WINS IN A CANTER.

Last Friday and Saturday there appeared on the streets of Clanton several gentlemen with surveyor's compass and chain making surveys of different sections of the town, much to the delight of those who were on the inside, and arousing much curiosity on the part of those who did not know the purposes for which the gentlemen came.

As stated last week in the Press, exclusively, Dr. Matthews arranged with one of the foremost surveyors of the State to come to Clanton and map out, if possible, a feasible route for a system of sewerage for the town. This was the purpose of the visit of the surveyors here last week. Maps were made and elevations taken with a view to submitting to the Town Council a feasible route for the sewerage system. This plan will be submitted within a reasonable time and the town authorities will decide whether or not the town can best afford to stand the expense of an up-to-date system of sewerage or continue the old surface closets, pig pens and other germ-breeding accumulations which are daily thrown upon the streets.

Just keep your eye on old Hobbie horse "Sewerage" please.

WITH THE COURTS

SENTENCE DAY LAST FRIDAY.

Friday, the thirteenth, proved rather unlucky for a number of Chilton county prisoners, for on that day Judge Pearson sentenced all those who had been convicted at the recent term of the Circuit Court to serve the State or county according to the findings of the juries.

The following is the docket for last week:

Sam Reed, murder in first degree; continued by defendant till next term on account of the absence of Will Dillard and Will Byrd; attachment issued for Will Dillard with bond fixed at $200.

James Williams, murder in first degree; jury and verdict of guilty and sentenced to forty years in penitentiary.

Bill Oden, murder in first degree; jury and verdict of murder in second degree and sentenced to penitentiary for ten years.

Gene Martin, murder in first degree; jury and verdict of manslaughter; sentenced to three years in penitentiary.

Wilson Thomas, obstructing railroad track; jury and verdict of guilty; sentenced to ten years in penitentiary.

Jno. Davis Brown, obstructing railroad; guilty and sentenced by jury to ten years in penitentiary. On account of the extreme youth of the prisoner, he being but ten years of age, Judge Pearson sentenced him to ten years at the State reformatory for negroes at Mt. Meigs.

Mary Pond, vagrancy; sentenced to eight months for punishment and 53 days for costs.

Dolly Hunley and Rebecca Hunley, vagrancy; sentenced to six months for punishment and 48 days for costs.

The county convicts were sent off Saturday. The State convicts for Wetumpka Tuesday night.

Coughing at Night

One bad cough can keep the whole family awake at night. Phil Disorneau, Schaffer, Mich., says: "I could not sleep on account of a bad cough, and I was very weak. I used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, and soon the cough left and I slept soundly all night." Alred Drug Co.

THE GENTLE CYNIC.

Woman is a creature of mood; generally the imperative mood.

If it's the unexpected that happens, why should it be unexpected?

If love is really a disease, it is the most contagious one on record.

The sins that pay no dividends are the ones that shocks the world.

Some people never enjoy good health, even when they have it.

The further a man can see the less is he apt to be sure he is right.

A man's idea of an ideal wife is one who believes everything he tells her.

Music hath charms, but it isn't the songbirds that make the best pot pies.

When a girl throws a fellow over he realizes that youth must have its fling.

We never realize how much it costs to visit friends till they return the visit.

Almost as many people have been spoiled by too much money as by too little.

Every man has his price, and it is generally about twice as much as he is worth.

CONSIDER THESE POINTS.

Far better the naked truth than an overdressed lie.

Two's company—unless they are husband and wife.

The harder a woman is to please the less a man will try.

Self-control is the one thing a man always has until he needs it.

Some men find it easier to make a good living than to make good.

No matter how fast a young man may be he can be overtaken by trouble.

When it comes to making a rapid change of opinion every woman is an expert.

He is a very particular man who insists on combing his own hair in a barber shop.

Some people waste a lot of time trying to devise cures for other people's bad habits.

Lots of penitentiary cells are occupied by men who believed in reform for revenue only.

A woman would like to have a good figure in order to show her contempt for those who haven't.

Nothing shocks a girl quite so much as hearing an elderly woman laugh over the love disappointment she had when young.

JUST MUSING.

When a farmer decides to take a vacation he buys an excursion ticket and goes to a new country to look at the land.

In every town there are men who, in the matter of being saved, give the traveling evangelist the preference over the local preacher.

An unmarried man can go down town when he gets ready. But a married man must wait until his wife picks the ravelings off his clothes.

A widower with a houseful of children can get married any time. But a widow with a houseful of children should open her boarding house without unnecessary delay.

When a marriage takes place the qualifications of the husband with reference to his ability to make his wife comfortable and give her a place in society are a good deal discussed. But the qualifications of the wife with reference to making a home pleasant and happy are seldom mentioned. Nobody seems to consider that of any importance.—Jay E. House in Cleveland Leader.

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidence of a battle and a dead man across the threshold. Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once. Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war. Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by The Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer. Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief, and then makes his escape. Captain Grant's base villainy revealed.

CHAPTER XXIV.—Continued.

I know not when, during all my army life, I was more deeply impressed with the awful solemnity of war, than as I watched these volunteer soldiers land on the Jersey shore, and tramp away through the dust. In those ranks were sick and wounded scarcely able to keep up; occasionally one would crawl aside but the moment he was able would join some new body, and resume the march.

They were animated by a stern purpose which yielded power. Such as these were not to be trifled with. Others might scoff at their raggedness of line, their carelessness of discipline, their nondescript garments, and variety of equipment, but to one who had seen such in battle—who had been with them at Trenton, Brandywine, and Germantown—they were warriors not to be despised, stern, grim fighters, able to hold their own against England's best drilled battalions. I watched them file past—Wayne's, Varnum's, Scott's brigades, and Jackson's and Grayson's regiments—marking the brown, dust-caked faces, the eager eyes, the sturdy, tireless tread, the well oiled muskets. Boys, men, graybeards, all alike exhibited in their faces the same expression. They were anticipating battle against a hated foe, and counted hardship as nothing compared with the joy of conflict. Every step brought them closer to the grapple of arms—to that supreme test of strength, courage, endurance, for which they had left their homes. They might be poorly drilled, ill-dressed, variously armed, yet these were fighting men.

It was midnight when Morgan led us up the steep bluff, and out upon the sandy road. We advanced silently, and in straggling column through the darkness, passing the embers of camp fires for several miles, the recumbent soldiery of other commands sleeping on the ground. At Hopewell, Washington was holding another council with his officers. As we swung past we could perceive his tall figure standing in the glow of a fire, and there arose from the lips of our men a sudden, involuntary cheer, breaking strangely upon the solemn silence of the night. The group about him were startled and looked about, and he paused a moment shading his eyes.

"What troops are these?" he asked, his voice cutting across the distance. A hundred answered him:

"Morgan's riflemen!"

"Good, my lads!" and even at that distance I could see his face brighten. "There will be work for you at dawn."

With a rolling cheer, echoing down our ranks from front to rear, we answered, swinging the guns over our heads, as we swept forward into the dark night. There might be discussion, dissension about that council fire, but there was none in the hearts of those who were going out to die. Already rumors were flying about, regarding Lee's unwillingness to engage in battle. I met him, as I trudged past, standing beside Wayne, the firelight on his face, although his head was bowed. Even to our cheers he never once glanced up, and, as we passed beyond the radius of light, I laid my hand upon the mane of Morgan's horse.

"Is it true that Charles Lee thinks we should let Clinton go without fighting?" I asked soberly. "That was rumored at the ferry."

"'Tis enough," he answered, his eyes upon the dark column of plodding men. "And he seems to have others with him. I know not what has put the coward into the fellows of late. Saint Andrew! the odds are no greater than we have met before. But there'll be no fighting, lad, I fear, unless Washington takes the bit in his teeth and orders it. I'm glad the boys cheered him; 'twill give the man new heart."

"You favor the joining of issue?"

"Why not? Were we ever in better fettle? A retreating army is always half whipped, and we can choose our ground. Why, lad, 'tis reported Clinton's line stretches out full twelve miles, with train of baggage wagons and battery horses, and camp followers enough for a division. 'Twill be easy work attending to them, and most of his troops are Dutch and Tories."

By daylight we came up with the New Jersey militia, lying at rest along the bank of the Millstone river, waiting their turn to ford that stream, and join Maxwell on the opposite shore. From where I stood I could see the thin lines of Continentals spreading out like a fan, as the skirmishers advanced up the opposite bluffs. Down the trampled bank, men were struggling with a light battery, and suddenly in the press of figures I came upon Farrell. He was mud from head to foot, his face streaked with it, but he looked up with beaming eyes as I spoke his name, and our hands clasped.

"I thought you would be over there with Maxwell," he said, pointing across at the black dots, now clearly distinguishable in the glow of sunshine.

"I was left behind, and came up just now with Morgan," I replied. "But I am anxious enough to be with my own fellows. What means that skirmish line, Farrell? Are we already in touch with Clinton?"

He swept the hair out of his eyes with his great fist.

"No one knows exactly, but the British are not far off, and are headed this way. A scout came through with the news two hours ago—Clinton has taken the road to Monmouth." He chuckled grimly, glancing at my face. "And who think ye the lad was who told us?"

"Who?" my throat tightening.

"The same you was so anxious about a few days back."

"Mortimer! Eric Mortimer?"

"Aye, unless my eyes fail me already, it was the boy."

"You are sure? You saw him?"

"Well, I had a glimpse, as he came up the bank here from the ford, his horse dripping. It was dark still, and he only stopped to ask the road. I knew the voice, and the form—the lad is as slender as a girl—then he went by me, digging his horse with the spurs, and lying close. He had a Dragoon's cape flapping from his shoulders, but 'twas the boy all right. Ah! there go the guns up the bank. Now, perhaps, they'll let me take my fighting dogs across."

The way was open for me, at least, and I swung up into the saddle, and drove my horse down the slippery shore into the water. The stream was not deep, although the current flowed swiftly, and a moment later I had found Maxwell.

"Yes," he said to my first question, "we are going to fight, although it may not be anything more serious than skirmishing today. Washington has decided in spite of Lee, thank God, and we'll have a go at the Redcoats. Lafayette commands the advance, and Wayne will be up within a few hours. We are to skirmish forward toward Monmouth Court House; Clinton has turned that way."

"You learned that from a scout?"

"Yes; he just came through; one of Charles Lee's men, I understood—a blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked boy, who said his name was Mortimer. He had ridden from Cooks town, and was reeling in the saddle, but would go on. Your men are over there, major, beyond the clump of timber. In my judgment we'll accomplish little today. Ten chave is a heavy check to their powder."

"How many men with you?"

"Wayne comes with [illegible]

shots, but these fell back, leaving the road clear. By dark we were at Englishtown, hungry and thoroughly worn out, and there we halted, sleeping upon our arms. All I had in my haversack was a single hard biscuit, after munching which I lay down upon the ground and fell instantly asleep.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Fight at Monmouth.

The next day—Sunday, the twenty-eighth of June, 1778—dawned with cloudless sky, hot, sultry, the warmest day of the year. Not a breath of air stirred the leaves, and in the tree branches above us birds sang gleefully. Before daybreak we, who had been permitted to sleep for a few hours, were aroused by the sentries, and, in the gray dawn, partook of a meager breakfast. A fresh supply of ammunition was brought up and distributed among the men, and, before sunrise, we were in line, stripped for a hot day's work, eagerly awaiting orders.

I can make no pretense at describing in any detail, or sequence, the memorable action at Monmouth Court House, but must content myself with depicting what little I saw upon the firing line of Maxwell's brigade. We advanced slowly eastward over a gently rolling country, diversified by small groves. In advance was a thin line of skirmishers, and to left and right were Dickinson's and Wayne's men, their muskets gleaming in the sunlight. Early the rumor crept about among us that Lee had come up during the night with fresh troops, and assumed command.

Who led us was of but small consequence, however, as there was now no doubt in any mind but what battle was inevitable. Already to the south echoed a sound of firing where Morgan had uncovered a column of Dragoons. Then a courier from Dickinson dashed along our rear seeking Lee, scattering broadcast the welcome news that Knyphausen and his Hessians, the van of the British movement, were approaching. With a cheer of anticipation, the solders flung aside every article possible to discard, and pressed recklessly forward. Before we moved a mile my horse became so lame, I was obliged to dismount, and proceed on foot. Never have I experienced a hotter sun, or a more sultry air. Rapid marching was impossible, yet by nine o'clock we had passed the Freehold meeting house, and were halted in the protection of a considerable wood, the men dropping to the ground in the grateful shadow. Maxwell came along back of our line, his horse walking slowly, as the general mopped his streaming red face. He failed to recognize me among the others until I stepped out into the boiling sun, and spoke:

"What is that firing to the right, general? Are the Jersey militia in action?"

He drew up his horse with a jerk.

"That you, Lawrence? Can't tell anybody in this shirtsleeve brigade. What's become of your horse?"

"Gave out yesterday, sir. Have been on foot ever since. Is it going to be a fight?"

The grip of his hand tightened on the saddle pommel, his eyes following

"He Went by Me, Digging His Horse With His Spurs and Lying Close."

"Come on, lads, it's the top of the hill! What about the artillery?"

"We may not be able to move the guns," he answered, "but you are to keep your powder as dry as possible and hold Clinton to the road. Dry powder will be sent me soon as the storm breaks. That's all, sir."

I could scarce see the fellow as he rode whistling, and went splashing down the slope. Through the mist of rain the men gathered about were ruddy blotches.

"All right, you water-rats, come on!" I sang out cheerfully. "We'll give the Redcoats the battle of our lives yet!"

[illegible] the irregular line of exhausted men.

"Yes, when Washington gets up; you need never doubt that. We'd be at it now, but for Charles Lee. I'd like well to know what has come over that man of late—the old spirit seems to have left him. Aye! it's Dickinson and Morgan out yonder, wasting good powder and ball on a handful of Dragoons. Wayne has been ordered forward and them back, until he is not mad in sweat, and I am [illegible] Lee. By the Eternal! you should have heard Lafayette, when he learned [illegible] and may be again; at any rate I am disposed to make the trial."

"'Tis not like General Lee," I broke in. "He has ever been a reckless fighter. Has the man lost his wits?"

Maxwell leaned over, so his words should not carry beyond my ear.

"'Tis envy of Washington, to my mind," he said soberly. "He has opposed every plan in council, imagining, no doubt, a failure of campaign may make him the commander-in-chief. There comes a courier now."

The fellow was so streaked with dust as to be scarcely recognizable, and he wiped the perspiration from his eyes to stare into our faces.

"General Maxwell?"

"Yes; what is it?"

"Compliments of General Lee, sir, and you will retire your troops toward the Freehold Meeting House, forming connection there with General Scott."

"Retreat! Good God, man! we haven't fired a shot."

"Those were the orders, sir. Is that Scott, over yonder?"

Maxwell nodded, too angered for words. Then, as the courier galloped away, turned in his saddle.

"By heaven! I suppose we must do it, Lawrence. But what folly! What asininity! We've got the Redcoats hemmed in, and did you ever see a better field? Pray God I may hear Washington when he comes up. I'd rather be dead then, than Charles Lee."

We gave the orders, and the men fell back sullenly, swearing fiercely as they caught the rebellious spirit of their officers. Scarcely able to breathe in the hot, stagnant air, caked with foul mud to the waist, we attained the higher ground, and dropped helpless. Even from here the enemy were invisible, although we could see the smoke of their guns, and hear distant crackle of musketry. I sat up, staring through the heat waves toward the eminence on the left where Wayne's men remained, showing dimly against the trees. A group of horsemen were riding down the slope, heading toward our line. As they came into the sandy plain below and skirted the morass, I recognized Lee in advance, mounted on a black horse flecked with foam. Twice he paused, gazing across the hills through leveled field glasses, and then rode up the steep ascent to our rear. Maxwell met him not twenty feet from where I lay.

"What does this mean, sir?" Lee thundered hoarsely. "Why are your men lying strewn about in this unsoldierly manner, General Maxwell?" Are you unaware, sir, that we are in the presence of the enemy?"

Maxwell's face fairly blazed, as he straightened in the saddle, but before his lips could form an answer, a sudden cheer burst out from the crest of the hill, and I saw men leaping to their feet, and waving their hats. The next instant across the summit came Washington, a dozen officers clattering behind, his face stern-set and white, as he rode straight toward Lee.

"What is the meaning of this retreat, General Lee? My God, sir, how do you account for such disorder and confusion?" he exclaimed, his voice ringing above the uproar, his angry eyes blazing into Lee's face. "Answer me."

The other muttered some reply I failed to catch.

"That's not true," returned Washington, every word stinging like a whip. "It was merely a covering party which attacked you. Why did you accept command, sir, unless you intended to fight?"

"I did not deem it prudent, General Washington, to bring on a general engagement."

"You were to obey my orders, sir, and you know what they were. See! They are coming now!"

He wheeled his horse about, pointing with one hand across the valley.

"Major Cain, have Oswald bring up his guns at once; Lieutenant McNeill, ride to Ramsey and Stewart; have their troops on the ridge within ten minutes—General Maxwell, these are your men?"

"They are, sir."

"Hold this line at any cost, the reserves will be up presently."

As he drew his horse about he again came face to face with Lee, who sat his saddle sullenly, his gaze on the ground. Washington looked at him a moment, evidently not knowing what to say. Then he asked quietly:

"Will you retain command on this height, or not, sir?"

"It is equal to me where I command."

"Then I expect you will take proper means for checking the enemy."

"I shall not be the first to leave the ground; your orders shall be obeyed."

What followed was but a medley of sight and sound. I saw Washington ride to the left; heard Lee give a hurried order, or two; then I was at the rear of our own line strengthening it for assault. There was little enough time left.

Under the smoke of several batteries, whose shells were ripping open the side of the hill, the British were advancing in double line, the sun gleaming on their bayonets, and revealing the uniforms of different corps.

"Steady, men! Steady!" voice after voice caught up the command. "Hold your fire!"

"Wait until they reach that tallest tree!" I added.

SHALL PEOPLE RULE?

REVERSAL OF POPULAR WILL IN STATE OF MARYLAND.

Appointment of Stand-Pat Republican to Succeed Senator Rayner Is the Kind of Politics That Causes Exasperation.

The legislature of Maryland elected this fall is largely Democratic. Under the law it will not meet until a year from January. The governor, who is a Republican, elected one year ago by a meager plurality, improves the opportunity for partisanship by appointing a stand-pat Republican to succeed the late Isidor Rayner in the United States senate. This is worse than a nullification of the popular will. It is a deliberate and inexcusable reversal of the popular will. It is a kind of politics that just now is highly impolitic, for the people are exasperated and impatient and they are determined to rule.

In the new congress one house will have an overwhelming Democratic majority. The other will be closely divided politically. Experience has shown that this is the way the stage is usually set for intrigue, partisan jockeying and betrayals of the people. If Democrats and Republicans cannot rise above party and superior their selfish interests in these circumstances it will be many a day before either of them will have another opportunity. If they do not now enforce the people's will constitutionally it will presently be enforced unconstitutionally over the wreck of parties that are false to the Constitution.

We are a people in a hurry. Traditions, constitutions and laws often stand in our way are obnoxious to us. Whether it is because we have become overconfident in our democracy or because we have lost faith in democracy, the fact is that great numbers among us are intolerant of everything that obstructs our will even for the best of reasons. In the Maryland case the obstruction rests upon the worst of reasons.

Government by parties seems to be necessary in free countries, but there are times when, if party lines do not yield, something much more important must break. Non-partisanship is an essential of democratic equipment. When it falls into disuse there is always danger of an appeal to the devices of revolution and tyranny. The exasperated peoples seeking to restore one right have been known to sacrifice many others equally valuable. We have seen that menace very recently.

By obstinacy in the new congress Republicans may easily bring humiliation and disaster upon Democrats, but they will involve themselves also in the ruin which they create. There is a new party at the door, led by men who hate constitutions and courts, who act first and think afterward and whose one remedy for wrong is violence.—St. Louis Republic.

Delay Would Mean Trouble.

At all events the president-elect is done right to take the bull of tariff revision promptly and firmly by the horns. Under any possible form or under any possible method the projected reform is bound to make trouble for the administration. But a policy of evasion or delay would mean more trouble. President Taft's experience has made one thing plain, namely, that an administration which involves itself in definite promises and then fails to make these promises good practically signs its own death warrant. When the conditions attending his second candidacy are studied and measured, it will, we think, be discovered that the rock upon which Mr. Taft foundered was the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill—a bill enacted presumably in performance of a party promise, but which did not in fact answer the terms of that promise.

Revision Will Be Downward.

Congressman Underwood, who, as leader of the house, is expected to be a dominating factor in the new tariff legislation, predicts that "the work of revising the tariff downward will be completed by July." Speaker Clark says that the revision at the extra session "should touch every schedule in the law," but he thinks that this can be accomplished in about sixty days. "The tariff is going to be revised downward and prosperity will be the keynote of the Democratic regime," says Mr. Bryan, who finds "not the slightest evidence of nervousness among business men."

Shoe Tariff Truth.

Six Democratic congressmen from Massachusetts stand pat on the shoe tariff. They are not so unreasonable. The shoe tariff is low now; shoe makers say they would need more if the extortionate shoe machinery patents were broken and they had free machinery.

His Need Is Desperate.

There is a difference of opinion as to whether the Republican party needs rejuvenation, reorganization, rehabilitation, but all are agreed that whatever it needs it needs it desperately.

The natural source of support for progressive recruits in large numbers is the Socialist party. The Progressives have annexed the Socialist principles. Their logical next step is the [illegible] in the absorption of the Socialist votes.

The Night before Christmas

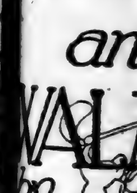
By Gilbur D. Nesbit

'Tis the night before Christmas"—
I whisper the rhyme
And wander in fancy
To "once on a time."
I see the big fireplace,
The girls and the boys,
The long, heaped-up stockings,
The drums and the toys.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
So old, and so new!
With all of its dreamings
So good and so true.
I see all the faces
Forgotten so long,
And out of the twilight
There murmurs a song.

'Tis the night before Christmas"—
And here, by my grate,
The past rises, glowing,
The years lose their weight,
The boy-days come trooping
At memory's call,
And gleam in the embers
That flicker and fall.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
Ah, could I but clutch
The gold of my fancies!
'Twould go at my touch!
The shouts and the laughter
Now sweet to my ear
Would shrink to a silence
Too deep and too drear.



'Tis the night before Christmas"—
Remembrances stir
As sweet as the cherished
Frankincense and myrrh.
And, hark! As the visions
Grow dim to the sight,
There comes: "Merry Christmas!
And, boy-days, good night!"

HEAD A MASS OF PIMPLES

Hyattsville, Md.—"My little boy was taken with an itching on the scalp. There was an ashy place on his head about the size of a ten-cent piece, and the hair was falling from this place by the roots. In about ten days all over his head were these ashy spots which looked like ringworm, but were porous-like. The itching and burning made him scratch a great deal. His head had gotten so that it was just a mass of mattery little pimples all heaped on each other, and when I took off his night-cap, the hair and flesh came off at the same time. I really thought he would lose his whole scalp. He couldn't sleep for five weeks, it would itch and burn until I thought he would go into convulsions.

"I used different soaps and salves to no satisfaction. Then I decided to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Finally I noticed he began to sleep all night. I used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and he was entirely cured. He has a better growth of hair now than he had at first." (Signed) Mrs. Ida S. Johnson, Mar. 26, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Equivocal Reply.

A nonconformist clergyman in Manchester is chuckling over a letter he recently received from the vicar of a certain parish. He had written to the vicar asking for permission to conduct a funeral in the churchyard.

"He immediately sent me a most courteous note," the nonconformist clergyman says; "but I could not help noticing that it would be possible to give to his word a sinister meaning. The note ran: 'You will, both to-morrow and at any other time, be most welcome in our churchyard.'"—London Tit-Bits.

HE KNEW WHAT TO AVOID

If Knowing Human Nature Would Do It, This Man Would Have Made Good Preacher.

"Dr. John Haynes Holmes, who preached a Bull Moose sermon to President Taft the Sunday before election day, isn't like Washington White," said a member of Dr. Holmes' Church of the Messiah in New York.

"Washington White was an aged hod carrier. Laying down his paper one evening, he said to his wife over his spectacles:

"'Martha, I believe I'd make a preacher. Listen, now, and I'll give you a sermon.'

The old man then stood up to the table and bellowed out a vigorous discourse on the wickedness of the idolators of the Orient.

"His wife said at the end:

"'A good enough sermon, Washington, but you've told us all about the sins of the foreigners and never a word about the sins of the folks at home here.'

"'Ha, ha, ha, I understand preachin' too well for that,' laughed the wild old man."

Hopeless.

"Who wrote that story about Roosevelt's return to the Outlook office?" asked the managing editor.

"Billy Pennington," replied the city editor. "I thought it was a pretty good story."

"It was more than that. It was a remarkable story. I think we ought to raise Pennington's salary. He didn't wind up by saying: 'The colonel then plunged into a mass of correspondence.'"

"I'm sorry to have to tell you that he did I blue-penciled that part of it."

"Oh, pshaw! We'll never be able to make anything of that fellow"

Where Autos Are Barred.

Prince Edward island bars automobiles, not because the islanders cannot afford the machines, but because of accidents caused by the recklessness of drivers who brought in the first cars. They caused many runaways, and a few had tragic endings. The legislature at once passed a law barring autos from the island. Some of the leading cities have since endeavored to have the enactment repealed, but the country influence has always been strong enough to overcome all such efforts.

... Sullivan county ...had 100 bushels of po- ... which he intended to market during the Winter of 1907-08, according to an article in the November numberof Southern Good Roads.

But at that time Sullivan county had no good roads and as the Winter came on the trails they were using became impassable; one could hardly get over them with two horses hitched to buggy, to say nothing for a loaded wagon. The farmers kept waiting and hoping for a season of dry weather and an improvement in the condition of the roads, but it never came, and finally before Spring opened up, every potato in his cellar was rotten. Meanwhile, in Bristol, Tennessee, just seven miles away, they had been hauling potatoes in from northern markets and selling them for $1.40 a bushel. On account of the muddy roads the Sullivan county farmer lost $140.00—enough to pay his taxes on a good roads bond issue for twenty years.

There are a great many morals that might be drawn from this story, but probably the most striking is the way the town and country people depend on each other. Here were people in Bristol paying a tremendous price for potatoes while one of their own neighbors had a hundred bushels rotting in his cellar; they desired nothing better than to buy from him and save freight, and he desired nothing better than to sell to them and save his money, but neither could do anything because they had no way of getting together, so the town people's money went to New York and the country man's potatoes rotted.

It was a shame, wasn't it?

Suppose next February potatoes should go to $1.40 a bushel and a farmer in Silver Hill had a hundred bushels; would he bring them in? Maybe he would, but if the coming Winter is anything like as bad as the last one was he could'nt. Last March cotton was selling for two cents more than it was last November; suppose next March it goes two cents higher than it is now and you have a bale left over. Do you suppose you will he able to get them to town over our present roads? It means a matter of ten dollars on every bale, and $10 would pay the average man's taxes for a long, long time. In this town alone about February and March, chickens and eggs will reach staggering prices but, no matter how many fowls their wives may have, mighty few farmers will want to make the trip to town just because of the awful roads. Folks in town will be willing to pay almost any price and the farmers will have plenty of chickens, but they can't get together.

That's a shame too, isn't it?

All of us know these things in a hazy sort of way, but we just hadn't thought about them. But when we are losing money every day it's time to begin to think and arrange some better means of getting about, for mighty few of us have any money to throw away and by our present way of doing things, we are litterally flinging it to the birds.

LIEUT. GORDON CATTS GIVEN AN HONOR

Lieut. Gordon Reeves Catts of the United States army has been assigned to special duty as instructor in mathematics. This is regarded as a most desirable post and one for which but few young officers are qualified. The Department of Mathematics is one of the most important at the famous military school, and is, perhaps, higher and more thorough than the Department of Mathematics in any other American college. Alabamians have figured rather extensively in the conduct of that department. Gen. Frank McIntire, now in command of the Marine Corps and an Alabamian, was at its head once. Again for many years Colonel Echols of the well known Madison county family of that name presided over it.

Lieutenant Catts has a large number of relatives in Montgomery, Chilton and Lowndes counties. He was appointed to West Point about ten years ago, and in his four years at the academy he made an excellent reputation.

Lieutenant Catts is a son of our ex-Sheriff Jno. S. Catts of Verbena

CARRIERS' EXAMINATION

Under instructions from the post office department, postmaster Dudley held a rural mail carriers examination at the High School building last Saturday at which time there were sixteen applicants for examination.

The establishment of a new route out of Clanton made the examination necessary; besides this, those now on duty are liable at any moment to become sick, or desire a holiday and it was for this purpose that new applicants were examined.

The examination papers were forwared to Washington and the successful applicants will be named later.

This is one of the results of a "practical (?) joker. One of the "little" incedents from which one fellow derives a lot of "pleasure(?) and the other fellow has to do the suffering.

In order that such things may not again happen, would it not be wise for the council to pass a law at its next meeting, prohibiting the discharge of any kind of fire works or other explosives within the fire limits of the town?

To wait till next Christmas may be too late. What say you Mr. Pinckard, you are a councilman; can't you introduce the ordinance?

PARCELS POST

COMMON STAMPS NO GOOD

On Wednesday morning next, the first of 1913, the parcels post system will go into effect, by which the great business houses can easily crowd out the small-town merchants and through which the good house-wife of the country can ship each morning by mail for immediate delivery, her accumulation of eggs. But, one thing must be borne in mind, ordinary postage stamps will not be servicable; in fact, if used on parcels post matter, the parcel will not be taken and delivered; you must secure the regular parcels post stamps; the name of the sender must be plainly marked on the package, together with the address.

Now don't go make the mistake of trying to send eggs or other parcels through the mails with ordinary stamps; don't fail to comply with the regulations and then blame the postmaster or the system for the failure of your package to arrive at destination.

Remember also that pistols, liquors and certain drugs are debarred.

NO TAFT APPOINTMENTS IN SOUTH WILL BE CONFIRMED

Washington, Dec. 20.—The committee of five democratic senators appointed by the democrats of the senate to confer with the republican leaders of that body to straighten out the tangle over patronage began work today by framing list presented by President Taft with a view to an agreement as to which should be confirmed and which should be rejected.

No republican nomination for places in Southern states will be confirmed, and in the other states represented by one democratic senator and one republican the nomination will be acted upon according to their political justification. Wherever a democratic senator protests a nomination by his republican colleague no confirmation will follow.

Signs of progressive members coming into control of the senate were seen today in a movement to re-organize committees by application of the preferential vote in the caucus.

ARE THE GREAT MEN DEAD?

Makers of Nation Lie Motionless, but Their Lofty Spirits Cannot Expire, Says Everett.

To be cold and breathless, to feel not and speak not—this is not the end of existence to the men who have breathed their spirits into the institutions of their country, who have stamped their characters on the pillars of the age, who have poured their heart's blood into the channels of the public prosperity.

Tell me, ye who tread the sods of yon sacred height, is Warren dead? Can you not still see him—not pale and prostrate, the blood of his gallant heart pouring out of his ghastly wound, but moving resplendent over the field of honor, with the rose of heaven upon his cheek and the fire of liberty in his eye?

Tell me, ye who make your pious pilgrimage to the shades of Vernon, is Washington indeed shut up in that cold and narrow house? That which made these men and men like these cannot die.

The hand that traced the charter of independence is, indeed, motionless; the eloquent lips that sustained it are hushed; but the lofty spirits that conceived, resolved and maintained it, and which alone, to such men, make it life to live—these cannot expire.—Edward Everett.

SEWS HAIR ON BALD SCALPS

Dr. Ferenez Has Devised Method of Giving One a Luxuriant New Thatch.

Dr. Seekaly Ferencz has devised a method for implanting hair into the scalps of bald-headed persons. In carrying out the process the scalp is first carefully cleansed and anesthetised with a solution of novocaine. The operator uses a number of small hooks, made of gold wire, and in the eyelet of each hook a doubly folded hair is inserted. The hook is then pushed into the scalp with aid of a Pravatz needle, of which from 300 to 400 are in readiness, all prepared with hook and hair, and, of course, thoroughly sterilised before use.

When the needle has been pushed into the scalp it is turned at a right angle and then pulled out, leaving the hair under the skin fastened by the outstanding end of the hook. As at one sitting not more than from 300 to 400 hairs can be implanted, a full head of hair requires from five to forty sittings, assuming that from 10,000 to 20,000 hairs will cover the head. Dr. Ferencz is sometimes able to apply the treatment every alternate day. If there is inflammation around a hair this is pulled out and the inflammation promptly ceases.—Chicago Tribune.

NEW THEORY OF COLORS.

Experiments have been made which, it is held, demonstrate that the true complementary colors of the spectrum have not hitherto been recognized.

Red, for instance, has always been considered to be the complement of green, yellow of violet, and blue of orange. But, according to Rosenstiel, the complements of red and orange are neither green nor blue, but two greenish-blue tints, and the complement of yellow is asserted to be blue, and not violet, which is the complement of green. Accordingly, there has been formed a new "chromatic circle" for the use of artists, which Rosenstiel believes to be more correct than its predecessors.—Harper's Weekly.

FIXING RATES UNDER PARCEL POST SYSTEM

Government Goes Into Business of Transmitting Merchandise Through the Mails.

NEW LAW FULLY EXPLAINED

Country Divided Into Zones and Units for Purpose of Fixing Charges for Carriage—No Package Weighing More Than Eleven Pounds Is Mailable—Anything Properly Wrapped Which Will Not Injure Other Mail May Be Sent.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

With the coming of the New Year the United States government will enter into a new field of enterprise—the transmittal of merchandise by what is known as the parcel post. For years there has been a demand for such a system of inexpensive transmittal of packages. The camps of favor and disfavor of the parcel post scheme have been about equally divided. Finally at the last session of congress a bill was passed which will put the plan into operation, but only it must be said in little more than an experimental way.

It is the intention of Uncle Sam to move rather slowly in the parcel post matter. He wants to find how popular it will be, how much it will cost the government, and whether there is to be a profit or loss at the end of each year. If it is found that the plan is successful from the point of view of the people, which means the government also, the parcel post will be extended until finally it reaches the proportions which its proponents say they believe it is destined to assume.

Zone System Explained.

It is no exaggeration to say that thousands upon thousands of inquiries have been made of the postmaster general as to just what the parcel post will mean to the people. It was the law of congress establishing the system which made provision for a division of the country into zones and into 35,000 units which are to be used as centers in describing the circles which mark the boundaries of the zones. There has been no clear understanding, apparently, of this zone system, but really it is a very simple matter.

The accompanying map shows the country divided into zones from the unit in which Washington is situated, as the center. Accompanying the map is a table showing the rate of postage per pound for parcels from Washington to places within all the zones.

Each unit contains an area thirty miles square. Now each unit is a center from which the zones are drawn and so every unit in the country no matter where it is situated will have zones drawn from it just exactly as Washington has them drawn from it. For instance, take Keokuk, Ia., which is in a unit in the fifth zone. From that will be drawn circles exactly as they are drawn from Washington and they will be numbered from Keokuk as number one, just as they are numbered from Washington as number one. Of course, however, Zone Six will have a different geographical position as related to Keokuk than it has as related to Washington, but as the radius of the circles drawn from Keokuk is the same length as the radius of the circles drawn from Washington, Keokuk's Zone Six will be just as far from its center as Washington's Zone Six is.

How Rates Are Fixed.

It can be seen from this readily enough that the postal rates from Washington to its particular zone will be the same as the postal rates from Keokuk to its particular zones. Each unit being about thirty miles square will of course contain in most cases a number of postoffices, but each office in the same unit is considered as being the center of the circles from which the zones are drawn. The rates of postage are fixed from the unit in which the sending postoffice is situated, but the price to every place in any zone is just the same. To illustrate, it will cost exactly the same amount to send a parcel from Washington to Erie, Pa., that it costs to send it to Atlanta, Ga., because Erie and Atlanta with reference to Washington are situated in the fourth zone. The rates therefore are fixed from the unit in which the postoffice is located, but they are the same from that office to any point in any one zone.

It will be seen by reference to the table of rates of postage that it will cost more per pound to send a package a long distance than it does to send it a short distance. The rate increases for a package weighing one pound at the rate of one cent for each zone. No package weighing more than 11 pounds can be sent under the new parcel post law. It should be said right here that on the long hauls the parcel post may not be able to compete with the express companies, but that on shorter hauls it can so compete. It was the expressed desire of the legislators and of the postoffice officials that the parcel post system should be made of particular use to persons having farm and factory products to transmit to customers. It is probable that producers must study the rates of postage and the convenience of transmittal and compare them with the cost and convenience under present methods before individually a man can determine whether he is to profit or not by the change. Then there is another thing to be considered and which only can be known definitely when fuller regulations have been made to specify exactly what kind of things can be sent by parcel post. It can be said in a general way that anything can be sent which is properly wrapped and which will not injure other mail matter with which it may come in contact.

Copy Foreign Countries.

It is probable that the government will adopt a means of transportation for certain kinds of its merchandise much like those which have been adopted in parcel post countries abroad. What the English call hampers, basket-like arrangements, probably will be adopted, and as these can be kept separate from the ordinary mail matter it is believed that the regulations as finally adopted will allow the sending of eggs, butter, dressed poultry, live poultry, honey, fruit, and other products of the country.

The 11-pound limit for a single package may work at first against any very extended use of the parcel post for some of the articles which have been named. Of course, more weight can be sent if it is sent in different parcels, but the cost in that case would be heavier because the increase per pound on a single package is not great up to 11 pounds, and probably it would increase at no greater rate if the government were to raise the limit of weight which is now fixed. To make it simpler, it will cost more to send the package of 12 pounds than it would to send one package of 11 pounds, but the government eventually should allow a heavier single package to be carried and should charge in proportion just what it does now for one package of 11 pounds weight.

Every postmaster in the United States will have a parcel post map like the one which is here reproduced except that the zone lines will be shown with the unit of his postoffice as a center. All that a postmaster will have to do when a parcel is presented for transportation is to find out in what zone the destination of the package lies. His table will show him instantly the rate per pound from the unit in which his postoffice lies to the zone of the package's destinations, the price as has been explained before, to every postoffice in any one zone being the same. The parcel post will take nothing but fourth-class matter. Printed matter is still in the third-class designation. Therefore books cannot be sent by the parcel post system. This the postoffice authorities seem to think is in a way unjust and may work a hardship. It may be that in the future the law will be changed so as to include all printed matter. It seems to be certain that an attempt will be made to bring about this change as speedily as possible.

Must Bear Stamp.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has ordered that postmasters be advised that parcel post packages cannot be accepted for mailing unless they bear a distinctive parcel post stamp and have attached to them the return card of the sender. A series of distinctive stamps is now in course of preparation for this class of mail as required by the law creating the parcel post system. Consignments of these stamps will be ready for shipment to all postoffices in ample time for the establishment of the new system on New Year's day.

The postoffice department has given instruction to every postmaster in the country to enlighten his patrons as much as possible on the general subject of the parcel post and especially on the use of the special stamps and the necessary attachment of the return card. The law requires that all fourth-class matter mailed after January 1, 1913, without parcel post stamps attached shall be treated as "Held for postage" matter. Parcel post packages will be mailable only at postoffices, branch postoffices, lettered and local named stations, and such numbered stations as may be designated by the postmasters.

It has been announced by Postmaster General Hitchcock that nearly 70,000 scales will be required for use in the parcel post system which is to go into effect January 1st. He has accordingly authorized the issuance of bids for that number. Two hundred of the largest postoffices and their branches will be supplied with automatic computing scales. The next class of offices, numbering about 10,000, will be given high grade beam scale, while the four class offices, numbering about 40,000, will be furnished with the [illegible] having [illegible] capacity [illegible] special [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

PREMIER CORN GROWER.

Marshall County Boy Grows One Hundred and Ninety-five Bushels, Winning Contest.

Montgomery.—Out of nearly 10,000 boys enrolled in the corn clubs in Alabama, J. P. Leach, of Union Grove, Marshall county, has been awarded the decision as the premier corn grower. His selection was announced by a committee appointed by the Montgomery Fair association which organization offered a number of prizes.

Because of his record, Leach will be given a trip to Washington, toward the expenses of which $100 will be paid. Willie Atchison of McCalla, Jefferson county, was given second honors, and as a reward he will receive a trip to Washington, the expenses of which to the extent of $85 will be paid by the Montgomery Fair association.

Leach's record was the production of 195.58 bushels of corn on one acre, at a total cost of $19.95. Atchison raised more corn, 198.25 bushels in all, but at a cost of $35.50. The record is something behind last year's, when Eber Kimbrough, of Alexander City, raised 224.75 bushels on one acre. Unfavorable weather is supposed to be the cause of the differences in the highest yields.

Besides receiving the Montgomery fair prizes, Leach and Atchison are in line for prizes in the state contest, fostered by the department of agriculture, in which all comers are entered, men, women and boys. Also, they probably will receive prizes offered by the corn club organization, of which L. N. Duncan, and J. B. Hobdy of Auburn, are the promoters, in league with local citizens on the one hand and the federal department of agriculture on the other.

The Fair association also offered prizes for the county corn production. Of the counties contesting, Marshall was adjudged the best, winning the first prize of $50; Monroe county the second, $40; Calhoun county third, $25.

ARE PUBLIC PROPERTY.

Supreme Court Says Citizens Have the Right to See Official Papers.

Montgomery.—Official documents are public property when the public interest is involved, declared the supreme court in the case of the Citronelle excise commission against William C. Skinner. The case involved the attempt of Skinner to set aside the judgment of the excise commission in granting to Frank Allen of Citronelle, a license to sell liquor. Skinner contended that the requisite number (twenty), of qualified voters, had not signed Allen's petition, as is required by law.

But the excise commission of Citronelle would not grant Skinner's appeal that he be allowed to see the petition. The Mobile law and equity court held that Skinner could see the petition, and could investigate his claim that not 20 qualified voters had signed Allen's petition. The excise commission appealed the case.

"With respect to records other than judicial, no statutes to the contrary intervening, right of access or inspection to documents," said the court. However, in this case, no such privacy was involved. The public interest was concerned, said the court, and the public law.

"Private embarrassment to the excise commission," the court said, "is wholly subordinate to the paramount public interest—the maintenance and enforcement of the public law."

PAY TAXES ON VALUE OF BONDS.

Shareholders Liable, While Banks Themselves Declared to Be Exempt.

Montgomery.—Shareholders in banks of Alabama must pay taxes on the value of state bonds which are the bank's property, although the banks themselves are exempt from taxation on the same bonds. The proposition was decided by the court of appeals in an opinion rendered by Judge Perry Thomas anent the case of the Jefferson county tax collector against a Bessemer bank.

Certain state bonds are exempt from taxation by provision of the code; but the exemption does not apply to owner of the bank and to bank stockholders as well.

AUTOMOBILE TAX ATTACKED

Montgomery Man Appeals Case To Test Constitutionality of Measure.

Montgomery.—An attack on the law providing for licenses for automobiles was made in the court of appeals by A. G. Boemsan, of Montgomery, who appealed a case decided against him in the Montgomery city court.

Boseman seeks to have the law declared unconstitutional. His contention is that a state tax in such a case is violative of the constitutional provision which gives to cities and towns exclusively the right to levy taxes or privileges. It is understood lawyers generally hold the case of Boseman against the state law one of exceptional merit.

In the event the law is declared unconstitutional the state department of motor vehicles, a sub-division of the department of state, will be abolished.

Old Santy was powerful good to us, thank you!

How many did you undertake to make happy yesterday? If you were neglectful in this respect you had a poor Christmas indeed.

We are making no apologies for the paper this week; the boys wanted holiday and they had it. Christmas comes but once a year you know, and kids will be kids.

Oh for an electric light plant that will give us lights on dark days! Most of the customers, we understand, are on meters and the "juice" whenever furnished, makes its own record. Help the merchants and poor printers, and other folks out, Mr. Light man, by giving a small stream of juice these dark mornings and afternoons.

Congressman Blackmon is busy circulating a petition among congressmen to request Pres-elect Wilson to rescind the order of President Taft placing fourth-class postmasters under the civil service.

That was an awkward, as well as a selfish dodge of Taft to fasten the republican regime on the people after they had spoken so emphatically.

The Press had quite a lengthy article prepared on the "Boys Corn Club" and the "Girls Tomato Club" giving a list of the prize winners and other news of an interesting nature, but we were unable to get it in type this week; it will appear next week.

Some of our Bull Moose friends will undertake to off-set the present price of cotton with some kind of an explanation about that eighteen thousand dollars, which has not been explained.

The "peeple" want to know something of each—get busy with explanations, or, perhaps, "last day circulars" may be necessary to again fortify your positions and to deceive the voters.

Its easier to kill a fellow and go to trial than it is to sell a bottle of "bug juice" and take chances.

Tired of His Pose

Exchange.

"Well, I was the defeated candidate, wasn't I?"

"You were."

"I have congratulated the successful candidate, thanked the voters, taken all the joshing, and smiled a cracked smile for a month

"What about it?"

"Simply this: I am now going to take a month off, go out into the woods and cuss."

SEVEN REASONS

By SUSANNE GLENN.

They sat on the crumbling old stone wall, looking down the sun-kissed lane at the reviving signs of spring.

"Ethel," said the young man, "are you glad I'm back?"

"Why, to be sure, Fred." She looked at him curiously. "But there is something different about you—you have changed."

"Don't you know what it is? Don't you, Ethel? I could hardly wait to get home and tell you. Tell me you missed me! Tell me you love me! Ethel, I want you to marry me!"

The girl smiled serenely.

"Is this a proposal, Freddie? It is a good thing that I am an old, old friend or you would frighten me to death with your vehemence."

"It is a proposal," he said grimly, "and you need not receive it flippantly either, young lady. Look at me!"

But Miss Mayhorne wisely kept her gaze directed down the enchanted lane.

She did not in the least wish to marry Fred Craig—in fact she had several excellent reasons for especially not desiring it. But she knew from many experiences dating back to childhood that if she looked into his eyes she was lost, would do whatever he wished against her better judgment. And he knew it, too.

"I'm not going to look at you," declared the girl calmly. "You have led me into too much mischief as it is. And I am not receiving your proposal flippantly. But—I cannot believe you mean it, boy. All our friends have predicted you would propose to me, but I never believed it. I thought our friendship was of another sort."

"Well, you see it isn't. And I am proposing, Ethel, in dead earnest. Do you want me to go into all the details?"

"Oh, Freddie, no! Because I can never marry you."

"Why not?"

"I have, let me see, one, two, three—yes, six very excellent reasons for not doing so!"

"Fire away."

"You wish to hear them?"

"I demand to hear them," sternly.

She turned and looked at him. But not for long. The look in his eyes hurt her.

"Oh, I'm sorry for him," she whispered with sudden tears in her eyes, "but I cannot—he'd be the death of me!"

"Well," her voice sounded a little unsteady, "we—we know each other too well, Fred."

"But how can a fellow know too much about the girl he is going to marry? I supposed that was one of the surest stones in our foundation of happiness."

"Well, it isn't! You would know every one of my faults and weaknesses, and be watching out for them to appear. And I would yours. And you would know all my youthful mistakes and follies, and I—I'd hate you for it!"

"Do you hate me now?"

"There isn't any romance about it, either. How can there be, when we have played together all our lives? We never could have nice, romantic dreams about each other; we'd just know all there was to know right from the first."

"Sometimes," suggested Craig, "the romance ends with the awakening. At least we would know the worst about each other."

"But there would be no romance in it, just the same," persisted Ethel.

"Who cares for romance if we are happy?"

"And then," ignoring the interruption, "we should miss so much experience. You have never had any girl but me; how can you be sure you really want me?"

"True," he answered gravely. But his eyes danced.

"And I have never had any other—lover!"

"Oh, Ethel, this is going too far! What name do they go by, may I inquire?"

"And—all our friends would laugh. I cannot endure being laughed at."

"But you just told me they all expected it. Why should they laugh, pray tell?"

"They would not come rushing to congratulate me with a 'what-did-I-tell-you' sort of bumper that would drive me wild. And there wouldn't be a thing anybody would to talk about because they all know as much about you as I do!"

"Ah."

"And we'd just settle down right here. And that would be the end of everything."

"I thought it would be the beginning," said the young man, softly.

"It ought to be, but it wouldn't! I should all the time be thinking of the big world I had missed. And you would soon begin thinking of what you had left."

"We could see as much of the world as falls to the lot of most people, together, afterward."

"Yes, but it would be afterward, when the glamour had worn off everything."

"Is that all?"

"No, of course I've left the most important thing until the last. You—bully me so, Fred! I never could endure it. You've bossed me all my life. I'll never be able to say my soul is my own."

"Has it been as bad as that, girl?"

"Oh, of course I've liked it, so far. But—this would be different!"

The young man slid off the wall, and stood before her, hands on her shoulders.

"Then we are to be friends just as we always have been until one of us finds someone dearer, I take it? And we'll forget all about this unpleasant discussion. Come, let's go on to the end of the lane."

Ethel was immensely relieved that he took the matter so sensibly.

But as the days slipped past, she began to perceive that things were not as they once had been.

Craig came over daily, but he no longer vaulted the garden wall and marched in at the kitchen door. He came decorously, and sat in the parlor, his hat and gloves on the hall table.

He took her out frequently, but there were no delightful, enforced scurries up the enchanted lane, or tramps through the woods. Now, he consulted her wishes so solicitously that she could have wept with vexation.

Then quite suddenly he did not come at all. And Ethel knew why! It did not take her friends long to tell her.

"It is just what I wanted him to do, of course," she told herself; "now I shall feel freer to go on my own way."

And such a gay, bright way as it was! She even determined upon going out to see the world, and accepted an invitation to visit a friend in the metropolis.

It was all flattering and exciting. Even Fred and the judge's niece were at the station to see her off.

Ethel saw life at first hand. She should have been very happy. But in the midst of many excitements she found herself wondering how the moon looked on the little river at home, and if the cherry blossoms were out yet in the enchanted lane.

All the home people came to see her the evening she returned. "So it will not seem quite so dull to you after all your gaiety," they said.

And Ethel laughed and chatted and related her various experiences.

But next morning she stole up the lane—a very ordinary, unenchanted lane, now. The cherry blossoms were out. The sun shone warmly.

She reached the cleared place on the wall and attempted to climb up. The wall was too high; the stones bruised her hands. Suddenly she put her arms on the top, her face buried against them, and sobbed unreasonably.

"It's too high. I can't do it!"

Someone lifted her up, sprang up beside her, and put strong arms around her.

"Little girl, I've come to talk over those six reasons with you."

Ethel closed her eyes and held her breath for a moment of realization.

"I've found out that we do not know each other too well—that we do not even know ourselves!"

"And that there isn't any romance in the world if we haven't it.

"That experience is more bitter than sweet.

"That it doesn't make any difference what sort of expression our friends have when they congratulate us.

"That things have been about as nearly 'finished' for me lately as I care about having them.

"And that you need someone to boss you. Dear, I have one reason why you should marry me which knocks out your whole six."

"What is it?" whispered Ethel, clinging to him shamelessly.

"It is," holding her off and looking into her eyes, "that I love you."

Dear Editor—Please allow me a small space to write a few words.

We are glad to say that Rev. P. G. Maness is now improving from a case of pneumonia.

Our debating society is still improving; every one is doing their best. Last Friday week six of the seventh grade pupils debated on "Resolved, that boys have a harder time than girls." Three boys on the affirmative and three girls on the negative. The judges decided in favor of the negative, with Mr. Bert Walker as having the best speech.

Last Friday the Society met, had a good program. The debate was "Resolved that war is more destructive than whiskey." The negative won.

We were glad to have Miss Inez Hicks with us last Friday at school. She is at home spending Xmas. Come again, Inez, you are always welcome.

Mrs. Della Walker's sister is now at home on a visit. She is from Atlanta.

Miss Lena Walker, who has been teaching near Randolph, is at home this week.

Best wishes to the Press and its readers.

Heart Symptoms

The ailments of women include symptoms of heart trouble known as palpitation of the heart. The palpitation is so violent at times as to be really painful and leads the patient to fear she has heart disease. Ninety per cent of such cases are not heart disease at all but only a symptom of a liver disorder which has affected the normal action of the heart, and on applying the proper remedies the unusual throbbing ceases. The stomach and digestion need strengthening and the depressing effect of these disorders on the female organism must be corrected. For the latter purpose there is no more effective remedy to be found anywhere than

DR. SIMMONS

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape. Lawrence is detected as a spy by Captain Grant of the British Army, who agrees to a duel. The duel is stopped by Grant's friends and the spy makes a dash for liberty, swimming a river following a narrow escape. The Major arrives at the shop of a blacksmith, who is friendly, and knows the Lady of the Blended Rose. Captain Grant and rangers search blacksmith shop in vain for the spy. Lawrence joins the minute men. Grant and his train are captured by the minute men. Lawrence is made prisoner by an Indian and two white men, who lock him in a strong cell. Peter advises Lawrence not to attempt to escape as "some one" would send for him. Grant's appearance adds mystery to the combination of circumstances. Lawrence again meets the Lady of the Blended Rose, who informs him that he is in her house; and that she was in command of the party that captured him. The captive is thrust into a dark underground chamber when Captain Grant begins a search of the premises. After digging his way out, Lawrence finds the place deserted. Evidence of a battle and a dead man across the threshold, Col. Mortimer, father of the Lady of the Blended Rose, finds his home in ruins. Capt. Grant insists that Lawrence be strung up at once. Miss Mortimer appears, explains the mystery and Lawrence is held a prisoner of war. Lawrence escapes through plans arranged by the Lady and sees Grant attack Miss Mortimer. Grant is knocked out by Lawrence, who comes to Miss Mortimer's relief and then makes his escape. Captain Grant's base villainy revealed. Lawrence returns to Valley Forge, where learns more of Grant's perfidy. Washington forces Clinton to battle and Lawrence gets trace of Eric Mortimer. The battle of Monmouth.

CHAPTER XXV.—Continued.

Every man of us had a gun, officers, all. Coatless as though we came from the haying field, the perspiration streaming down our faces, we waited. The rifle barrels glowed brown in the sun, as the keen eyes took careful sight. We were but a handful, a single thin line; if the reserves failed we would be driven back by mere force of numbers, yet before we went that slope should be strewn with dead. Crashing up from the rear came Oswald with two guns, wheeling into position, the depressed muzzles spouting destruction. Yet those red and blue lines came on; great openings were ploughed through them, but the living mass closed up. They were at the fallen, beyond, when we poured our volleys into their very faces. We saw them waver as that storm of lead struck; the center seemed to give way, leaving behind a ridge of motionless bodies; then it surged forward again, led by a waving flag, urged on by gesticulating officers.

"The cavalry! The cavalry!"

They were coming around the end of the morass, charging full tilt upon the right of our line. I saw that end crumble up, and, a moment later, scarcely realizing what had occurred we were racing backward, firing as we ran, and stumbling over dead bodies.

Maxwell rallied us beyond the causeway, swearing manfully as he drove us into position behind a low stone wall. Again and again they charged us, the artillery fire shattering the wall into fragments. Twice we came to bayonets and clubbed guns, battling hand to hand, and Wayne was forced so far back upon the left, that we were driven into the edge of the wood for protection. But there we held, our front a blaze of fire. It seemed to me the horror of that struggle would never end. Such heat, such thirst, the black powder smoke in our nostrils, the dead under foot, the cries of the wounded, the incessant roar of the guns. Again and again it was hand to hand; I could scarcely tell who faced us, so fierce the melee, so suffocating the smoke; I caught glimpses of British Grenadiers, of Hessians, of Queen's Rangers. Once I thought I heard Grant's nasal voice amid the infernal uproar. Stewart and Ramsey came to our support; Oswald got his guns upon an eminence, opening a deadly fire; Livingston's regiment charged, and, with a cheer we leaned forward also, mad with the battle fever, and flung them back, back down that deadly slope. It was not in flesh and blood to stand; we cut the center like a wedge, and drove them pell-mell to where Lee had been in the morning. Here they rallied, flanked by thick woods and morasses. Too exhausted to follow, our men sank breathless to the ground.

We Were but a Handful—a Single Thin Line.

It was already sunset, and our work done. The artillery still already, and I could see long lines of troops—Poor's and the Carolina brigade—moving to the right. Night came on, however, without more fighting, and, as soon as we had recovered sufficiently, we devoted ourselves to the care of the wounded.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Road to Philadelphia.

It must have been 10 o'clock, and, if I had slept at all, I was scarcely conscious of it. All about me the men lay outstretched upon the ground, still in their shirt-sleeves, as they had fought, their guns beside them. The night was clear and hot, scarcely a breath of air moving. Here and there against the sky-line passed the dark silhouette of a sentinel. There was no sound of firing only an occasional footfall to break the silence of the night. The wounded had been taken to the field hospitals at the rear; down in our front lay the bodies of the dead, and among these shone the dim lights of lanterns where the last searching parties were yet busy at their grewsome task. I was weary enough to sleep, every muscle in my body aching with fatigue, but the excitement of the day, the possibility of the morrow, left me restless. I had received no wound, other than a light thrust with a bayonet, yet as though pummelled from head to foot. The victory was ours—the army realized this truth clearly enough; we had repulsed the red-coats, driven them back with terrible losses; we had seen their lines shrivel up under our fire, officers and men falling, and the remnant fleeing in disorder. It meant nothing now that a force outnumbering us yet remained intact, in strong position. Flushed with victory, knowing now we could meet the best of them, we longed for the morrow to come so we might complete the work.

I reviewed the vivid incidents of the day, looking up at the stars and wondered who among those I knew were yet living, who were dead. I thought of others in those lines of the enemy, whom I had known, speculating on their fate. Then along our rear came a horseman or two, riding slowly. A sentry halted them, and I arose on one elbow to listen.

"Lawrence? Yes, sir, Major Lawrence is lying over there by the big oak."

I got to my feet, as the first one approached.

"This you, Lawrence?" asked a voice I instantly recognized as Hamilton's. "You fellows all look alike tonight. Where is your horse, major?"

"I have been on foot all day, sir," I answered saluting.

"Ah, indeed; well, you will have need for a horse tonight. Wainwright," turning to the man with him, "is your mount fresh?"

"Appears to be, sir; belonged to a British dragoon this morning."

"Let Major Lawrence have him, Major, ride with me."

We passed back slowly enough toward the rear of the troops, through the field hospitals, and along the edge of a wood, where a battery of artillery was encamped. We rode boot to boot and Hamilton spoke earnestly.

"The battle is practically won, Lawrence, in spite of Charles Lee," he said soberly. "Of course there will be fighting tomorrow, but we shall have the red-coats well penned in before daybreak, and have already captured ammunition enough to make us easy on that score. Poor, and the Carolina men, are over yonder, while Woodford is moving his command to the left. At dawn we'll crush Clinton into fragments. Washington wants to send a despatch through to Arnold in Philadelphia, and I recommended you, as you know the road. He remembered your service before, and was kind enough to say you were the very man. You'll go gladly?"

"I should prefer to lead my own men tomorrow, sir."

"Pshaw! I doubt if we have more than a skirmish. Sir Henry will see his predicament fast enough. Then there will be nothing left to do, but guard prisoners."

"Very well, colonel; I am ready to serve wherever needed."

"Of course you are, man. There should not be much danger connected with this trip, although there will be stragglers in plenty. I'm told the Clinton lost more than three hundred deserters crossing Camden."

Headquarters were in a single roomed cabin at the edge of a ravine. A squad of cavalrymen were in front, their horses tied to a rail fence, but within Washington was alone, except for a single aide, writing at a table in the light of a half-dozen candles. He glanced up, greeting us with a slight inclination of the head.

"A moment, gentlemen."

He wrote slowly, as though framing his sentences with care, occasionally questioning the aide. Once he paused, and glanced across at Hamilton.

"Colonel, do you know a dragoon named Mortimer?"

"I have no recollection of ever having met the man, sir. I have written him orders, however; he is a scout attached to General Lee's headquarters."

"Yes; I recall the name. He is the one who brought us our first definite information this morning of Clinton's position. I remember now, you were not with me when he rode up—young, slender lad, with the face of a girl. I could but notice his eyes; they were as soft and blue as violets! Well, an hour ago he came here for a favor; it seems the boy is a son of Colonel Mortimer, of the queen's rangers."

"Indeed; Wayne reported the colonel killed in front of his lines."

"Not killed, but seriously wounded. The son asked permission to take him home to a place called Elmhurst near Laurel Hill."

"I know the plantation, sir," I said, my interest causing me to interrupt. "It is on the Medford road."

"Ah, you have met the lad, possibly, major," and he turned his face toward me. "The boy interested me greatly."

"No, sir; I endeavored to find him at Lee's headquarters, but failed. I have met his father and sister."

"A lovely girl, no doubt."

"To my mind, yes, sir."

His grave face lighted with a sudden smile.

"I sometimes imagine, Colonel Hamilton," he said quietly, "that this unhappy war might be very pleasantly concluded if we could only turn our young officers over to the ladies of the enemy. Would such a plan meet with your approval, major?"

"I should prefer it to the present method."

"No doubt, and Mistress Mortimer? —But let that pass, until we hold council of war upon the subject. Just now we shall have to be content with the more ordinary plans of campaign. I gave the boy permission to remove his father, and they are upon the road ere this. I would that all the British wounded had homes close at hand. You have informed the major of his mission, I presume, Hamilton, and there is nothing I need add."

"He understands clearly, sir."

"Then I will complete the letter. Be seated, gentlemen."

He wrote for several minutes steadily, once pausing to consult a map, signed the paper, and enclosed it in another sheet, across which he scratched a line of address.

"You will deliver this to General Arnold in person, major; do not spare horse-flesh. You were in the action today?"

"With Maxwell's brigade."

"That was a hard fight along the stone wall; you came out unhurt?"

"A slight bayonet wound, sir; nothing to incapacitate me from duty."

"Very well; take ten dragoons as escort. Hamilton will write you an order. I have told Arnold our victory is practically complete. Clinton may slip away in the night, for he is a wily old fox, but he has lost his power to injure us in the Jerseys. I hope to bottle him up before morning, so that any retreat will be impossible, but even if he succeeds in getting his army to the transports at Sandy Hook, he has lost prestige, and the victory is ours. Good-bye, major, and the Lord guard you on your journey."

Ten minutes later, mounted on a rangy sorrel, my dragoon escort trotting behind, I rode south on the Plattsboro road, as swiftly as its terrible condition would warrant.

The evidences of war, the wreckage of battle, were everywhere. Several times we were compelled to leap the stone walls to permit the passage of marching troops being hurried to some new position; several batteries passed us, rumbling grimly through the night, and a squadron of horse galloped by, the troopers greeting us with shouts of inquiry.

We took to the fields, but, as there seemed no end to the procession, I turned my horse's head eastward, confident we were already beyond the British rear-guard, and struck out across country for another north and south road. We advanced now at a swift trot, the sound of our horses' hoofs on the soft turf almost the only noise, and, within an hour, came again to parallel fences, and a well travelled road.

This was the road running a mile, or so, to the west of Elmhurst. It led as straight as ever toward Philadelphia, but whatever stragglers the British army had left behind would be found along here. However, they would probably be scattered fugitives, unwilling to interfere with as strong an armed party as this of mine. If I was alone it would be safer to turn aside. Then, it was a strong temptation to go over those fences to Elmhurst. It would be after daylight when we reached there; I might even get a glimpse across the apple orchard of the great white house. Would Claire be there? It seemed to me quite probable, as Eric was taking the wounded colonel home for nursing. The girl's face rose before me against the black night, and my heart beat fast. When I came back, I would ride to Elmhurst—surely she would be there then.

The sergeant touched my arm.

"Pardon me, sir, but there are horsemen ahead."

"Indeed? I was lost in thought, Conroy. Coming this way?"

"No, sir, they seem to be traveling south slowly. I noticed them first as we turned the corner back there; I could see outlines against the sky."

"How large a party? They form merely a lumping shadow to my eyes."

"Not more than three or four, sir, with a covered rig of some kind. They're halted, now; heard us coming, I reckon."

I could perceive the little group, but merely as a black smudge. Then a mounted figure seemed to detach itself from the darkness, and advance toward us.

"Halt your men, sergeant," I said quietly. "I'll ride forward and learn what the fellow wants."

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Escort.

The figure of the man approaching was hardly distinguishable, as he appeared to be leaning well forward over the saddle pommel, yet my eyes caught the glimmer of a star along a pistol barrel, and I drew up cautiously, loosening my own weapon.

"Who comes?" he questioned shortly, the low voice vibrant. "Speak quick!"

"An officer with dispatches," I answered promptly, "riding to Philadelphia—and you?"

"We are taking a wounded man home," was the reply, the speaker riding forward. "Are you Continental?"

"Yes. Major Lawrence, of Maxwell's Brigade."

"Oh!" the exclamation was half smothered, the rider drawing up his horse quickly. I could distinguish the outline of his form now, the straight, slender figure of a boy, wearing the tight jacket of a dragoon, the face shadowed by a broad hat brim.

"Unless I mistake," I ventured cordially, "you must be Eric Mortimer."

"Why do you suppose that?"

"Because while at General Washington's headquarters he mentioned that you had asked permission to take your father—Colonel Mortimer, of the Queen's Rangers—to his home at Elmhurst. You left, as I understand, an hour or two ahead of us. Am I right?"

"Yes, sir; this is Colonel Mortimer's party."

"Then, we will pass on without detaining you longer, as we ride in haste. I met your father once; may I ask if his wound is serious?"

"Serious, yes, but not mortal; he was shot in the right side when Monkton fell. His horse was hit at the same time, and the animal's death struggles nearly killed his rider. The surgeon says he may be lame for life."

I reached out my hand, and with just an instant's hesitation, he returned the clasp warmly.

"My father is suffering too much for me to ask that you speak to him, Major Lawrence," he said a little stiffly. "Perhaps later, at Elmhurst—"

"I understand perfectly," I interrupted. "You will have your hands full, I shall ride within a short distance of Elmhurst. Shall I leave word that you are coming?"

"Oh, no," quickly, his horse taking a step backward, as though to a sudden tug of the rein. "That would be useless, as there is no one there."

"Indeed! I thought possibly your sister."

The lad shook his head, glancing toward the carriage. The slight motion made me think again of the wounded man we were detaining, and reminding me as well of my own duty.

"Then good-night, sir. Sergeant, we will trot on."

The lad touched my sleeve, even as I pricked my horse with the spur, and I drew the rein taut in surprise.

"What is it?"

"Could you send your men forward and ride with me a moment? You could catch up with them easily within a mile or two. I—I have a word I wish to say to you—alone."

The voice was low, tremulous; the request one I saw no reason to refuse.

"Why, certainly. Sergeant, take your men down the road at an easy trot. I will join you presently."

They went by us like shadows, leaving a cloud of dust behind. The boy spoke a brief word to those in charge of the carriage, and it also began to move slowly forward.

"We will go ahead," he said, suiting the action to the word. "What I wish to say will not take long."

Within a minute, riding side by side our horses walking rapidly, we were out of sight of the lumping shadow of the ambulance. I glanced aside curiously at my companion, noting the outlines of his slender, erect figure, wondering vaguely what his message could be. Had Claire spoken to him of me? Was he going to tell me about his sister? We must have ridden a quarter of a mile before he broke the silence.

Herodotus a Muckraker.

Such as believe the tales of the Egyptians credible are free to accept them for history. For my own part, I propose to myself throughout my whole work faithfully to record the traditions of the several nations. The Egyptians maintain that Ceres and Bacchus preside in the realms below. They were also the first to broach the opinion that the soul of man is immortal, and that when the body dies it enters into the form of an animal which is born at the moment, thence passing on from one animal into another until it has circled through the forms of all the creatures which tenant the earth, the water and the air; after which it enters again a human frame and is born anew. The whole period of the transmigration is (they say) three thousand years. There are Greek writers—some of an earlier, some of a later date—who have borrowed this doctrine from the Egyptians and put it forward as their own. I could mention their names, but I abstain from doing so.—Herodotus.

APPROVES RULES FOR PARCEL POST

Postmaster General Issues Regulations Governing System.

WHAT MAY BE SENT BY MAIL

Gives American People Opportunity to Send Farm and Factory Products by Mail From and to Any Point in United States.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has just approved the regulations which cover in detail the articles which may or may not be sent by parcel post. These regulations are now being turned off at the government printing office on a "rush order" and they will be distributed as rapidly as possible.

The rules as to what can be sent and what cannot be sent and the instructions for the preparation of mailable articles with other "official advice" are given here as they have just been prepared by the postoffice department in Washington.

The minimum rate will be five cents for the first pound and three cents for each additional pound to any point not exceeding fifty miles from the office of mailing; the local rate, which is five cents for the first pound and one cent for additional pound, applies to all parcels the delivery of which does not involve their transportation on railway lines. The rates increase for each successive one of the eight zones, the maximum rate being twelve cents a pound, which will carry a parcel across the continent or to any of our possessions. Parcels will be limited to eleven pounds in weight and six feet in length and girth combined.

Mailable Perishable Articles.

Butter, lard and perishable articles such as fish, fresh meats, dressed fowls, vegetables, fruits, berries and articles of a similar nature that decay quickly, when so packed or wrapped as to prevent damage to other mail matter, will be accepted for local delivery either at the office of mailing or on any rural route starting therefrom. When inclosed in an inner cover and a strong outer cover of wood, metal, heavy corrugated pasteboard or other suitable material and wrapped so that nothing can escape from the package, they will be accepted for mailing to any offices within the first zone or within a radius of 50 miles. Butter, lard, or any greasy or oily substance intended for delivery at offices beyond the first zone must be suitably packed. Vegetables and fruit that do not decay quickly will be accepted for mailing to any zone if packed so as to prevent damage to other mail matter. Eggs will be accepted for local delivery when securely packed in a basket or other container. Eggs will be accepted for mailing regardless of distance when each egg is wrapped separately and packed in a container.

There is no restriction on salted, dried, smoked or cured meats and other meat products, but fresh meat in any form will be transported only within the first zone.

Parcels containing perishable articles must be marked "PERISHABLE," and articles likely to spoil within the time reasonably required for transportation and delivery will not be accepted for mailing.

Manufactured Articles.

Manufacturers or dealers intending to transmit articles in considerable quantities are asked to submit to the postmaster for approval a specimen parcel showing the manner of packing.

When sharp pointed instruments are offered for mailing, the points must be capped or encased. Blades must be bound so that they will remain attached to each other or within their handles or sockets.

Powders, pepper, snuff, or other similar powders not explosive, or any similar pulverized dry substance, not poisonous, may be sent when inclosed in cases made of metal, wood or other material to render impossible the escape of any of the contents. Flour of all kinds must be put up in such manner as to prevent the package breaking or the flour being scattered in the mails.

Queen Bees and Nursery Stock.

Queen bees, live insects, and dried reptiles may be mailed in accordance with the regulations that now apply to other classes of mail.

Seeds of fruit, nursery stock, and all other plant products for preparation may be mailed under the same conditions.

Confectionery and Soap.

Candies, confectionery, yeast cakes, soap in hard cakes, etc., must be inclosed in boxes and so wrapped as to prevent injury to other mail matter.

Sealed original packages of proprietary articles, such as soaps, tobacco, pills, tablets, etc., put up in fixed quantities by the manufacturer, and not in themselves unmailable, will be accepted for mailing when properly wrapped.

Millinery.

Fragile articles, such as millinery, toys, musical instruments, etc., and articles consisting wholly or in part of glass, or contained in glass, must be securely packed and the parcel stamped or labeled "FRAGILE."

Unmailable Matter.

The following matter is declared unmailable by law:

Matter manifestly obscene, lewd or lascivious; articles intended for preventing conception; articles intended for indecent or immoral purposes; all matter otherwise mailable by law, the outside cover or wrapper of which bears and delineation or language of a libelous, scurrilous, defamatory, or threatening character. All such matter, when deposited in a post office or found in the mails, shall be withdrawn and sent to the divisions of dead letters.

Intoxicants, Poisons and Inflammable Materials.

Spirituous, vinous, malted, fermented, or other intoxicating liquors of any kind; poisons of every kind, and articles and compositions containing poison, ponsonous animals, insects and reptiles; explosives of every kind; inflammable materials (which are held to include matches, kerosene oil, gasoline, naphtha, benzine, turpentine, denatured alcohol, etc.), infernal machines, and mechanical, chemical or other devices or compositions which may ignite of explode; disease germs or scabs, and other natural or artificial articles, compositions or materials of whatever kind which may kill, or in any wise injure another or damage the mail or other property.

Pistols, Animals and Birds.

Pistols or revolvers, whether in detached parts or otherwise; live or dead (and not stuffed) animals, birds, or poultry, except as elsewhere provided; raw hides or pelts, guano, or any article having a bad odor will not be admitted to the mails.

Treatment of Undeliverable Parcels.

Perishable matter will be delivered as promptly as possible, but if such matter can not be delivered and becomes offensive and injurious to health, postmasters may destroy it, or the injurious or offensive portions thereof.

Undeliverable perishable matter which in its nature does not become offensive or injurious to health may be delivered by postmasters to the proper local municipal authority to be distributed to hospitals, asylums or other charitable or reformatory institutions. If there is no such municipal authority, the matter may be delivered to any charitable institution or organization making application therefor. If no application is made, the matter will be destroyed at the expiration of two weeks.

Parcels Improperly Packed.

Postmasters will refuse to receive for mailing parcels not properly indorsed or packed for safe shipment.

When parcels on which the postage is wholly unpaid or insufficiently prepaid is deposited for local delivery and the sender is unknown, notice of detention need not be sent but such matter will be delivered and the deficient postage collected from the addressee by the carrier. If the addressee refuses to pay the postage the matter will be sent to the Division of Dead Letters.

Insurance on Parcels.

A mailable parcel on which the postage is fully prepaid may be insured against loss in an amount equivalent to its actual value, but not to exceed $50, on payment of a fee of ten cents in parcel post stamps, such stamps to be affixed.

When a parcel is insured, the sender will be given a receipt showing the office and date of mailing and number of the parcel.

When a return receipt is desired by the sender of an insured parcel the postmaster at the mailing office will note the request on the margin of the insurance tag, and the postmaster at the office of address will obtain from the addressee a receipt and mail it to the sender.

The liability for indemnity shall cease when delivery has been effected.

Forwarding of Parcels.

Parcels may be remailed or forwarded on the payment of additional postage at the rate which would be chargeable if they were originally mailed at the forwarding office, in which case the necessary stamps will be affixed by the forwarding postmaster. Payment must be made every time the parcel is forwarded.

Preparation for Mailing.

Parcels must be prepared for mailing in such manner that the contents can be easily examined. A parcel will not be accepted for mailing unless it bears the name and address of the sender preceded by the word "From."

In addition to the name and address of the sender, which is required, it will be permissible to write or print on the covering of a parcel, or on a tag or label attached to it, the occupation of the sender, and to indicate in a small space by means of marks, letters, numbers, names or other brief description, the character of the parcel, but ample space must be left on the address side for the full address in legible characters and for the necessary postage stamps. Inscriptions such as "Merry Christmas," "Please do not open until Christmas," "Happy New Year," "With best wishes," and the like, may be placed on the covering of the parcel in such manner as not to interfere with the address.

Distinctive Stamps.

The law requires that the postage on all matter must be prepaid by distinctive parcel post stamps affixed. Postmasters cannot receive for mailing parcels that do not bear such stamps.

Parcel post stamps are not valid for the payment of postage on matter of the first, second, and third classes, and when used for that purpose, the matter to which they are affixed shall be treated as "Held for postage."

MORGAN SOFTENS WITH AGE

Incident of the Church Collector Shows Great Banker Is Getting a Bit Milder.

John Pierpont Morgan—to give him all of his name—has softened and humanized of late years. He still has a roar that starts the ink in the office wells spouting like geysers, and can glare a hole through a chilled steel safe. But beneath the rough outer husk he is a pretty warm-hearted old man.

"He hasn't softened enough to spread," said an acquaintance, "but he is a blander banker than he used to be. The time was when solicitors, even for worthy objects, were protected by no office game law. Nowadays, if they get past the elephantine Celt at the door and attract the eye of the old man as he sits at his big desk overlooking the common corridor, they are fairly certain of a hearing. The other day a church collector ran the gauntlet, but by the time he had reached the last assistant secretary he had been reduced to a state of twittering palsy.

"'Bring him in,' Morgan ordered. The solicitor knocked-kneed his way into the presence. 'What do you want?'

"It was a study in stutters that the unfortunate offered. His cause was just, all right, but his vocal cords had jelled. Out of the mess of clicks and false starts Morgan learned that he wanted $200.

"'You should not have come to me,' said Morgan.

"The solicitor hopelessly agreed.

"'Never come in here again,' said Morgan.

"The solicitor's face brightened. That was one worry off his mind.

"'Now,' said Morgan, 'get out. Here is $500.'"—Chicago News.

THE ONLY PLACE

Mrs. Wigger (during quarrel)—I'm tired of it all. I'm going where I'll never see man's face.

Mrs. Wagger (coolly)—You're rather young to enter "the Old Woman's home."

GETTING IT DEFINED.

Old Newton, a well-known London magistrate, once had a crazy street-preacher before him, charged with obstructing the thoroughfare. He saw that he was a harmless imbecile, and, being a kind-hearted man, did not feel like punishing him, so he said: "Of course we can't have thoroughfares obstructed in this way; but if you can give me the name of a friend who will be your surety that there will be no recurrence of this nuisance, I'll discharge you." "I have no friends," said the man, "save the Lord!" "Quite so," said old Newton; "but I mean a friend who is a householder in London." "The Lord," said the man, "is everywhere." "Certainly, certainly," said Newton, as he took a fresh pinch of snuff and twisted up his brow; "but I must trouble you for a surety of—well, of what I might call a more settled residence."

PROVIDING INSPIRATION.

"I want you to write me a play," said the great manager.

"On any especial line?"

"Yes. I have a lot of good press notices about some shows of mine that failed last season. They're too good to waste and I want you to write me up a drama that will fit them."

CAN SHE DO IT.

Zoology Professor—Miss Flirt, what is natural selection?

Flirt—Natural selection is when a young lady picks a fellow with lots of money and marries him.

THE CAUSE.

"In attempting to return thanks for the unexpected tribute of his companions, it was a pity that Hopkins went all to pieces."

"Yes, he was all broken up."

The disposition of the "big" dailies to boost Oscar Underwood and Henry Clayton for cabinet officers should be discouraged. Of course each of them is fully capable of filling any place to which they may be appointed, but who would fill their places if they are relieved of their present positions?

Underwood is a much bigger man as Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee than he could ever hope to be as Secretary of the Treasury; Clayton is a profound lawyer but he graces the chairmanship of one of the most important committees in the house—the Judiciary committee—and can accomplish vastly more as the head of that committee than he could hope to accomplish as Attorney General. We need them both right where they are; so does President elect Wilson.

IN MEMORY

Of Mrs. Eliza Harrison, who departed this life Thursday December 5th, 1912. 'Tis sad to give up our loved ones but God's will be done. She lived to a ripe old age; was 85 years of age October last; she was a devoted Christian; a member of Samaria Baptist church. Though she is gone, she is only sleeping in the arms of Jesus. Her memory will be with us until we shall meet her where there will be no more parting or tears.

She leaves one son and two daughters and a number of grandchildren and friends to mourn her loss. She was laid to rest at Samaria cemetery Friday, December 6th, with Rev. A. L. Foshee officiating.

'The depths of Joy, can never be found
That come to one, whose soul is white.
By being washed in Jesus' blood,
And death is not dark but bright.

DISCUSSION

The discussion of public questions is essential to public progress. Discussion stimulates thought, and when people think satisfactory results will follow, though mistakes may be made in the process.

Most of the mistakes are due to the ignorant, or to the untruthful, or to the selfish, agitator; the individual seeking personal advancement at the expense of public sacrifice. He is untrue to the people.

No honest public servant, such as the L. & N., objects to a discussion of public questions. But it is necessary that the discussion be conducted in the right spirit. And the right spirit is not a spirit of hostility.

The L. & N. encourages—welcomes—a discussion of its relations towards the people of Alabama. We realize that the more men think the more intelligent they become; the more intelligent they become the more capable of right action they become. But the L. & N. does object if it, a public service organization, is attacked as a public enemy. It resents, and will exert its every effort to refute, any unfair, untruthful assertions purporting to be facts which are detrimental to the esteem in which the L. & N. is held by the people.

The L. & N. has faith in the people to whom it supplies satisfactory freight and passenger service at reasonable rates. If the people have just cause for complaint, and will co-operate with the L. & N. to correct the error, the error will not only be promptly corrected, but the L. & N. will be appreciative to the public for suggesting the increased efficiency.

The road-bed of the L. & N. is second to none in the country. Its rolling stock (passenger and freight cars, engines, etc.) are the best that trained mechanics can devise and money buy. These things make for economy in operation and increased ability to render satisfactory service.

We state these self-evident facts to a fair minded people who realize that any unfair attack on the L. & N. is detrimental to the best interests of the general public.

The Love Letters of a Confederate General

WE begin in the November issue a series of real love-letters written over fifty years ago by one of our national heroes to his sweetheart during the period of '61 to '65. This great general will go down to posterity as having accomplished one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the world. He was as great a lover as he was a general, therefore these letters combine authentic history and exquisite romance. They sound a human note that no other work of literature has done in a decade; it is war, it is romance, it is history, it is literature. You simply can't afford to miss this wonderful series—an inside story of the Civil War now published for the first time and containing all the freshness of a contemporary happening. These letters will grip you hard, and hold your interest from first to last. Fill out the coupon and send it now before you forget it.
